NNCC sets fall registration

Humboldt County residents are sure to find a course or two of interest to them on the new Northern Nevada Community College schedule.

The college will open its doors for fall registration Aug. 30 from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Aug. 31 from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The course schedule will appear in the Aug. 18 issue of The Humboldt Sun and will also be mailed to all Humboldt County residents on that date.

Financial Aid Director John Williams will be at the center on Aug. 31 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Students needing financial aid should call the center, 623-4824, as soon as possible and make an appointment to see Williams.

All students anticipating signing up for either English or math for the first time need to take the appropriate placement test. Tests may be taken at the college center between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Students are strongly urged to call the center and make arrangements to take tests well in advance of registration.

Certain high school juniors and seniors may enroll in a limited number of college courses each semester. A written recommendation from the principal is required. If you have a 2.5 grade point average or higher, you may enroll for a maximum of two courses per semester during your senior year. Juniors must limit themselves to one course each semester, and it must be an occupational or community service class.

The college offers a variety of self-paced courses including business, economics, electronics, history, humanities, business law, math, office administration, word processing, sociology and American short story. These courses offer working adults flexible scheduling and takes into account individual differences in background and motivation.

Course requirements for the Associate of Arts, Associate of Science, Associate of Applied Science and Associate of General Studies, as well as several one-year certificates are offered at Northern Nevada Community College-Winnemucca Center. Students have a number of choices of classes in English, math and science, U.S. and Nevada constitutions, social sciences, fine arts and humanities and electives in order to complete their degrees.

The college is offering several new computer classes, including one for those who are afraid to touch the keyboard. In this class students will learn some basics in both the IBM compatible and Apple computers. Be sure and check the schedule for the computer class that is just right for you.

Do you experience conflict in your work place? Joyce Neary will help you develop creative skills necessary to resolve those conflicts in her conflict resolution workshop. Perhaps you want to improve your leadership skills. Then the two-day effective community leadership workshop is for you. Do you want to try your hand at creative cooking? This, first in a series, class will explore foods and food habits of different cultures. Students will enjoy the hands-on oriental wok cooking experience. Home owners will be thrilled with the two-day landscape design class taught by horticulturists Dr. Wayne Johnson and Dick Post from UNR.

The causes and effects of World War II continue to engender interest to this day. For a better understanding of the monumental event spend Wednesday nights in Jack Bullock's World War II history class.

A number of new courses are included on the schedule this semester, as well as the old familiar stand-bys. The college is anxious to serve the community and welcomes anyone to come in and inquire about the programs.

NNCC fall schedule released

Northern Nevada Community College's Ely center has released its fall schedule.

"Many new and interesting classes have been added along with the courses that have been offered in the past," an NNCC spokesman said. "NNCC offers several two-year degrees and urges interested students to stop by and check in to our curricula."

Mining, pre-nursing and prison employment classes also are offered to provide educational skills for those occupations for local students who do not wish to leave Ely.

Classes added to the Fall 1989 class schedule include:

HUMANITIES

Ellie Dickenson, instructor for the three-credit course, said, "This class offering is a first for me to be teaching. I am really excited about both the theme of the class (the passage of the hero in mythology, folk legends and literature) and the reading materials and videos we will work with during the course of this semester. If you are not already familiar with Joseph Campbell, you will have a rare opportunity to read and watch this perhaps greatest 'spiritual' thinker and writer of our times as he guides us through a journey into our cultural past. When asked why do you need to study mythology?, Campbell answered, that the remnants of all that 'stuff line the walls of our interior system of belief, like shards of broken pottery in an archaeological site."

FURNITURE RESTORATION

Sean Pitts will be the instructor for this one-credit, seven-week community service class. Students will take this beginning course in basic antique restoration including

Ely D.T. 8/3/89

methods for cleaning, refinishing and treating antique furniture. Also methods for researching, dating and revitalizing antique wood will be taught.

VOCAL PERFORMANCE WORKSHOP

This two-day class will be taught by Joyce Shaw from Elko. Students will receive group and individual instruction, or may observe others in action. The workshop is geared to prepare students for college auditions, to enhance their public performance, or just for fun.

SPEECH

Recent statistics indicate that many people's biggest fear is having to speak in public. But many are finding that they are being called upon more and more in both personal and career situations to use good communications skills.

The Ely Center registers for classes on Aug. 23 and Sept. 6, from 2:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Each credit costs $20.

NNCC READY

Registration for Fall at Northern Nevada Community College - Ely-Center. This will be the 2nd registration held on Sept. 6th from 2:30 p.m. until 7:30 p.m. Among our exciting one-day classes is a Horse Training class given by Jeff Spencer of Southern Utah State. This class is offered for adults or children, for 0 credit or 1 credit. The fee is $20. Bring your horse and learn how to put a good rein on him or work those problem areas. Jeff will make this clinic as personal as possible working one on one.

NNCC Child Center registration slated

Registration for Northern Nevada Community College's Child Center is scheduled from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. next Wednesday at the center, reports the center's director, Marilee Harper.

Harper explained the child center offers six different class options to fit the varying schedules of local parents, including three classes meeting twice a week, two classes meeting three times a week and a class for three-year-olds that meets once a week.

The three-year-old class is scheduled to meet from 11:15 to 1:15 Thursday and costs $90 a semester.

Preschool classes on the twice-a-week option are from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays, from 11:15 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays and from 11:15 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. on Tuesdays and Fridays. Cost of the twice-a-week classes are $180 a semester.

The three-times-a-week classes will meet from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays and from 1:45 to 3:45 p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays. Cost for these classes are $270 a semester.

Harper said the philosophy of the NNCC Child Center is "Children learn best from hands-on experience." Working as a team, she added, the child center's staff strives to provide the best possible pre-school experience.

She invited those wanting further information to contact her at the college, 738-8493, extension 225.

NNCC slates registration

Registration for classes at Northern Nevada Community College will be held from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at Berg Hall.

Joyce Shaw, a spokesman for NNCC, said a variety of classes is scheduled for the fall term, including new programs for health care professionals. In addition to classes in agriculture, computers, journalism, criminal justice and other academic subjects, NNCC will be offering several vocational programs.

This fall the college also has scheduled some "fun" classes including stained glass, breadmaking, golf, karate, weightlifting, yoga and dancercise.

Shaw said anyone wanting additional information about registration or the class schedule should call the school at 738-8493.

Students unable to register on the scheduled days should contact the college for late registration dates, she added.

The time for NNCC is now.

This is a time of great opportunity for those of us who live in the NNCC service area. As the song goes, "Good times never seemed so good."

Students at NNCC can get a classy education without an expensive ticket.

This Fall NNCC is expecting more than 1,200 students. Founded in 1967, NNCC was designated to serve first and second-year baccalaureate students, and to provide occupational and developmental education. NNCC also offers extensive community service and continuing education.

At NNCC some of the area's brightest students will be enrolling in liberal arts classes. The college is justly proud of its rapidly expanding technical programs, many of which are based on partnerships with industry. And we believe nobody does better teaching in developmental education.

We're working hard to help Nevadans build futures and enrich their lives.

Registration slated next week at NNCC

Registration for the spring semester at Northern Nevada Community College is slated from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday in Berg Hall.

Classes will commence Jan. 16.

Charles Greenhaw, a spokesman for the college, said the pre-semester advisement period will continue through Tuesday. Students who need information about courses can make an appointment with an adviser by calling the college at 738-8493.

Greenhaw said the spring schedule will include about 275 courses. He said a full range of classes will be available.

The college offers a variety of one-year certificate programs in occupational education and four two-year associate degrees.

Students planning to transfer to a university to pursue an Associate of Arts or Associate of Science degree may study toward the Associate of Applied Science degree, he noted. Students in the occupational programs also can work toward future degrees, Greenhaw added. The Associate of General Studies degree is awarded to persons who study a broad non-specialized curriculum, he explained.

UNR master's degree registration Wednesday

Registration for the first two classes in the University of Nevada Reno master's degree program in Educational Leadership will be held from 4 to 6 p.m. Wednesday in rooms eight and nine of Berg Hall at Northern Nevada Community College.

Dr. George Foidesy, chairman of the educational leadership department at UNR, will be on hand to answer questions, according to Pat Warren, director of continuing education at NNCC.

Credits will be transferable exactly as if they were taken on the UNR campus because the courses will be taught directly through UNR, she explained and added special arrangements will be made for students from outlying areas.

The first three-credit course offered will be a seminar in Community College Administration taught by Dr. Charles Greenhaw from 4 to 7 p.m. Thursdays.

The second class, School Law, taught by Foidesy, has been tentatively scheduled for 4 to 10 p.m. Fridays and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays for three weekends.

Tuition, due on Wednesday, will be $50 per graduate credit and additional "delivery cost" fees will be charged all students on the first day of class. These fees will pay for teachers' "overload" salaries, travel and per diem expenses, which have been spread over the entire program, Warren explained. Right now there will be an additional charge of $30 per credit to cover delivery costs unless more than 15 students enroll. In that event, fees will be reduced.

Warren has copies of the budget with cost breakdowns for anyone who has questions. More information is available from her at 738-8493, ext. 231.

NNCC class registration slated Monday, Tuesday

Northern Nevada Community College registration opens Monday. The registration period is 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, although late registration is permitted.

Complete information on registration procedures can be found in the "Fall Announcements and Course Roster" mailed to area residents.

The college expects about 2,500 students to begin registering for the fall semester next week. About half the students will enroll at Elko and the other half at the college's Winnemucca and Ely student centers and other off-campus sites.

The projection of a fall enrollment of 2,500 is a head-count figure, explains Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction. He said the full-time-equated (FTE) enrollment is expected to be between 675 and 700. The FTE is derived by dividing the total number of credits students register for by 15, the benchmark student-credit load used by the University of Nevada System to define a full-time student.

Included in the college's fall enrollment will be:

- An expanded nursing program with 26 students at Elko and Ely.
- A mechanical technology program supported by mining companies and equipment vendors with 32 students enrolled.

- An expanded developmental education program to prepare students for entry into freshman classes.

• "Early studies" students from Elko and Wells High School who will enroll in college composition, history and music courses. About 75 are anticipated.

Many NNCC students will follow a national trend by enrolling in general education arts and science, Greenhaw said, noting the field includes courses ranging from biology to history and from psychology to geology.

These students will be pursuing associate of arts or science degrees and most will eventually complete a four-year degree at a university or the University of Nevada Reno General Studies degree, which may be completed locally. Business courses will continue to be popular, the college expects.

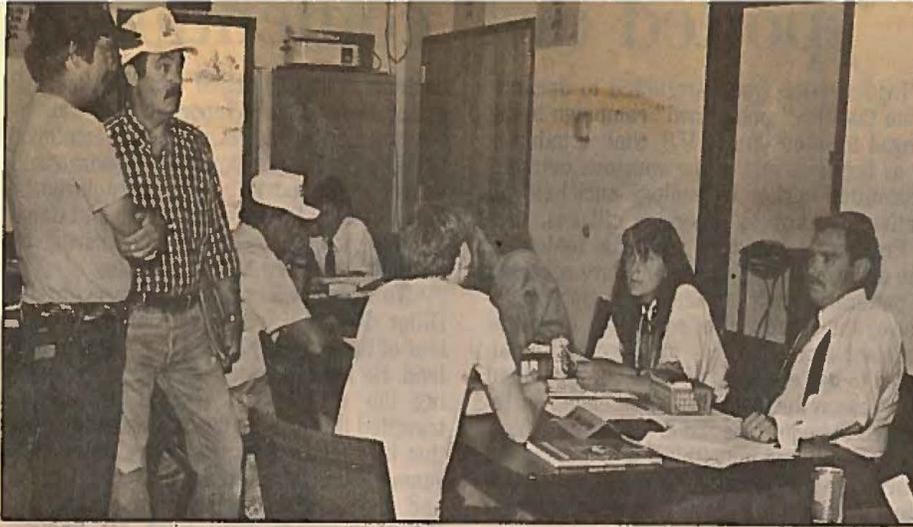

NNCC has scheduled three special courses for persons wishing to qualify as substitute teachers for the Elko County School District. And new to this semester's schedule will be evening courses in automotive technology.

The college's special writing workshops will continue this fall with writers Robert Laxalt, Bob Sherwood and Rebecca Wells making presentations on writing a short novel, script writing and nature writing.

Greenhaw notes University of Nevada System spokesmen have recently found the system to be the fastest growing in the nation, and he points out NNCC's rate of growth is the greatest in the system. The system enfolds Reno and Las Vegas university campuses and community colleges in Reno, Carson City and Las Vegas, in addition to NNCC.

EDFP 8/24/90

Registration: It was a record-breaking day as 750 students registered for classes yesterday at Northern Nevada Community College, stated Stan Aiazzi, dean of student services. The amount was about 150 over the previous high-volume day. A large percentage of the students are university bound and are taking their core courses here, Aiazzi said, noting the developmental classes are filling rapidly and several already are closed. The official registration continues today until 8 p.m.; however, students may register from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily for the remainder of the week.

