NNCC Officials Predict A Record Enrollment

Northern Nevada Community College officials said this week they are predicting a record fall enrollment of more than 1,200 students at Elko and another 1,200 at the college's off-campus study centers, as registration nears for the fall semester.

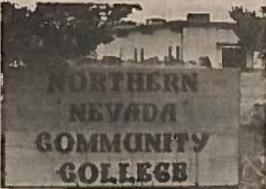

Dean of Instruction Charles Greenhaw said this year's estimated combined student total of 2,400 would put the college more than 350 students ahead of last fall's combined enrollment of 2,048.

Whether NNCC's predictions are accurate will be determined when registration for the fall semester is held this Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 29 and 30, in Berg Hall on the college campus. Registration will be conducted from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. each day.

Late registration is scheduled for August 31 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Sept. 1 from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., and Sept. 2 and 6 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Registration fees are $20 per credit, and certain courses require laboratory fees.

Over 200 regular classes appear on the fall schedule, Greenhaw noted, and a number of other short courses and workshops will be announced during the semester, which begins on Sept. 8.

Meanwhile, NNCC Director of Financial Aid Joan Williams says the college is still seeking housing for its out-of-town students. Anyone having a room, basement or apartment to rent to a student or students is urged to contact Williams at the college, 738-8493.

Northern Nevada Community College expects a record number of students for the 1988-89 school year.

Registration at NNCC on Monday

Northern Nevada Community College registration is slated 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday in Berg Hall and classes begin Sept. 6, announces Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction.

Late registration is scheduled Aug. 31 and Sept. 1, 2 and 6 for students who are unable to enroll at those times in any of 200 regular classes and additional short courses or workshops.

Officials predict more than 1,200 students will enroll in Elko and another 1,200 will enroll at off-campus study centers, he said. Combined enrollment last fall was 2,048, which figures out as the equivalent of 482 full-time students.

Fees are $20 per credit, plus laboratory fees in some courses.

More information is available at 738-8493.

Don't you think it's time you looked at a better way?

Sometimes it seems that it's easier to find reasons not to go to college. High school students ask questions like "How big a change is it from high school?" Or "What are my chances for success?" Or "Doesn't it cost a lot to get higher education these days?" The answers often raise a student's anxiety more than his or her hopes.

We think Northern Nevada Community College is one great reason to go to college. Costs are low, but services are comprehensive. And, because it's part of the University of Nevada System, its academic courses are transferable to four-year programs. So, a high school student kind of eases into the college routine (which is a lot different from high school life.)

The fact of the matter is that most of our students are able to finish all their lower-division General Education requirements - before they set foot on that far away university campus. And they do it in classes that are much smaller than most universities can offer.

That raises another important point: Personal attention is not only found in NNCC's classrooms. Many other student services - like counseling and tutoring - are available, usually as soon as the student requests help. Bureaucratic red tape does not run things at small schools like NNCC.

High Costs. Hardships.

NNCC slates registration next week

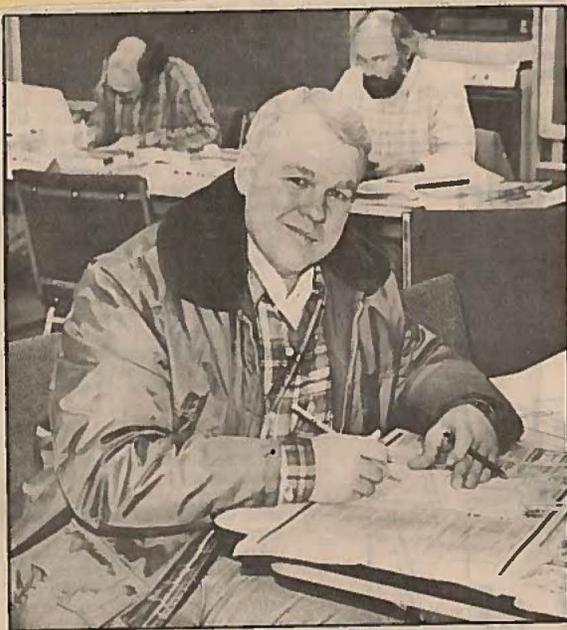

Registration for the spring semester at Northern Nevada Community College will be held from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday in the multi-purpose room of Berg Hall.

Students who are unable to register during the specified enrollment time may register as late as Jan. 18, but will be subject to a late fee, according to a spokesman for NNCC.

Classes are scheduled to begin Tuesday, Jan. 17. The school will be closed on Jan. 16 in observance of Martin Luther King Day.

The pre-semester advisement period now is under way at NNCC, providing students an opportunity to meet with instructors to discuss courses and degree plans.

EDFP 1/6/89

David L. Brough of Wells registered for classes at Northern Nevada Community College yesterday afternoon. Registration for the spring semester will continue until 8 p.m. tonight in the multi-purpose room at Berg Hall. Classes are scheduled to begin next Tuesday morning. The college will close Monday in observance of Martin Luther King Day. Students may register as late as Jan. 18, but will be subject to a late fee.

COLLEGE WOULD BE A LOT EASIER IF ALL YOU HAD TO DO WAS GO TO COLLEGE.

Maybe you're holding down a part-time job. Or have children. Or can't really afford the expense of going away to college. But you still want a quality college education.

Then that's why Northern Nevada Community College is just the ticket. Because NNCC lets you balance your education with the rest of your life. For starters, there's no expense of living away from home. You don't have to give up your full- or part-time job. And tuitions average about half the cost of public four-year colleges and universities. No wonder an amazing 55% of all first time freshmen choose Community Colleges. Of course, when you think about it, it's really the obvious choice.

JOIN summer program set to begin on June 12

Job Opportunities in