NNCC national finalist in publications contest

One of Northern Nevada Community College's tabloid publications (last fall's class schedule) was selected as one of the three best in a national contest and will be featured in a nationally distributed videocassette, announces Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction at NNCC and editor of the tabloid.

It was chosen by the National Council for Marketing and Public Relations, an affiliate of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges. One of the top three will be given the association's Paragon Award at its annual conference and workshop in Washington, D.C.,

March 26.

Joyce Shaw, who did the designing, the layout and contributed some articles to the schedule, will represent NNCC at the conference.

Shaw is responsible for all of the college tabloids, its catalog and other special projects publications.

She says Rod Crouch of the Elko Daily Free Press, Barbara Mead and cover designer Rhonda Fogo of Salt Lake City all advise and help her with the publications and Lynn Rubel, formerly of Northeastern Nevada Museum helped select photographs for the cover, which featured women last fall.

students have never really worked in a formal job market, and for being thrown into a new job with other experienced workers, they are doing well."

An additional twenty-five to thirty individuals will be selected for the next training session to begin in June. Cook said that the mines hope to get a large number of applicants for the program, and are looking forward to the second session.

Students interested in applying for the earn-while-you-learn program should contact their high school counselors or should call either Cliff Ferry or Stan Popeck at NNCC, 738-8493.

Graduating high school seniors are reminded that applications for the Mechanical Technology Training Program are due at Northern Nevada Community College by March 15.

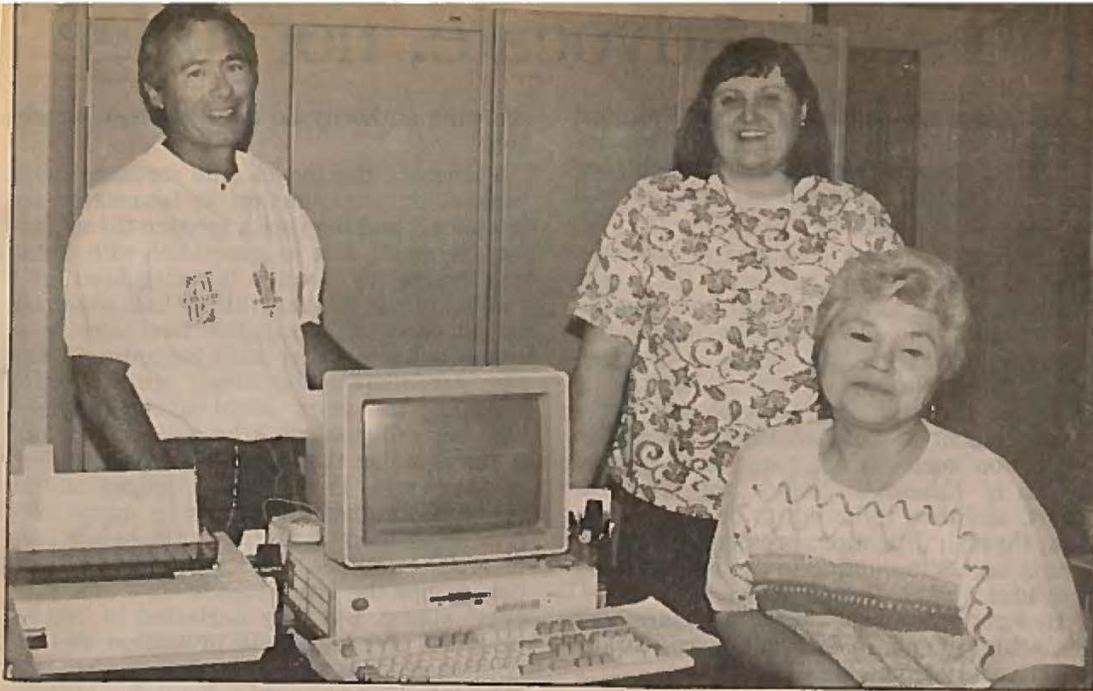

The scholarship program in diesel and mill technology is sponsored by Manpower Training Cooperative, Inc., a consortium of area mining and mining-related companies, including Newmont Gold, Barrick-Goldstrike, Dee Gold, Marigold Mining, Pioneer Equipment, and Round Mountain Gold.

Last June, the introductory program began and 32 students were enrolled, according to Dee Gold General Manager Dave Cook. Currently 28, of the 32, are still enrolled. The students are from Elko, Carlin, Ely, Round Mountain and Winnemucca. "The program has gone well in general, and the students are gradually improving as they become more familiar with the workplace," said Cook.

The Mechanical Technology Training Program is a two-year program of work and study, with students earning entry level wages during work sessions at the various mine sites. The sponsoring companies pay tuition and fees for the time in training at NNCC, as well as other scholarship monies.

Cook said he was very pleased with the current students. "These

Prepared to answer questions about Northern Nevada Community College's telephone registration system are Stan Aiazzi, dean of students; Joyce Shaw, graphic designer and writer, center; and Sue Alexander, student services program assistant.

Touch-tone phones used in NNCC fall registration

Fall registration for Northern Nevada Community College courses can be made via touch-tone telephone until Aug. 27, announced Stan Aiazzi, dean of students. The number is 753-2100.

New students will not be able to use the system until they have filled out basic information forms. Late registrations also may be made on campus from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Aug. 28 and 29. Late fees will be assessed at that time; fee receipts will not be mailed, but can be obtained at the college.

Valerie Easterly, NNCC director of planning and public information, said touch-tone phones make audible beeps when numbers are punched. If no sound is heard, the phone is rotary and the system will not work.

To accommodate those who need assistance, "Academic Advisement Day" is slated from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Aug. 22 in Berg Hall. Students may come to the college that day to talk with representatives from each NNCC department. They will also be given information on how class credits transfer to other institutions, selecting majors, planning schedules and choosing goals.

The system, though, is unable to make schedule changes or inform students about multiple course sections. It won't register students who want to audit classes and it won't tell what prerequisites are required for courses. It is not equipped for hearing-impaired students.

Aiazzi emphasized there will continue to be people available for students who feel uncomfortable with the new system. "NNCC is actually the last of Nevada's two universities and four community colleges to implement centralized computing, but the University of Nevada system is one of the first educational institutions in the country to be so equipped."

Nevada's program is called Student Information Systems (SIS) and contains the records of students in all six state institutions.

Aiazzi and Madeline Ashworth, manager of data processing services, started training a year and a half ago. They spent a semester setting up 800 data bank "tables" for NNCC's registration process, including the records of all students enrolled at the school since its inception more than 20 years ago.

"We tried out the phones the first time May 1 for summer registration," Aiazzi noted. "It worked beautifully."

"People anywhere in the world can register for NNCC classes via touch-tone telephones. They can also drop classes and find out in which classes they are enrolled."

With the new system, Aiazzi explained, students will have more time to register. The class schedule, which is slated to be mailed soon, is available at NNCC.

Joyce Shaw, NNCC graphic designer and writer, suggests students have alternate classes planned before dialing.

A work sheet will be included with the schedules so students can prepare for questions the automatic voice will ask. The work sheet will have instructions for registering, but information also is available at NNCC Student Services between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. five days a week. The number is 753-8493.

Fees must be paid by 5 p.m. on the last day of registration; a "drop box" will be provided at the college. No bills will be sent except for underpayments; overpayments and dropped-class fees will be refunded almost immediately.

If payment is not received on time, enrollments will be "purged" from the system, Aiazzi warned.

In the future, the computer will be used for other things at NNCC. For example, a degree-audit system will permit students to find out how close they are to graduation and what classes will be required if majors should be changed. He said the computer can also "track" alumni and take orders for transcripts.

The computerization of the financial aid department is being worked on by Ashworth and department chairman Joan Williams. When it is complete, students will be able to come into the financial aid office to find out about federal grants, awards or other assistance.

No Registration Lines At NNCC Starting This Year

Northern Nevada Community College has a new computerized registration system. Instead of standing in endless lines, students can now register for classes by telephone.

Touch registration, according to Dean of Students, Stan Aiazzi, is possible from any touch-tone phone. Registration is open from July 1st through August 27th for fall semester. The idea behind this change is to make registration convenient for students who live outside of the Elko area and for those who cannot get away from work to register.

Students new to NNCC will still have to register in person. Aiazzi said, "Brand new students will have to come in and fill out a form so that we can get them into the computer. Once they are in the computer, they can register by phone," said Aiazzi.

Touch registration is a simple process for those with class schedules and touch-tone phones. "Rotary phones won't work with this system," Aiazzi explained. A touch-tone phone is one with a keypad that makes a single tone for each key pressed. All pay phones are touch-tone. Aiazzi said there will be a bank of phones in the NNCC Berg Hall lobby for registration use.

Class schedules which contain complete touch registration instructions will be mailed out early next week. Class credit hour fees have increased from $24 to $26 per credit. Students are encouraged to complete the touch registration worksheet prior to calling the registration number, 753-2100. "If they fill out the worksheet and use it when they call, it follows the same sequence of questions they will be asked by the computer," said Aiazzi.

Touch registration is available Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday from noon to 10 p.m. and Sunday noon to 6 p.m. until August 27th. After August 27th, late registration must be done in person, and there is a $5 per day late fee. Late registration will only be available August 28 and 29th from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Classes begin the week of September 3rd. After registration closes, any class cancellations will be posted at NNCC and will appear on the Elko Channel, which is 32 on Elko's cable system.

For students who need to see an advisor about their schedules prior to registering, an advisement day will be provided on August 22nd in Berg Hall. "We will have representatives from each of the instructional areas in room 7 of Berg Hall to advise students," said Aiazzi.

Some of the information which the registration worksheet asks for includes, student's social security number, birth date, class 5 digit numbers, and total fees. Students must pay for their classes by 5 p.m. on August 27th, or their schedules will be removed from the computer. Checks should be made payable to the Board of Regents. In order to verify their registration, students can either call Student Services, or the touch system. The computer will tell the student, after he or she has punched in the social security number, whether they are registered for classes.

The touch system will not: accept changes, check for open sections, check for prerequisites, list fees owed, allow special class registration, allow registration for more than 18 credit hours without permission, register students for zero credit community service classes, allow students to register who are on financial, academic, or administrative hold. For any of these situations, or if students receive financial aid, they must contact the office of Student Services before attempting to register.

Aiazza said the touch system is a simple and convenient way to register, but if any problems occur, students should call 738-8493 for assistance. The schedule will provide specific instructions on the touch system, as well as a complete catalog of classes offered, added Aiazzi.

Sue Alexander, Program Assistant, and Richard McNally, English Instructor, are using the touch system computer.

ABUSE IN PERSPECTIVE—Northern Nevada Community College will play host next Friday, Aug. 18, to an all-day "Abuse in Perspective" conference. Sponsored by the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation, the conference is designed to focus on fetal, maternal and child abuse. Guest speakers for the event are William Durfee, M.D., a board-certified child psychologist; and Dianne Tilton-Durfee, director of the International Child Abuse Network (ICAN). Sessions are scheduled on "Pregnancy In Crisis"; "Drugs and Alcohol: Impact on Labor and Delivery"; "Social Impact on the Pregnant Abuser: Fetal Abuse Equals Child Abuse"; "Addictive Pregnancy"; "Child Abuse in the Community"; and "Where Do We Start In Nevada?" Organizers said the objectives of the conference are to identify tools which can be used to screen high-risk pregnancies for signs of abuse, to determine how to utilize resources in the community, and to identify the necessity of developing a community networking system. Fee for the conference—which is open to any person interested in halting substance abuse by pregnant women—is $50, which includes lunch and an information packet. Additional details are available by phoning 323-4107. E. Ind. 8/9/89

Range Conservationist Set To Speak At College

Roy Kaiser, a range conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service, will speak at the next meeting of the Northeastern Nevada Naturalists, scheduled next Tuesday, Aug. 15, at 7 p.m. in the conference room at Berg Hall on the Northern Nevada Community College campus.

All persons interested in range conservation are invited to attend Kaiser's presentation, which will include samples of common shrubs and trees found in the floodplain of the Humboldt River, through the mid-elevations, and up to the hill and mountain zones.

Kaiser is expected to discuss distribution of the shrubs and trees, plant characteristics for field identification, poisonous characteristics, and their general importance. The range conservationist will also answer questions pertaining to the plants and ecological areas of the desert zone.

Kaiser—who holds Associate and Bachelor of Science degrees in forest management—has, since 1982, held the position of inter-field-office range conservationist for Elko, Eureka and White Pine counties.

Kaiser's presentation is offered at no charge, and the public is invited to attend.

Abuse conference set for Friday at NNCC

A conference on child abuse is scheduled for Friday at Northern Nevada Community College if enough people register. Sponsored by the March of Dimes, the all-day event will focus on fetal, maternal and child abuse.

A spokesman for workshop said this morning unless more registrations are received right away the conference may have to be canceled. She said anyone wanting to attend should call 1-323-4107.

Tamara Lieberman of the March of Dimes said Dr. Michael Durfee and Dianne Tilton Durfee will be two of the speakers for the "Abuse in Perspective Conference." Dr. Durfee is a certified child psychiatrist and Dianne Durfee is director of the International Child Abuse Network.

The morning session of the conference will include "Pregnancy in Crisis" by Vickie Hamilton, R.N.; "Drug and Alcohol: Impact on Labor and Delivery" by Peggy Williamson; and "Social Impact on the Pregnant Abuser, Fetal Abuse = Child Abuse" by Dr. Durfee. The spokesman said Durfee and Williamson's presentations will be videotapes of talks at a conference in Reno.

During the afternoon session Patricia A. Peer, R.N., will discuss "Addictive Pregnancy" and Dianne Durfee will speak via videotape on "Child Abuse in the Community."

Lieberman said the objectives of the conference are to identify tools which can be used to screen high risk pregnancies for abuse, to determine how to utilize resources in the community and to identify the necessity of developing a networking system in the community.

The cost of the conference is $50 and is open to anyone exposed to or involved with pregnant women, she noted. People wanting more information on the conference can call the March of Dimes office in Reno at 323-4107, she added.

Center schedules workshop on stress

A workshop for health care professionals who want to learn behavioral strategies and clinical skills that help to moderate and divert work-related stress has been slated for Sept. 28.

The workshop is sponsored by Northeastern Nevada Area Health Education Center Inc. (AHEC) and will be presented by Carole Pozzi from Reno. Pozzi is affiliated with a private counseling practice where she does individual and family therapy. She also teaches classes in Health Education at the University of Nevada Reno and has written a book on communication skills.

Karen Kimber, the education coordinator at AHEC, said pre-registration is encouraged. The workshop will cost $16 if registration is received by Sept. 21. Those missing the early deadline will be charged $32 for the workshop, she noted. Scholarships are available for anyone who is unable to pay the fee, Kimber said, but applications must be obtained by Sept. 21.

Kimber said there will be two sessions of the four-hour workshop. One session will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and the second from 5 to 9 p.m. The workshops will be held in the conference room at Berg Hall on the Northern Nevada Community College campus.

The coordinator said the workshop will help health professionals understand psychological factors that contribute to an increase in stress, and will help them identify and deal with harassment.

The workshop will also help people deal more effectively with job burnout or unmanageable work stress, Kimber said, and will help people in the health professions identify personal strategies that alleviate job stress.

The workshop is worth four units of continuing education for nurses, Kimber said. Credit for EMT's, respiratory therapists, dieticians, social workers and nursing assistants is pending, she added.

Kimber said people can contact her at 738-3828 for more information on the workshop.

EMPOWERING PEOPLE

This prize-winning musical comedy/documentary is about three native American sisters growing up in Brooklyn during the 1930's and 1940's. In a presentational style rich in humor and with an elemental power that recalls the spirit of American Indian myths, the film blends documentary, musical theater, and personal memoir. Shifting back and forth between these contrasting perspectives, the film interweaves these narrative fragments into a single collective story, not only of one very unique family living in New York but of all families everywhere.

During the course, instructors Dr. Wayne Johnson and Richard Post from the University of Nevada, Reno, and Jay Davison, horticulture specialist for northeastern Nevada, will help local residents plan an attractive, practical landscape design for their property. Discussed will be how to combine trees, shrubs and plants that will thrive in the Elko area with patios, walks, borders and irrigation systems. Emphasis will be placed on conserving water through mulching techniques and selection of trees and plants for arid regions. Participants will receive literature for future reference. Novelist slates NNCC literacy lecture Friday Novelist Dr. Robert Oliphant is scheduled to present a lecture on literacy at 5:30 Friday afternoon at Northern Nevada Community College. The two-hour lecture will be held in Berg Hall.

Oliphant is a researcher in the field of college writing and reading. He is currently on a year's sabbatical from California State University at Northridge, where he is a professor of English. He wrote the novel, A Piano for Mrs. Cimino, which was made into a movie starring Bette Davis.

According to Dr. Charles Greenhaw, NNCC dean of instruction, the lecturer is a humorous and down-to-earth speaker. "His pathfinding work on literacy has a great deal of relevance for anyone interested in education," the NNCC dean said.

Oliphant has been commissioned by the California attorney general to expand his cultural literacy programs being used successfully in the California prison system.

Greenhaw said students at NNCC can register for a one-credit class on Friday or from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday. The class fee will be $20.

The public is invited to the lecture, Greenhaw said. There will be no admission charge.

NNCC paper-making course date changed

The date for a weekend workshop on paper making and mold making has been changed to Oct. 27-28, reports Sarah Sweetwater, head of the art department at Northern Nevada Community College.

This will be a "team teaching" endeavor with Carys Hamer instructing in paper making methods and Sweetwater teaching mold making. As a group, students will use their paper to cast a life-size mold of an Indian and will, as individuals, cast smaller molds they have made or brought to class.

The Basket Making/Paper Making class taught by Hamer also needs clarification, she says. It will be taught from 7 to 10 p.m. for three weeks on Mondays beginning Oct. 16.

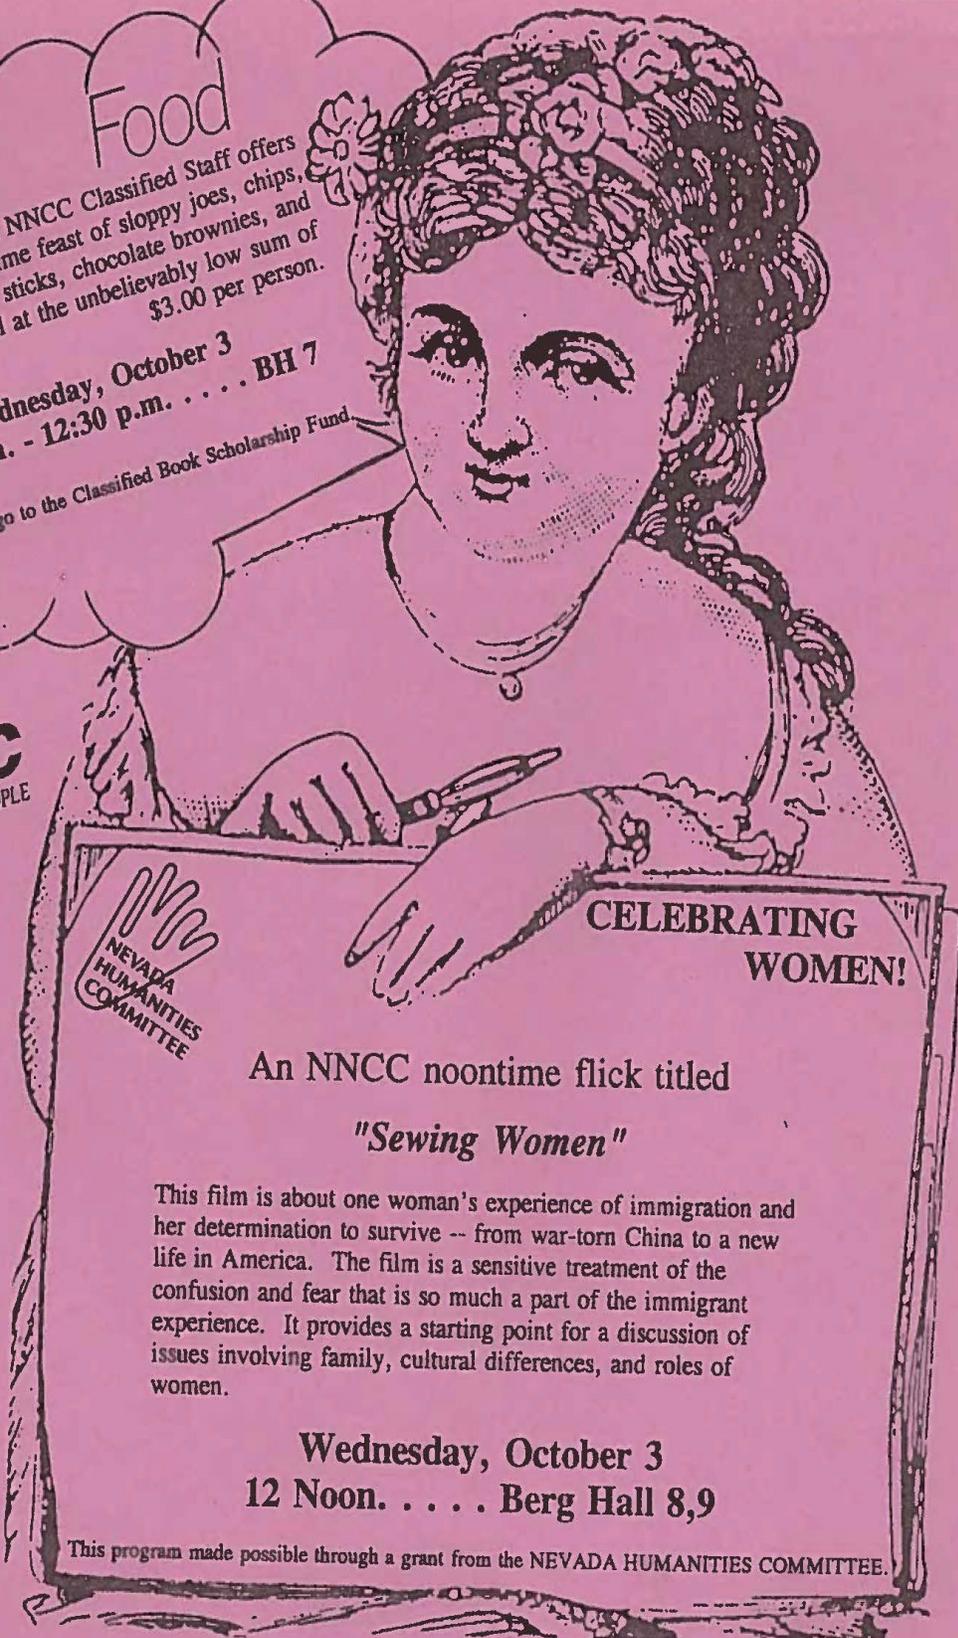

She says Hamer will teach this course in three steps: students will learn how to make baskets; then they will learn how to make paper; and finally they will cast the paper on the baskets. The result will be "a new art form — one that is now being seen in San Francisco and other art meccas in the world," Sweetwater explains.

NNCC offers October class in computers

"Microcomputers in Education: Computer Applications" (CI 432/632) is a course offered to all Elko area educators this month through the University of Nevada Reno.

The class will investigate uses of microcomputers and computer applications in the field of education. The course will be held Oct. 27 and 28, Nov. 17 and 18 and Dec. 8 and 9, Fridays from 4-10 p.m. and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the computer lab at Elko High School.

The fee for the three-credit course is $120 for undergraduate and $150 for graduate credit.

The instructor for the course is Lamont Johnson. He is a professor with the curriculum and instruction department at the university.

To register, interested persons may contact Elko's university community coordinator, Juanita Karr, Northern Nevada Community College, 901 Elm St., Elko; 738-8493.

Class slated for Carlin

Northern Nevada Community College has scheduled a computer class at Carlin High School beginning Nov. 1.

Jim Karr is slated to instruct the class, Appletworks, that will meet from 4 to 7 p.m. on Wednesdays. The three-credit class will cost $60.

Appletworks, a college spokesman explained, is an integrated software package that runs an Apple IIe computer. The package includes word processing, spreadsheets and database applications.

Hypnosis classes taught this weekend at NNCC

Classes in self-hypnosis will be taught at Northern Nevada Community College Friday and Saturday by Don Spencer, director of the Twin Falls Sawtooth Hypnosis Center in Twin Falls, Idaho, announces Pat Warren, director of continuing education.

Friday evening, Stop Smoking Through Self Hypnosis will be taught from 6 to 7:30 and Weight Control Through Self Hypnosis will be taught from 8 to 9:30.

On Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Spencer will teach Learning Self Hypnosis.

Spencer is president of the Hypnotism Training Institute and is certified as a hypnosis/hypnotherapy teacher through the American Council of Hypnotist Examiners. He has been teaching classes at the College of Southern Idaho since 1987 and special programs in Twin Falls, Sun Valley and Burley, Idaho.

He says, "Hypnosis is the most powerful tool known for change. Join us on a trip bringing hypnosis from the dark ages of mysticism to the realm of logic and understanding. Learn the basic principles and techniques in what the instructor calls 'dynamics of change.' Be able to relax in a matter of seconds, use your mind for super concentration, identify and change negative thought patterns through the understanding of the body, mind, spirit development. You will experience trance, reduce stress and gain a deeper knowledge of self and environment."

Cost for each Friday evening session is $30. The day-long Saturday session cost is $65.

Health Career Courses In Progress At NNCC

A new series of health career courses at Northern Nevada Community College is "up and running," according to Cliff Ferry, director of occupational programs for NNCC, who says 25 students have already enrolled in the health care courses.

Ferry said the classes are designed to prepare students for careers in respiratory therapy, medical records technology, medical laboratory technology and medical transcription. Courses now being instructed include what Ferry called the "basic requirements"—medical terminology, health care dynamics, and interpersonal skills of the health professional. The program will continue next semester with classes including patient care skills, pharmacology, and basic sciences.

A cooperative effort between NNCC, the Northern Nevada Area Health Education Center (AHEC), and Clark County Community College, the health education program is unique, according to Ferry. "We're excited about the cooperation," he commented. "It's unusual among community colleges."

E.IND. 11/1/89

AHEC Director Yvonne Chaves said she believes the community as a whole will benefit greatly from the program. "I believe this provides a service to the Elko area, and will begin to help alleviate the shortages of health care professionals we're experiencing," said Chaves.

She explained that the program gives students the opportunity to complete their first year at NNCC, and then finish their associate degree at Clark County Community College, the sole exception is medical transcription. Students completing one year at NNCC in the transcription program are qualified for certification, Chaves said.

AHEC recruited the students currently enrolled in the NNCC courses, Chaves noted, adding she hopes more students will be attracted to the program next semester. "There are many opportunities in health care careers," she said. "It's an excellent opportunity for students interested in a rewarding—and badly needed—profession."

Chaves invited anyone interested in the program to phone AHEC at 738-3828, or NNCC at 738-8493.

Health classes attract 25 students at NNCC

Twenty-five students have enrolled in a series of health career courses at Northern Nevada Community College.

The new series of courses prepare students for careers in respiratory therapy, medical records technology, medical laboratory technology and medical transcription. The classes began this fall with three of the basic requirements being taught. The schedule includes medical terminology, health care dynamics and interpersonal skills of the health professional.

Next semester the NNCC schedule will include patient care skills, pharmacology, basic sciences and other classes.

The program is a cooperative effort between the college, Northern Nevada Area Health Education Center (AHEC) and Clark Community College. According to Cliff Ferry, director of occupational programs at NNCC, the program is unique.

Yvonne Chaves, the director of the Northern AHEC, said, "I believe this provides a service to the Elko area and will begin to help alleviate the shortages of health care professionals we're experiencing."

AHEC recruited the students currently enrolled in the programs and hopes to attract even more course participants next semester, Chaves added. She said she would like to see more high school graduates enter these fields.

"There are many opportunities in health care careers," she said. "It's an excellent opportunity for students interested in a rewarding and badly needed profession."

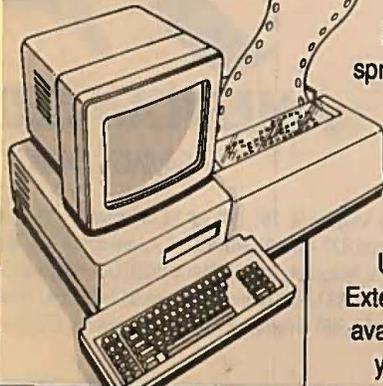

Chaves said anyone wanting more information on the program can call the AHEC office at 738-3828 or or NNCC at 738-8493.

NNCC sets computer session for ranchers

Ranchers are invited to take advantage of a free computer fair scheduled next Thursday at Northern Nevada Community College.

The special event is planned from 1 to 5 p.m. in Rooms 7 at Berg Hall.

Dick Garrett of the University of Nevada, Reno's extension is to discuss "the do's and don'ts" of buying a computer. He is to speak between 1 p.m. and 1:30.

He'll be followed by staff members from the agriculture department at the College of Southern Idaho, who will demonstrate different programs including the Redwing Production Countryside Spreadsheet.

Ron Ames of Key Systems of Nampa, Idaho, is scheduled to show the Redwing Financial package from 3:30 to 4.

Software demonstrations are to be conducted by Elko County Extension Livestock Specialist Ron Torell. Some of the programs he'll be showing involve cow herd appraisal, ration balancing and Lotus breakeven feeder cattle. His presentation is scheduled from 4 to 5.

Computer hardware will be on display throughout the afternoon.

Other exhibitors slated to attend are: Mark Clements of Computer Hardware Concepts of Salt Lake City; Wanda Huff of Computerland of Reno; Bob McLain of Thrifty Business Systems of Elko; Joe Turpin of Silver Creek Computer of Boise; and a representative of Valley Computer of Twin Falls.

Persons having any questions should phone NNCC computer instructor Louis Horton at 738-8493.

NNCC Classes Held

by: DYLAN SHIELDS

Many community members and juniors & seniors in high school have the opportunity to participate in taking NNCC (Northern Nevada Community College) classes in order to help them with certain skills.

One such class is called Wintering Beef Cattle, which is a one-day seminar coordinated with NNCC and UNR professors. One session has already been held on calf and heifer management, hay qualities and general herd management.

Running/Conditioning is another class with Delmar Kelly as the instructor. This outdoor class has to do with long distance running and general body conditioning.

Aerobics, taught by Mrs. Antoinette Cavanaugh, is another physical fitness class which helps people improve their health and appearance.

Basketball Basics is a class that can help a person with co-educational basketball skills and drills. This class is taught by Mr. Mike Chandler who coaches varsity girls basketball.

Elementary Algebra is a college first-level algebra course taught by Mr. Pete McLafferty. McLafferty also teaches a Basic Math class, which is mainly a general college course which can refresh a person's math skills.

Tutoring Dyslexics is another one-day seminar to be held in December. This class will be mainly for parents and teachers who work with dyslexic people.

NNCC classes will also be held next spring in which there will be many new classes offered. Some of those classes are: Computer Sciences, College English and Math, Social Sciences, Soshon Language, Crafts, and Sports these classes are open to all community members. Juniors and Seniors in high school can also take these classes, but they need permission from the school principal. For more information, call Gwen Anne Thacker. 757-3400 at work, 757-2895 at home.

EDFP 1/9/90 NNCC tour video show tomorrow

Videos pertaining to the upcoming Northern Nevada Community College Alaska trip and Greece-Turkey tour will be shown Thursday beginning at 7 p.m. in Room 7 of Berg Hall, announces Sarah Sweetwater, tour director and head of the art department.

The Alaska video will be shown first and the Greece-Turkey film will begin at 8, she said, adding anyone who is interested may attend, not just those who are going to travel.

Sweetwater and Paul S. Hanna both will be available to answer questions.

The Greece-Turkey tour is scheduled June 8-23 and the Alaska trip is slated Aug. 4-17.

EDFP 1/24/90 Peregrine publisher to present workshop

Gibbs Smith, publisher of Peregrine Smith Books, will present a workshop named "Getting Your Book Published" from 7 to 9 p.m. tomorrow in the conference room of Berg Hall at Northern Nevada Community College, reminds Pat Warren, director of continuing education.

She said Smith has published Cowboy Poetry, an anthology of classic and modern cowboy poems. His latest release, New Cowboy Poetry: A Contemporary Gathering features poems written by living cowboy poets and will be available at the sixth annual Cowboy Poetry Gathering this week at Elko Convention Center.

Cowboy poets in Elko for the gathering are invited to enroll in the class, she added.

Smith will explain how the publishing business works and will give practical tips on submitting manuscripts. Prospective authors will get inside information about the kinds of books — fiction and non-fiction — currently in demand. The publisher will supply students with "hand-outs" and will have various publishing catalogs, reference books and samples of books available.

Cost to students for the one-credit class is $20 plus $5 for new students who have never taken a class for credit at NNCC.

Students may enroll at class time, Warren said.

EDFP 2/3/90 Karate class for kids in Spring Creek school

Karate for Kids (ages six to 12) will be offered at Spring Creek Elementary School from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday evenings starting next Tuesday, announces a spokesman for Northern Nevada Community College.

Instructor Baruch Zohar, a "first dan black belt in Shotokan Karate," is a member of the American Amateur Karate Federation and the Japanese Karate Association.

He explains traditional karate is a physical art that also involves complete mental training. Many types of karate were derived from weapon-less fighting arts developed while Okinawa was controlled by repressive foreign rulers who banned possession of weapons by the people. The art has been practiced and refined for more than a thousand years, he noted, adding that today, karate is a satisfying sport anyone can practice regardless of age, sex or level of skill.

Cost for the four-week class will be $35. Interested parents should sign up their children at the NNCC business office in Berg Hall before Feb. 6. The phone number is 738-8493.

NNCC sets workshop on abuse

A workshop on child abuse and neglect has been scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday at Northern Nevada Community College. Each two-hour session will begin at 6:30 p.m. in Room 8 of Berg Hall.

A spokesman at the college said the workshop is for teachers, parents and child-care providers as well as social workers and school counselors.

The workshop will cover the legal definition, symptoms, causes and reporting procedures of child abuse and neglect. A panel presentation on the roles and responsibilities of community agencies such as law enforcement, social services, child-care personnel, medical and psychological professionals will be featured.

Susan Orr from Charter Hospital in Roseville, Calif., will share her experiences in using art therapy as a method of working with abused victims. A slide presentation will illustrate some of the techniques used in her counseling practice.

The workshop will cost $20 and participants will receive one credit. Advanced registration is not required. Anyone wanting more information may call the college at 738-8493.

Computer sessions scheduled at college

A series of mini-computer classes has been scheduled for next month at Northern Nevada Community College.

The classes are being offered through the efforts of the college and the Nevada Small Business Development Center. Valerie Easterly, a spokesman for the center, said the classes are designed for individuals or small business people who need basic training on computers.

MS-DOS and Hard Disk Management will be offered from 1 to 5 p.m. on March 2 and from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on March 3.

Lotus 1-2-3 will be taught from 1 to 5 p.m. on March 16 and 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on March 17.

Wordperfect 5.0 is scheduled from 1 to 5 p.m. on March 23 and from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on March 24.

dBase IV will be taught on March 30 from 1 to 5 p.m. and from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on March 31.

The one-credit classes will cost $25. There will be an additional charge of $5 for first-time NNCC students, Easterly noted.

Each class session will be limited to 17 people, so Easterly encouraged early registration. She said interested people can register in Berg Hall at the Student Services office.

Anyone needing more information can call the Nevada Small Business Development Center at 738-8493 ext. 245.

Plant identification class slated at NNCC

An eight-week course in the identification of native, wild plants is being offered by the Life Science Department at Northern Nevada Community College.

The course, entitled "Identifying the Native Spring Flora of Northeastern Nevada" is scheduled to begin on March 1. According to Mark Ports, the instructor, the course is designed to assist outdoor enthusiasts, naturalists and campers in enjoying the many plants they encounter.

"Students will learn to see plants as unique, beautiful organisms that deserve our interest and respect," Ports said.

He said that during the course students will have the opportunity to use taxonomic keys, learn characteristics of the major plant groups, experience the major plant communities in the Great Basin and develop skills for pressing and preserving plants.

Two field trips are planned to visit plant communities in Nevada and to collect representative species, he added.

The two-credit class will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. on Thursdays and will cost $40 plus a $10 lab fee.

Ports said anyone wanting more information about the class, or to register, may call him at 738-4270 or NNCC Student Services at 738-8493.

Talk slated on chimps

Dr. Ron Remington, president of Northern Nevada Community College, will present a free lecture tomorrow at noon on his experience with teaching chimpanzees.

Remington, who has entitled his talk "Chimpanzees in the Midst," will discuss his attempts to teach chimpanzees sign language. He explained the instruction took place at the University of Nevada in the early 1970s.

Many amazing anecdotes about working with the famous chimp "Washoe" will be related. Remington said. Washoe weighed 80 pounds, had 18-inch biceps, forearms measuring 19 inches and could bite through a metal pan, the college official noted.

According to Remington, some very exciting discoveries were made by teaching a member of the animal kingdom a language that enabled him to communicate with humans.

Remington invited anyone interested in a fun, fascinating lecture to bring a sack lunch and meet in Rooms 8 at Berg Hall.

Great Basin Lecture slated Wednesday

The Great Basin Lecture scheduled at 7 p.m. Wednesday will be jointly sponsored by Northern Nevada Community College and Northeastern Nevada Naturalists, announces spokesman Mark Ports.

The program, open to the general public, is entitled "Open Space — An Asset to Nevada," and will be presented by Allen Bruner, range conservationist with the U.S. Forest Service and the Intermountain Forest and Range Experiment Station in Reno. The lecture is free of charge and will be held in the auditorium of the Northeastern Nevada Museum.

"Mr. Bruner wishes to promote more interest in the state and dispel thoughts of Nevada as a vast wasteland," said Ports. "His slide presentation is a visual chronology of his 700-mile backpack trip through some of Nevada's most fascinating and scenic places."

The next presentation in the Great Basin Lecture Series will be "Sensitive Species of Plants and Animals in the Great Basin." It is scheduled April 17 and will feature Glenn Clemmer of the Nevada Natural Heritage Program, added Ports.

NNCC classes this week on genealogy, dyslexia

A two-credit course entitled "Searching Your Family Roots" is scheduled to begin Thursday evening. The genealogy class and a one-credit course on dyslexia are being offered this week by Northern Nevada Community College.

The genealogy class will be held from 7 to 10 p.m. at the LDS Stake Center's genealogy library. According to a college spokesman, students will fill out a "pedigree" for their family and chart their ancestral tree.

Gaye Hoem, class instructor, said a field trip also has been slated to the Family History Center in Salt Lake City on March 23 and 24. At the center, she said, students will do research, including a computer search, to discover their family heritage. Hoem said she will accompany the class on the Utah trip.

The dyslexia class will be offered Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. in Room 13 of McMullen Hall. Dr. George Manilla will discuss his novel and effective way of helping some dyslexics to read. The NNCC spokesman said the course will be helpful to parents and teachers.

Anyone wanting more information on courses offered by the college may call the student service office at 738-8493. Cost for classes is $20 per credit.

Astronomy lecture tonight at museum

"A Tour of the Universe" will be presented tonight at the Northeastern Nevada Museum Theater at 7:30 p.m., announces Northern Nevada Community College. The visiting lecture on astronomy will be given by Dr. David L. Crawford, through the auspices of the American Astronomical Society.

Crawford is an astronomer from Kitt Peak National Observatory and National Optical Astronomy Observatory in Tucson, Ariz. The lecture is open to the public.

Crawford will speak on "what's out there" as well as current topics in astronomy including "light pollution" and environmental threats to astronomy.

The special lecture is made possible through an endowment fund established in honor of Harlow Shapley, president of the American Astronomical Society from 1943-1946. He was appointed a staff member of Mount Wilson Observatory and was responsible for epoch-making studies on color and magnitudes of stars in globular clusters, the college reports, noting Shapley's research changed the concept of the sun being in a central position in the Milky Way system.

The endowment fund established in his name enables communities everywhere to benefit from the expertise of lecturers such as Crawford.

Seminar on hiring, firing of employees

"The Legal Aspects of Hiring and Firing," a seminar designed to help employers deal with problem employees, will be offered jointly by the Nevada Small Business Development Center, Elko's Chamber of Commerce, Northern Nevada Community College and North East Nevada Development Association (NENDA).

The class, set for March 14 from 3-5 p.m. in Room 8 of NNCC's Berg Hall, will cover topics such as how to avoid litigation, theories of liability, how to interview employees, employment agreements, policy manuals and proper termination procedures, said Jackie Buzan of the Small Business Center. Cost for the course is $15, or $25 if taken in conjunction with two American Management Association classes.

David Lockie, with the law firm of Easterly and Armstrong, will be the instructor. Prior to moving to Elko, Lockie was in private practice in Carson City and Las Vegas, where he represented employee organizations such as the Nevada State Education Association, Classified School Employees Association and the Clark County Public Employees Association.

Preregistration is required by March 12 and more information may be obtained by calling Buzan or Valerie Easterly at 738-8493, ext. 245.

Basic business skills conference at NNCC

"Basic Business Skills: the Support Function" will be presented in a video conference on March 21 from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Northern Nevada Community College's Berg Hall in Room 8, announces Valerie Easterly of the Nevada Small Business Development Center.

"The video conference will help develop the competency, courteousness, confidence and efficiency of your entry-level and support staff by introducing these employees to fundamental principles, strategies and techniques that ensures outstanding performance," added Easterly.

Co-sponsored by the Nevada Small Business Development Center, Elko's Chamber of Commerce, Northern Nevada Community College and Northeastern Nevada Development Authority, the cost of the course is $15.

Edward "Jerry" Wisinski, executive director of International Trainers, Educators and Consultants Inc., will be the speaker for Basic Business Skills. Among his current clients are Sizzler Restaurants; the Navajo and Mescalero Apache tribes; Randolph, Kelly and Lackland Air Force Bases and the U.S. Army.

Wisinski will cover topics such as, the service/support function; how employees come across to others; working with a boss; and listening skills. Pre-registration is required by March 19 and can be made by calling Easterly or Jackie Buzan at 738-8493, ext. 245.

College schedules clerical skills classes

A nine-week clerical skills training program has been scheduled to begin in May at Northern Nevada Community College.

According to Debbie Heaton-Lamp, director of the Single Parent Program at the college, the class schedule will include Introduction to Bookkeeping Basics; Introduction to Keyboarding and Basic Math; Word Processing; Data Entry; Bookkeeping I; Office Procedures; and a job-search workshop.

The program will be limited to individuals who qualify for the Single Parent Program; Youth Services Program; Job Opportunities in Nevada (JOIN); and Vocational Rehabilitation. Lamp said individuals who qualify for Aid to Dependent Children or Food Stamps probably qualify for one of these programs.

She said the program will include an orientation and testing process slated to begin on May 14. Classes are scheduled to commence on May 21 from 8 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., Monday through Thursday. On Fridays, participants will use the time for either lab/tutor time or the job search workshop, Lamp explained.

According to the program director, this is the third summer the clerical skills training has been offered. She said past graduates have had a high success rate in achieving employment in the office administration field.

Anyone interested in taking the course may contact the Single Parent Center at 738-8493 ext. 213, Lamp said. Potential students should register right away, she stressed, because program participants must meet eligibility requirements by April 2.

Is Your Business A Small Quantity Hazardous Waste Generator?

The businesses typically affected are auto repair shops, printers, chemical operators, contractors, dry cleaners, laboratories, pest exterminators, and the like.

If your business does generate hazardous wastes, you may need advice on the following:

-  Waste minimization options: Waste Audits, recycling options, and source reduction options.
-  Environmental Protection Agency Land Disposal Restrictions: The "Land Ban" and how it affects small quantity generators.
-  Biennial Report Workshop: All generators should bring reports with all questions. Assistance will be provided to help fill them out.

The Nevada Small Business Development Center will have a special consultant, Mike McGarrett, here on Thursday, March 22nd to assist you. If you would like an appointment to meet with him, please call Valerie Easterly or Jackie Buzan at 738-8493 ex. 245.

NNCC lecture Sunday on Greece-Turkey tour

In preparation for the June educational tour to Greece and Turkey sponsored by the art department at Northern Nevada Community College, Professor Paul Shelley Hanna will present a video and lecture at 7 p.m. Sunday in Berg Hall, announces Sarah Sweetwater, tour director and chairman of the art department.

"The public is invited, not just those who will go on the tour," she said. "This is one in a series of lectures in preparation for the trip. The study of Greek history, culture and government will give participants a background as well as an understanding of architectural landmarks — including the Elko County Courthouse," she explained.

Four holy sites to be visited by the travelers will be the subject of a future lecture.

The sites will include the house where the the Virgin Mary spent her last days in Ephesus; the Greek theater where St. Paul was tried for preaching Christianity; Corinth, where he wrote his letters to the Corinthians; and the Isle of Patmos, where St. John wrote the Book of Revelation.

"The art department has planned this lecture series and three educational travel tours with cultural literacy as the theme and to foster global consciousness," she explained.

In addition to the Greek trip June 8-23, spaces are available for a tour to Alaska Aug. 4-17 and Salt Lake City March 31-April 3.

The Salt Lake City trip will include museums, galleries, a sculpture garden and artists' studios. Cost will be between $75 and $125 depending on the number of travelers. The price includes hotel, transportation and college credit.

The Alaskan tour will be a cruise beginning in Seattle, Wash., that will sail the "inside passage" to Ketchikan, Juneau, Skagway, Whitehorse, Fairbanks and end in Anchorage. There will be side trips to Mendenhall Glacier, Lynn Canal, a narrow-gauge railroad, Athabaskan Indian village and many other sites. Cost for the trip will be approximately $2,962.

Cost of the Greek tour is approximately $3,036.

Exact costs and other details are available from Sweetwater at 738-8493 or 738-5770.

NNCC child center workshops April 2, 4

Northern Nevada Community College Child Center will be sponsoring two childhood education workshops in April.

A seminar for teachers, parents, and child-care providers discussing interpersonal skills, human relations, and stress reduction when working with staff, parents and children will be held April 2 and 4. Center director Marilee Harper says a panel will address and answer questions on opening a child-care center, preschool, or home-care program. The course, entitled "CD 236, Workshop for Teachers and Parents," will be held at Elko High School at 7 p.m.

An infant and toddler day-care workshop will be held on Saturday, April 21, beginning a 9 a.m. NNCC instructor Karen Johnson says anyone who works with or is a parent of an infant or toddler will benefit from the seminar. Developing quality curriculum and care for infants and toddlers will be discussed, along with current research and trends, temperament, and developmental stages of infants and toddlers. Johnson says she is trying to gear the workshop for day-care personnel and parents, including fathers.

More information is available by calling NNCC at 738-8493.

Shoshone classes will be taught during this summer session for credit at the Northern Nevada Community College at 901 Elm. This will be a two-credit class. Registration will be held during the scheduled time. Financial aid could be available for classes but you need to complete your paperwork ahead of time. Did you know a high school diploma is not absolutely necessary to attend college classes? You may take a certain amount of classes and complete them before you will be required to complete your high school diploma. This is called the "open door policy" and allows adults to gain confidence, take classes so that in the future, college and university learning will not be a frightening experience.

Also, did you know there are adult learning classes available at NNCC that do not cost any money except for the text when you are ready? The books used at the college are free and the tutoring needed to gain your GED or high school diploma are free, too. What a good deal. The hours are flexible to meet your schedule -- there are both night and day hours. Ask your education person about this or if you are shy, I would be happy to introduce you to the college person you need to see.

Also, Lori, wife of Rocky Roa, works in the Employment Office. She is helpful in completing paperwork for young people who would like to continue their training out of the area.

Tutors are available at the college for most subjects. There is a resource room where you can ask for additional help. But, if you would like a certain tutor, this can be arranged through Richard McNalley. For those of you who are exceptionally bright in certain college subjects, you might want to tutor another Native American. This concept of helping another Native American would not only assist the student in the classwork but would serve a two-fold purpose: First, the classroom work; and second, the development of positive self-esteem. Sometimes young students especially need just that special push that only you, as a Native American tutor, could give. E.Lad. 4/24/90

UNR nursing classes scheduled in Elko

Three workshops designed to assist professional health-care providers in managing time and resources more efficiently will be offered through the University of Nevada Reno in May for all Elko-area residents.

"Time Management for the Health Care Professional" will focus on time-saving organizational strategies and stress-reducing tactics. Efficient delegating techniques and methods will also be explored," UNR announces.

The workshop is scheduled to meet Wednesday, May 2, from 9 a.m. until noon, in the Conference Room of Northern Nevada Community College in Elko.

A second workshop designed for professional nurses with responsibility for accreditation in hospitals and other health-care facilities will be offered the same day from 2-5 p.m. It is entitled, "Establishing Nursing Services Philosophy and Standards of Practice" and will give participants the opportunity to begin development of agency standards of practice, the university explains.

"Management Changes in a Clinical Setting: Process and Outcome" will "focus on conflict resolution and strategies for successful middle management in nursing." The class will meet Tuesday, May 1, from 3-5 p.m. at the NNCC conference room.

The courses will be taught by Dr. Sydney Krampitz, dean of the Orvis School of Nursing at the university. Interested individuals may register by contacting the university's division of continuing education at 784-4062.

Yesterday's Lamoille Is Topic Of Program

The pristine community of Lamoille has been a fascination for many Nevada residents, and three generations of Lamoillians will remember yesterday's Lamoille during a presentation today at Northern Nevada Community College.

Edna Patterson, Eldon Westlund, and John Sustacha will discuss how Lamoille has changed over the years, and according to NNCC's Joyce Shaw, will relay personal experiences of living there.

Patterson, a long time resident of Lamoille and Elko, will discuss the early years, including the first settlers, and the education and growth of the area.

"Lamoille has not grown so much," Patterson said, referring to the valley itself. "But many things have changed."

Westlund and Sustacha will recall what it was like growing up in the small community, and discuss important people who affected Lamoille and the people living there.

"They will talk about politics, new developments, inventions, and what it was like to travel between Lamoille and Elko," Shaw noted.

Is Your Child “At Risk?”

“Sometimes it’s hard to know,
but I found the help I needed.”

“I was a little apprehensive when I took my daughter to ‘Children and Teens at Risk.’ My opinion was that my child was probably just fine; besides, if there was anything wrong, I wasn’t sure I wanted to know about it. I told her we were going to Charter to learn if there was anything better we could be doing as parents to make her happier.

“Our visit to Charter was delightful. They provided the areas of assessment to help identify if my child’s behavior was just growing pains, or something more serious. I was lucky because I found out my daughter was just fine in all areas of her life, and that gave me peace of mind.”

E. Ind. 5/2/90 Mental Illness Is Topic Of Videoconference

Northern Nevada Community College and the Area Health Education Center will sponsor a live, interactive video conference entitled "Children on the Edge" on Thursday, May 3, from 2:00 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. in Berg Hall, room 8 and 9 at the college. The video conference is produced by Washington State University.

Hunger and homelessness are a reality for an increasing number of families forced to live on the street. Mental illness is a growing concern as children's lives become more complex and disjointed. Poverty, family dissolution, and abuse place great pressures on schools and communities and can destroy children's lives. Parents, teachers, social workers, and child care providers will want to learn about the current programs that address these issues and also about public policies that affect them.

The program is free with an optional information packet available for $3. Phone 738-3828 for more information.

Landscaping class offered

Northern Nevada Community College will offer a landscape design class tomorrow from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon in Berg Hall, Room 8.

Jay Davison, Nevada Cooperative Extension agent, and Wayne Post, Nevada State Horticulture Specialist from Reno, will be instructing the class.

Participants will learn how to select low-maintenance landscape materials that will thrive in the Elko area. Special emphasis will be given to designing a landscape that will be attractive while conserving water. Students will have the opportunity to design their own landscape with the expert guidance of the two instructors.

Cost of the one-credit class is $25 and will include handouts. More information may be obtained by calling NNCC Student Services, 738-8493.

Class series slated on care of elderly

A four-part series on health promotion and quality care for the elderly is scheduled to begin Monday at Northern Nevada Community College in Berg Hall.

Instructors for the first course, "Assessment of the Elderly," include Dr. Arnold Greenhouse, professor and director of the Geriatric and Gerontology Center at the University of Nevada Reno; Jeannine Haslem, geriatric nurse practitioner at the Washoe County District Health Department; and Susanne Thornley, a clinical pharmacist at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Reno and an instructor at the Orvis School of Nursing at UNR.

The course will provide four contact hours of continuing education credit for nurses and 3.4 contact hours for social workers.

Other courses scheduled in the series include geriatric polypharmacy and medication abuse on May 14; Alzheimer's dementia and confusion, May 21; and depression in the elderly and elder abuse on June 4.

The series of courses is sponsored by Northeastern Nevada Area Health Education Centers. The program works in partnership with the University of Nevada School of Medicine to provide education to health professionals in rural Nevada, according to spokesman Karen Kimber.

Anyone wanting to register for the course, or needing more information, should call the AHEC office at 738-3828.

Vocal lessons: Northern Nevada Community College will host a Vocal Performance Workshop at 3 p.m. Sunday in Berg Hall. Members of the workshop range from beginners to seasoned performers. In-

Reining Clinic Is Set

Northern Nevada Community College will present the Al Dunning Reining Clinic this Saturday, June 9, and Sunday, June 10, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Suzie Creek Arena.

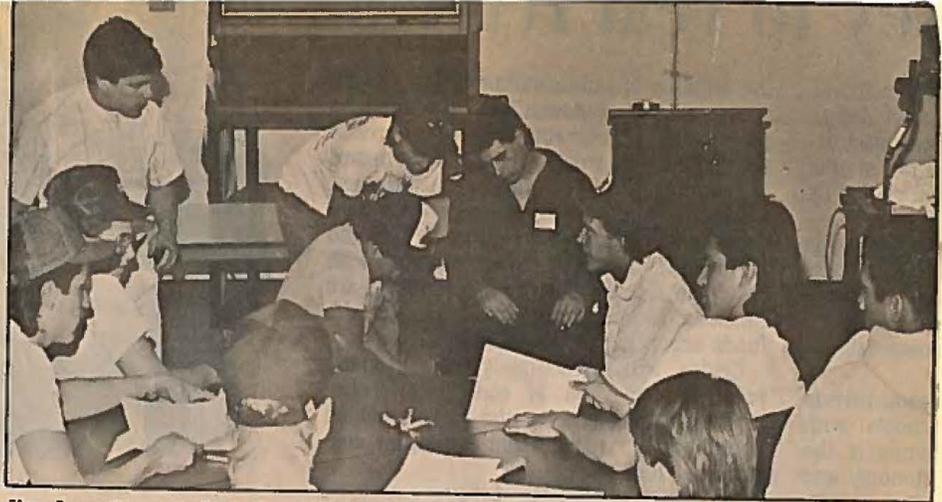

Dunning, from Phoenix, Ariz., has trained and shown several AQHA and National Reining Horse Association World champions. He is a member of the board of directors of both the National Cutting Horse Association and the American Quarterhorse Association and is an approved judge for both organizations.

As an instructor, Dunning has taught clinics around the world. His reining clinic is a favorite at the International Horse Exposition, held in Germany, and his book, Reining, is currently the best-selling book distributed by Western Horseman magazine.

Organizers say some openings remain for riders, at $75 per day. Spectators are welcome, and admission is $10 each day.

Interested persons are invited to phone 738-8493 for more information on the upcoming clinic.

Jim Jannetto, a trainer from Newmont (standing, upper left corner), instructed students in emergency first aid techniques at a class held earlier this week at Northern Nevada Community College. The students are beginning two years of work-study in mining-related fields and will be eligible to obtain mine-related jobs in the area upon completion of the course.

Mining scholarship winners begin two-year work-study

Thirty-two students from rural Nevada high schools began work this week after receiving scholarships for two years of work-study in mining-related fields.

The scholarships, sponsored by several area mining companies and mining-related suppliers, will include on-the-job training at various minesites as well as classroom work at Northern Nevada Community College. Students will study and work with welding, hydraulics and diesel equipment. Studies will cover core courses such as math, English and computers. Upon completion of the two years of work-study, each student will have a certificate in a mining-related field. With extra study, a student in the program could obtain an associate degree in science or arts from the college.

The two-year scholarship is worth about $10,000 and will cover tuition, books, lab fees and living expenses. In addition, students will earn about $35,000 each during their workstudy employment over two summers and during the school year. Employment will be at prevailing wages at the various minesites and shops in Elko, Eureka, Nye and Humboldt counties.

This program is sponsored by Manpower Training Co-operative, a non-profit corporation formed to establish the scholarship program. Participating companies include Newmont Gold Company of Elko; Barrick Goldstrike Mine of Elko; Tricon Metals of Elko; Pinson Mining Company of Winnemucca; Marigold Mining Company of Valmy; Round Mountain Gold Corporation of Round Mountain; Pioneer Equipment Co. of Elko; and Dee Gold Mining Company of Elko. Each company sponsors a certain number of students and offers summer and co-op employment during the program. Upon completion, each student will be offered fulltime employment as a mechanic or technician at one of the sponsoring companies.

Thirteen students from Elko High School were selected for the program, four from Carlin, five from Ely, three from Battle Mountain, one from Austin, four from Tonopah and two from Winnemucca.

This program is made possible by the efforts of NNCC administration and staff members, who have worked for the past several years to develop training and degree programs to benefit industries in northern Nevada. Newmont Gold has assisted with instructors' salaries and equipment. Barrick Goldstrike and several other companies have provided needed technical equipment and supplies. Both Newmont and Barrick have sponsored more than 80 of their present employees to receive intensive classroom and shop courses in various mechanical fields through NNCC programs. EDPF 6-23-90

NNCC now offering mine safety classes

Courses designed to meet the federal government's requirement for mine safety training are being offered in the newly formed Training Compliance Program at the Northern Nevada Community College.

Harold Baugh, hired by the college to set up the program, said NNCC now has courses for new miners; newly hired, experienced miners; and annual refresher courses for mine employees. The college also will be able to certify trainers for a company, so that a trainer can go on to instruct the safety courses at his mine, Baugh said.

Baugh said the courses are scheduled as needed, with instructors working odd hours to accommodate students.

The initial course for an inexperienced miner runs 24 hours; the re-resher courses run eight hours.

E.D.F.P. 7/3/90

In addition to miners, Mine Safety and Health Act regulations require some mine suppliers take the courses as well, Baugh said. He explained that a vending machine repairman working in a mine truck shop is exposed to the same hazards as the mining company employees working in the same shop.

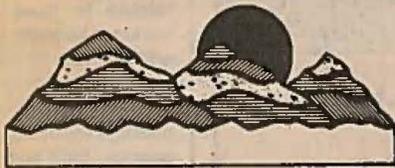

Baugh, a former Newmont Gold Company employee, said several of the larger mines have their own training programs to satisfy federal requirements, but those mines have sent notice to suppliers and contract employees that they will need a training certificate to work at the mine site.

A regular schedule of classes, as well as seminars on various rules and regulations, will be developed in the future, Baugh said.

NNCC Dressage and Jumping clinic will be held at the Spring Creek Horse Palace July 31 and August 1. Evening sessions are available. Riders must register at NNCC Business Office by Friday, July 27 to reserve space.

ENVIRONMENTAL WORKSHOP

The Nevada Division of Environmental Protection (NDEP) has drafted preliminary regulations for the certification of consultants and contractors involved with hazardous substances. The draft regulations have established standards for education, experience, performance and financial responsibility required for the certification of consultants and contractors and have established requirements for anyone responsible for a spill, leak, or accident.

Activities covered in the regulations include -

- Hazardous waste management
- Solid waste management
- Site or property investigation
- Spill response and clean-up
- Environmental remediation
- Sampling of air, soils, and surface water
- Transportation of hazardous materials
- Underground storage tanks

The regulations under consideration will also require that anyone responsible for a spill, leak or accident involving hazardous substances, obtain advice on the proper handling of the spill, leak or accident from a certified "Hazardous Substance Management Specialist" as outlined in the proposed regulations.

Tom Dorrance to teach horse clinic in Lamoille

Tom Dorrance, about whom the best-selling horsemen's book True Unity was written and whose horsemanship techniques and philosophy have influenced trainers and horsemen throughout the West, will conduct a two-day "green horse" clinic for Northern Nevada Community College beginning at 8 a.m. Aug. 11 and 12 at Branscombs' arena in Lamoille, announces Pat Warren, director of continuing education.

She describes Dorrance as the "horse's lawyer." His training techniques are now being spread all over the United States and as far as Australia by his friend and student, Ray Hunt.

Such terms as "make the right things easy and the wrong things hard," and "notice the smallest change and the slightest try" originated with Dorrance who, at 80, is a lifelong student of how a horse thinks.

EDFP 8/3/90

Hunt often says Dorrance can make a horse so responsive to him that he can "ride it up a telephone pole or down a badger hole."

Warren emphasized this is not a colt-breaking clinic. Horses should have had at least 10 rides and be approved by the instructor. Participants will be limited to the first 10 "paid-up" applicants, but an unlimited number of spectators may attend, Warren said.

Everyone should bring a sack lunch. Registration can be done at the business office at NNCC. The phone number is 738-9493.

Dorrance clinic filled

Tom Dorrance's horsemanship clinic for this weekend is filled, announces Pat Warren of Northern Nevada Community College, but spectators are welcome to attend.

The clinic is scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. Saturday and Sunday at the Branscomb arena in Lamoille and participants and spectators are reminded to bring a lunch or make plans to eat in Lamoille. Cost of the clinic is $12.50 a day for participants.

Dorrance is regarded as one of the best horse trainers in the world and his techniques have been spread throughout the United States and as far away as Australia.

Communication topic of five-week course

Communication in the workplace will be the focus of a five-week class to be offered jointly by Northern Nevada Community College and the Nevada Small Business Development Center.

Bonnie Bilbao and Valerie Easterly are the instructors for the course, which covers such topics as workplace influence; enhancing intra- and interpersonal style of communication; organization jargon; communication flow; small group dynamics and interviewing and decision making communication styles.

"Class members will learn through reading and, more importantly, through participation and involvement in role-playing exercises," said

Bilbao.

Interpersonal communication is a complex process but it is extremely important to professional effectiveness, added Easterly. The text and examples used in this class have been tested by business executives and managers and are designed to make communications a learnable skill.

Interested parties may register for the class Monday or Tuesday at NNCC. The cost is $24 and the class will begin Sept. 25 and run through Oct. 23.

Investment course offered at college

Northern Nevada Community College is offering an investing course aimed at helping investors understand today's investments.

The course will be held at 7 p.m. on the following Tuesdays: Sept. 11, Oct. 2, Oct. 23 and Nov. 13. Douglas Campbell, financial consultant for Shearson, Lehman Brothers in Salt Lake City, will be the instructor.

Designed to be useful to both experienced and novice investors, the course will cover how to buy and evaluate traditional investments, such as stocks, bonds, annuities, certificates of deposit and mutual funds. Other types of investments also will be discussed, such as Ginnie Maes, zero-coupon bonds, collateralized mortgage obligations and the use of professional money managers.

Special emphasis of the course will be investments used to build a retirement portfolio. Protecting savings against the dangers of inflation and changing interest rates also will be discussed.

"People managing retirement dollars can't afford to risk that money," Campbell said. "They need to know how to evaluate the safety of any investment, whether it is a certificate of deposit or a utility stock."

Cost of the course is $25 for one or $30 per couple. More information may be obtained from Pat Warren at 738-8493 or Campbell at 800-453-0408.

UNR offers classes in educating gifted

University of Nevada Reno will offer two courses starting in September for educators in the Elko area, reports Kathleen A. Maxam, of the Continuing Education Division.

"Education of the Gifted" (CI 715) will examine programs and procedures that aid in creating stimulating environments for the maximum development of gifted children.

The course will meet Sept. 21 through Dec. 17, Fridays from 4 to 10 p.m. and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., in Room 118 of McMullen Hall on the Northern Nevada Community College campus.

The course instructor will be Meggin McIntosh, an assistant professor in UNR's curriculum and instruction department.

"Classroom Behavior Management for the Special Education Classroom" (CI 614), a course focusing on integrating the curriculum's subject matter into special education classes, will examine new procedures and developments in the field that aid in the integration process. Participants will gain firsthand experience with classroom observation.

The course will meet Sept. 21 through Dec. 17, Fridays from 4-10 p.m. and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., in Room 14 of McMullen Hall at NNCC.

Mary Ann Demchak, also an assistant professor in the curriculum and instruction department, will be the instructor.

The fee for each three-credit, graduate course is $180. To register for one or both courses, students may call the UNR Division of Continuing Education at 784-4046 or 784-4062.

NNCC offers new program

Students interested in earning a master's degree in educational leadership now may do so through a pilot program of the University of Nevada Reno at Northern Nevada Community College.

During the fall semester, Dr. Cliff Ferry of UNR will teach an educational research course on Thursdays, from 4 to 7 p.m., starting today. Dr. David Holman from the UNR Department of Educational Leadership will teach a course on teacher evaluation. This course will consist of three sessions to be held on Oct. 12 and 13; Nov. 2 and 3; and Nov. 16 and 17.

Prospective students are not required to be enrolled in the master's degree program to attend either class. The teacher evaluation course is accepted by the Nevada Department of Education toward the administrative endorsement. A number of students participating in the program already have a master's degree and are working toward an Education Specialist degree, reports Pat Warren of NNCC.

UNR has raised tuition to $60 per graduate credit. Both classes are three credits. Additional "delivery costs" will be prorated among the students to pay for instructors' travel, expenses and overload salary.

Registration closes at 4 p.m. today. Late registrations will not be accepted. More information may be obtained by calling Warren at 738-8493, ext. 231.

Elkoans Invited To Go For Baroque

Northern Nevada Community College has announced a Thursday, September 13, noontime program featuring flutist John Bland and pianist Diane Madigan. The audience will be entertained by music ranging from the early Baroque to modern composition.

Composers highlighted include Lully, Telemann, Handel, Bach, Saint-Saens, Satie, and Bolling. A brief introduction about the selections and the composers will be provided to add to the enjoyment of the audience.

Diane Madigan and Jon Bland have performed in the Elko community for several years with NNCC's chamber music ensemble, Musica Antiqua, and as soloists at Ruby Mountain Manor and various social functions.

The community is invited to "brown-bag" lunch and attend the informal presentation in the Berg Hall multi-purpose room on the NNCC campus. The program is free. For more information call 738-8493.

Seminar on Elko's economy scheduled

"Elko's Emerging Economy and Economic Outlook" is the title of a seminar scheduled from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. tomorrow in Berg Hall on the campus of Northern Nevada Community College.

The seminar, sponsored by the Nevada Small Business Development Center, Elko Chamber of Commerce and North East Nevada Development Authority, will present materials intended to help business people, public officials, planners, community leaders and individual citizens understand the diverse and significant changes affecting Elko County.

According to a spokesman for the Small Business Development Center, Dr. Tom Harris and Dr. Marion Bentley will lead a lecture and discussion during the morning session. Harris is from the University of Nevada Reno and Bentley is a professor at Utah

State University.

The session will include a look at the historical trends in critical marketing information such as population growth, personal income, per capita income, investment incomes, industry sources of earning and economic growth patterns. The two professors also will discuss the results of their study of the potential for new types of businesses in this size and type of economy.

During the afternoon, two panels will discuss projections for the local economy. One panel will be made up of representatives from the sponsoring agencies and local government entities. The second panel will feature individuals representing mining, gaming and ranching.

The cost of the seminar will be $25, and participants will earn one credit from NNCC. Persons wanting to register should call the college at 738-8493, ext. 273 or 245.

Film, lunch set tomorrow

Community residents are invited to attend a movie and luncheon tomorrow at Northern Nevada Community College as part of a year-long celebration of women.

"Hearts and Hands" is the second in a series of special noontime films. "It presents a part of American history only now being rediscovered and appreciated, the role of women and their needlecraft efforts in the 19th century's movements and events," an announcement notes. The film illustrates how women made quilts with beauty that far outshone their utilitarian functions and how they used the needle to speak to each other and to posterity.

In conjunction with the film, NNCC's classified staff will sponsor a soup and salad luncheon to be served from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in Berg Hall. The film will start at noon and a discussion will follow. Cost of lunch is $3 with proceeds from the luncheon to go towards the NNCC Classified Staff Book Scholarship.

Writing Course Is Set

The Small Business Development Center and Northern Nevada Community College are co-sponsoring a one-day workshop on business writing skills. The workshop will be held Oct. 12 from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at NNCC's Lundberg Hall, and registration is now open, according to Valerie Easterly of the small business center.

Easterly explained the course is "designed to help the business owner or corporate manager write quickly, clearly, easily and powerfully." Included is instruction in basic guidelines and techniques for more effective letters, memos, reports and proposals. "You will learn how to plan what you write, how to avoid monotony in long reports, how to respond to complaints, what not to put in writing, and how to use your personal style to make your writing effective," Easterly said.

Anyone interested in attending the workshop may register at the college's student services office. The one-credit course requires a $5 lab fee.

Rebecca Wells

Writer, actress Wells to perform at NNCC

Tickets are now available for the Oct. 5 presentation of "Splitting Hairs," written and performed by Rebecca Wells.

The play will be presented at Northern Nevada Community College's Berg Hall at 8 p.m. Wells performs her one-woman theater piece in three short acts.

She guides the audience through the progressive growth experiences of Loretta Sue Endless, owner of the finest garage beauty salon in a small Louisiana community. The audience sees Loretta at various stages of her personal development. First, as a teenager receiving a "career call" and then as a young adult experiencing personal trauma. Later, Loretta stumbles into a lecture about nuclear weapons and her life is changed forever.

NNCC is able to present Wells with assistance and funding provided by the Western States Arts Federation, Nevada Council on the Arts and National Endowment for the Arts.

Wells also will present a writing workshop from 7-9 p.m. Oct. 4 at the college. She will discuss the writer/actor's creative process and how to transform a life experience into art. Students will attend the performance of "Splitting Hairs" and complete a writing project. Cost of the class is $24 and interested persons may enroll at NNCC Student Services by Oct. 1.

Wells grew up in rural Louisiana. She has studied psychology, drama and Buddhism and has performed in theaters, schools, reservations, prisons and churches from New York City to Alaska. She is a published fiction and non-fiction writer and has had her commentaries featured on National Public Radio. Wells has written for CBS Television's "Designing Women" and was the subject of a PBS documentary in 1987.

"Splitting Hairs" was nominated for the Sundance Institute as well as the Showtime Television's Excellence in American Theatre Award. ABC Television has commissioned an hour pilot of the play.

Wells' acting credits include the character of Lenny in "Crimes of the Heart" and Diane in "Sister Mary Ignatius." Film and television credits include "Whose Life Is It, Anyway?" and "The Baxter Family."

Tickets for the performance cost $5 and may be purchased at NNCC's business office or from any faculty member. Early purchase is recommended as seating is limited. Reservations may be made by calling 738-8493, ext. 210.

NNCC offers film on women

"A Woman's Place" will be shown at noon Wednesday in the multipurpose room of Berg Hall as part of a celebration of women at Northern Nevada Community College. The public is invited to attend.

The film pays tribute to individuals who have made great contributions to society and celebrates the fact that today "a woman's place" is everywhere. Stories of innovative and successful women dominate the video, according to a college spokesman.

Lunch will be available during the presentation, compliments of the NNCC Associated Student Body.

WSU humanist slates Elko visit next week

Northern Nevada Community College will be visited next week by Dr. Susan Armitage, director of Washington State University's American Studies Program, as part of a five-day "humanist in residence" program.

The program, sponsored by the Nevada Humanities Committee, is central to the "Women in the West" program that is the focus of the college's current academic year.

Armitage will meet beginning Monday with NNCC instructors in humanities and the social sciences, individually and in small groups, to assist in revitalizing the existing curriculum. The Academic Planning Committee also will be assisted in reshaping what is now called the "general education requirements" that currently de-emphasize the humanities.

On Wednesday, Armitage will conduct a workshop in oral history at 1:30 p.m. in the Berg Hall Conference Room. The workshop is open to interested faculty and community members involved in gathering and preserving local history.

At 7:30 p.m. Thursday, the Northwestern Nevada Museum will be host at a public lecture entitled "From the Margins to the Center," which gives a look at why women have been relegated to the outer edges of history and how to integrate the contributions of women with those of men. An open reception will follow the presentation.

Dr. Armitage is a women's scholar and has published extensive works including four books: The Women's West; So Much To Be Done; Women in the West: A Guide to Manuscript Sources; Out of Many. In addition, she has published numerous articles and papers that have established her as a popular lecturer and "humanist in residence."

Additional information may be obtained by calling 738-8493, a college spokesman said.

College community center work begins

Groundbreaking for the new College Community Center was celebrated by Northern Nevada Community College Oct. 18.

Among those present were the University of Nevada System Board of Regents; representatives from the chancellor's office; members of the NNCC Foundation board of trustees; NNCC President Dr. Ronald Remington; State Sen. Dean Rhodes; NNCC student body officers Toni Mendive, Mike Crain, Shirley Gililand and Phillip Mendive; and numerous faculty, staff and other Elko residents.

During the presentation, NNCC Foundation Chairman Jeanne Blach informed the audience of how money was raised for the building project through various donations.

Blach told how the efforts of Paul

EDFP 11/2/90

Sawyer and nine other Elkoans enabled the community college to be started in 1967. Sawyer, a member of the foundation's board of trustees and a father of the Nevada community college system, spoke of a vision held by the original founders and what he foresees for NNCC.

The contract for Phase I of the center has been awarded to Mark B. Garff Construction Company of Salt Lake City. The project cost is set at $1,346,640. Actual work on the grounds began Oct. 24 and completion is set for Aug. 1, 1991. Work will continue as long as weather permits and will begin again next spring, stated a foundation spokesman. The foundation is still in the process of soliciting funds for Phase II of the College Community Center.

Education Courses Offered

Teachers, substitute teachers, and interested parents may still register, until this Friday, Oct. 5, for three one-credit education workshops offered during the fall semester at Northern Nevada Community College.

The first short course, entitled "Lawyer-Proofing Your Classroom," will be held Saturday, Oct. 13, from 9 a.m.-6 p.m. and will offer administrators, shop teachers, coaches, and teachers planning field trips the latest information on student release forms, safety equipment, shop condition safety checklists, and the use of parent chaperones. Dr. George Foldesy of the University of Nevada, Reno, will instruct the course.

In the second class, school librarian Cynthia Smith will help teachers and parents select books to read aloud to their children. Reading lists for older students will cover classic favorites as well as additions to the children's "literary hall of fame." The "Children's Literature Workshop" will be held Friday, Oct. 19, from 7-9 p.m., and Saturday, Oct. 20, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

On Friday, Nov. 16 from 7-9 p.m., and Saturday, Nov. 17 from 9 a.m.-4 p.m., NNCC will offer a reading workshop for teachers. Instructor Nancy Remington, MED, a northeastern Nevada writing project consultant and reading specialist, will instruct the course. A teacher for 17 years, Remington has worked with preschool through college-age students.

Cost to attend each one-credit course is $24. Those seeking more information are asked to phone Student Services at NNCC, 738-8493.

Siblings Are Course Topic

Sibling relationships are important factors in the emotional development of the individual—and sibling position patterns can be a revealing component of roles taken later in life. As each child is born into a family, a new and unique environment emerges. The child receives messages about role assignments, self-esteem, and perceptual orientation. These patterns are observable, describable, and often useful in the therapeutic process.

Northern Nevada Community College will offer a special course titled "Birth Order Roles and Sibling Patterns" on Saturday, November 3 from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. In the workshop, two experts in the field will share their significant research findings in the area and describe the potential applications at home and in therapy. The one-credit course will be presented by Dr. James Harper, Associate Professor, and Margaret Hoopes, Professor, both from the Marriage and the Family Therapy Program at Brigham Young University. Together, they have lectured nationally and internationally, and published Birth Order Roles and Sibling Patterns in Individual and Family Therapy.

Cost for the one-credit workshop is $24 and students may enroll at Student Services. More information is available by phoning the college at 738-8493.

Rabbit Clinic Is Scheduled

Northern Nevada Community College will offer a Rabbit Management Clinic on October 17 and 24 from 7-9 p.m. each night in room J-19 of Elko High School. Instructor Mary Ann Heseltine is a co-founder of the Northern Nevada Rabbit and Cavy Club and a former 4-H project leader for many years. Heseltine says she enjoys helping youngsters and adults learn about proper health, feeding, and housing practices for their own rabbits. Students will also get a brief history and description of various breeds and the course will cover possible problems in breeding and raising rabbits in Elko.

Cost of the clinic is $10. Students must register at the NNCC Business Office prior to the class. Interested persons are asked to call Student Services at 738-8493 for more information.

Working stock dog clinic recent success for NNCC

A dozen dogs — almost all of them border collies — were enrolled last weekend in Northern Nevada Community College's first clinic aimed at helping people train their stock dogs. About 30 ranchers and other interested dog owners who requested the class attended the clinic conducted by Jo Woodbury of Star, Idaho.

Woodbury demonstrated how dogs should work on either cattle or sheep by using her own "Craig" and "Sadie" to "dog break" a band of sheep rented from a Ruby Valley rancher to use for puppy-educational purposes. She explained the commands each dog would need to obey before they began learning about moving stock.

To be of any use, dogs must "come" when they are called, get "down" on their bellies when they are told and "stay" until their handlers release them by saying "that'll do" or a similar, unmistakable command.

Woodbury was equipped with a shepherd's staff, a whistle and a long, light cord attached to each pup's collar when she introduced each dog to the small band of sheep. Sheep are less intimidating to start on for young dogs than a herd of cattle.

As they began to work, they learned additional commands such as "go by" (go to the left flank of the flock) "way to me" (right flank) and "there" (stop but don't lie down.)

An outdoor, round corral proved best for the work because sheep couldn't crowd into corners. The level of each dog's herding instinct became immediately apparent and after three works, each in two days, all canine students and their helpers made great strides.

The clinician was copious with praise even if puppies performances were not perfect.

"The only reward a dog needs is his person's approval," she noted and added, "It is important for a puppy to enjoy his work or he will learn to quit and leave you with a bunch of scattering cows or sheep. That's one good reason to keep an angry tone out of your voice and why a whistle is useful. Whistles don't disclose emotion."

The only discipline administered at the clinic consisted of quick, light jerks on dragging cords, which really amounted only to explaining to the dogs what was wanted by the handler.

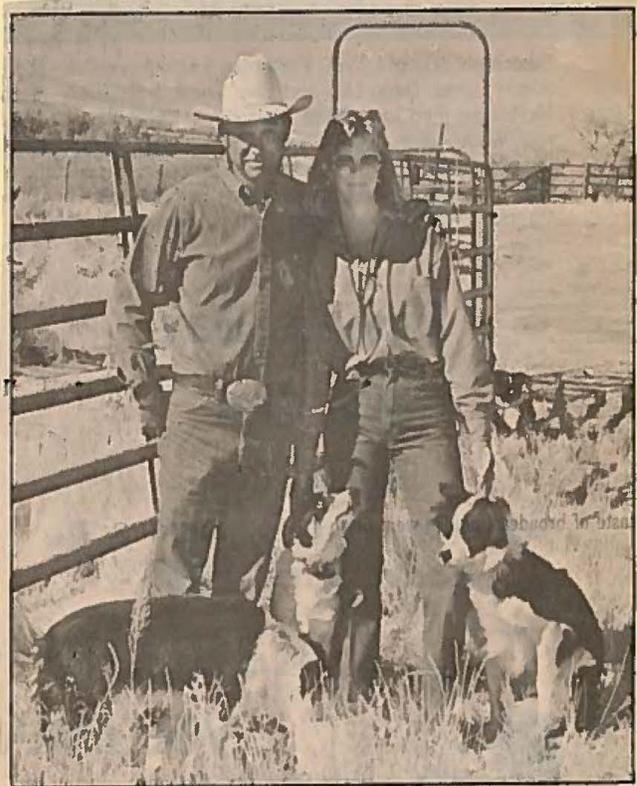

The long staff was dropped in front of the puppy, his running handler to slow the dog or change his direction. None seemed intimidated by the pole.

Woodbury described three escalating disciplinary procedures she uses for overt disobedience: The first is grabbing the puppy's head below his ears, getting on his level and looking into his eyes, pinching one ear and scolding. The second is grabbing the hair under his ears, lifting his front feet off the ground, shaking him slightly and scolding. The third is lifting all four feet off the ground, looking him in the face and scolding angrily before tying him up for 24 hours. During that time he is not spoken to no matter how much he wags his tail. She says the last treatment will make a believer out of any border collie.

In Idaho, sheep dog trials are becoming a popular sport, Woodbury says. A well-trained dog older than three years but younger than eight can bring as much as $2,500. She sells registered border collie pups for $250 and up.

Students included Ken Jones, Roger Auge, Patti Fox and Mary Branscomb of Lamoille; Denny Larsen and Gary and Candy Wines of Ruby Valley; Stephanie Licht, Larry Backhaus and Bricey Klein of Elko, Laurel Hansen of Carlin and a number of spectators.

Jo and Leo Woodbury of Star, Idaho, came to Lamoille to conduct a working stock dog clinic last weekend. They were assisted by "Craig," "Sadie" and the novice dog "Jake."

An NNCC "Celebrating Women" Noontime Film Presentation

Learn how the economic and social transformation of African American life early in this century gave birth to the blues. This film recaptures the lives and times of Ma Rainey, Bessie Smith, Ida Cox, Alberta Hunter, Ethel Waters and the other legendary women who made the blues a vital part of American culture. By telling and singing their stories, the film teaches tremendously moving lessons about race, gender, and class.

NNCC sets graduate class in business administration

Students seeking to obtain a master's degree in business administration are invited to begin a graduate program in the spring semester at Northern Nevada Community College.

The program is offered in conjunction with the University of Nevada Reno. Instructors from the university will travel to Elko to teach two classes per semester on the NNCC campus. Depending on the student, the MBA degree can be completed in two to four years.

"We've had a great deal of interest in graduate programs in the last few years," said Dr. Charles Greenhaw of NNCC. "We've worked very hard to arrange programs through the university and to respond to community demand. Last year, we started two masters' programs, one in educational leadership and the other in nursing. Many area employers have asked for the master in business administration program and we've been able to arrange for it to begin this spring."

Interested individuals are invited to attend a public meeting to be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday at the Holiday Inn. Laurie Larwood, UNR Dean of the College of Business; Associate Dean Don Winnie, John Dobra, economics professor; and representatives from NNCC will be on hand to provide information on entrance qualifications, course work and costs for the program.

Additional information is available by calling Greenhaw or Valerie Easterly at 738-8493.

NNCC Announces Short Courses

Northern Nevada Community College announces that students may still register for two short courses in December.

A Country Swing Dance Workshop will be held on Friday, December 14, from 7:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. and Saturday, December 15, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Instructors Gary Pranty and Kathy Churchfield, will teach fancy moves like the pretzel, eggbeater, ribbonband, and the scissors. The class will be held in Beng Hall, in Rooms 8 and 9. Cost of the one-credit class is $24.00.

Local ranchers and horse owners will want to enroll in the Horseshoeing Clinic on Saturday, December 15, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Instructor, Evan Dodson, has had many years of experience as a professional horseshoer. He taught horseshoeing at Montana State University in Bozeman before moving to Elko. Students will learn the proper way to trim a horse's hooves, how to recognize when their horse has been shod correctly for his conformation, and some basics of how to care for a horse's feet. Students will meet in the NNCC parking lot at 9:00 a.m. and will travel to Dodson's shop where they will be able to watch the instructor demonstrate on live horses. Students are not required to bring any of their own farrier equipment for this one day clinic. Cost for the one-credit class is $24.00 plus a $5.00 lab fee.

There will be no charge for training, which will be done by Larry Robb of Elko and George Pelham, regional foster care recruitment and training specialist from Reno.

"If you have ever considered foster parenting, please feel free to attend these meetings," says Pelham.

Orientation will include discussions about child development from birth through 18 years and legal involvement of both agencies. Written information also will be distributed.

Rackley says medical care is provided by the state for the children and compensation is paid foster parents.

People who like children, have room in their homes and feel they can care for abused or neglected kids are being sought.

Children may be placed at any time for only a single day or for many months or years. "There is no guarantee when a child will be placed or when he will be removed," Rackley noted. More information is available from her at 738-2531.

Area educators offered two leadership courses

University of Nevada Reno will offer two courses in its Educational Leadership Master's Degree Program in Elko during the spring semester, announces Pat Warren of Northern Nevada Community College.

The first class, EL 701, Administration of School Staff Personnel, to be taught by George Foldes, began yesterday and will continue Fridays from 4 to 10 p.m. and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on the following dates: Feb. 8 and 9 and Feb. 22 and 23.

The second class offered will be EL 713, History of Education in the United States. Gary Peitler from UNR will be the instructor for this class which will meet March 8 and 9, April 5 and 6 and April 19 and 20. The courses are three credits each.

Cost for the classes is $60 per graduate credit, a one-time graduate special fee of $20, (if the student has never taken a graduate level course at UNR), and a special delivery cost of approximately $20 per credit. This special delivery cost helps to defray the cost of the instructor's travel expenses and overload pay, Warren explains, since the classes are offered by the UNR's College of Education and not through its Department of Continuing Education.

NNCC schedules two noontime programs

Two noontime programs have been scheduled at Northern Nevada Community College as part of the school's yearlong celebration of women.

A film, "Hopi: Songs of the Fourth World," will be shown tomorrow in the Berg Hall multipurpose room. According to Joyce Shaw, a spokesman for the college, the film is a compelling study of the Hopi Indians that captures their deep spirituality and philosophy.

"How We Got the Vote" is a video slated to be shown on Feb. 27. Narrated by Jean Stapleton, the video uses historical footage, cartoons, songs and reminiscences to show how women fought for and won the right to vote. The film introduces the personalities and organizations involved in the suffrage struggle and the last great push for the passage of the 19th Amendment.

Shaw said if there is enough time, the presentations are followed by informal group discussions. She noted that Part III of Movers and Shakers: Nevada Women at Work, a statewide touring photo exhibit, remains on display in the foyer at Berg Hall through Friday.

The college received a grant and assistance from the Nevada Humanities Committee to fund the presentations.

Various legal and therapeutic aspects of child abuse will be discussed from 7-10 p.m. Thursday and Friday in Room 8 of Northern Nevada Community College's Berg Hall.

Each three-hour session will cover legal definitions, reporting procedures, and causes and symptoms of child abuse and neglect. The class is geared for child care givers, teachers, social workers, school counselors and parents, noted Marilee Harper, director of the NNCC Child Center.

A panel presentation will include topics on roles and responsibilities of law enforcement and social service agencies and will be presented by medical, psychology and child-care professionals. Susan Orr of the Charter Hospital in Roseville, Calif., will be a featured speaker. She will share her experiences in using art as therapy and will illustrate her techniques in a slide presentation.

The one-credit class costs $24. An additional $5 will be charged for new students. Pre-registration is preferred, but individuals may register at the door. Additional information is available by calling Harper at 738-8493, ext. 225.

"Ice Age Animals in the Great Basin," will be presented at 7 p.m. on the 22nd at the Northeastern Nevada Museum. Mark Ports, Biology instructor, notes, "...the woolly mammoth, sabre toothed cat, the American camel, the giant sloth and many other large mammals roamed the mountain ranges and valleys of northeastern Nevada during the Ice Age."

On February 27th "How We Got The Vote" is the featured film presentation narrated by Jean Stapleton. It uses historical footage, cartoons, songs and reminiscences to show how women fought for and won the vote. Both moving and exciting, the film introduces the personalities and organizations involved in the suffrage struggle and the last great push for passage of the 19th Amendment. The film will be in Berg Hall.

Hearts And Hands

On Wednesday, March 6th, Northern Nevada Community College will present the film "Hearts and Hands" at noon in Berg Hall.

This film presents a vital part of American history only now beginning to be appreciated - the role played by women and needlecraft in the nineteenth century's great movements and events. This film is a preliminary attraction to the opening of the play "Quilters" and the exhibition, "A Common Thread."

The film illustrates how women made quilts whose beauty far outshone their utilitarian functions and how they used the needle to speak to each other to posterity.

In "celebration of women" NNCC presents a film that is a compelling study of the Hopi Indians. It captures their deep spirituality and philosophy — emphasizing a holistic environmental ethic and a balance with nature rarely achieved in today's world. Amidst beautiful images of Hopi land and life, a grandmother, artists, and elders speak about the preservation of the Hopi way of life.

THE HOPi WOMAN: The root of the Hopi village is the clan grandmother. Men may roam about, work the fields or hold their religious ceremonies, but it is the clan matriarch, forever at home, who is the real power. She controls lives through the branching lines of female descendants and the land through their husbands and sons. She is the caretaker of the most sacred religious objects, a director of thought and a participant of many ceremonies. She is the ultimate conservative, the cohesive focus of the Hopis and their way of life.

500 proficiency tests throughout the country to encourage technical competency and professionalism in the industry. According to ATRA's executive director G. Steven Gray, a major goal of the certification program is consumer protection.

The tests are free to ATRA members. Non-members however, are required to pay a small fee to help defray the cost of the program.

Those wishing to register for the tests or who want additional information about the certification program, should contact Marilyn Gray at the ATRA headquarters, (805) 654-1700.

Wildflowers and Native Plants - Topic of Seminar

"What do the fuzzy sandwort, snowy spring parsley, and old man senecio have in common?" According to Mark Ports, Biology instructor at Northern Nevada Community College, these are the exotic names for the plants that color the valleys and mountains of northeastern Nevada every year. These and many other plant varieties will be the topic for the next Great Basin Lecture called "The Native Plants of Northern Nevada."

The session will be held Friday, March 8 at 7:00 p.m. in the auditorium of the Northeastern Nevada Museum. Lynda Nelson, Curator of the Wilber D. May Arboretum in Reno will be the lecturer. She will discuss plant varieties, life histories of the plants, habitats, and uses in the home garden.

Everyone is invited to attend. There is no charge for the class.
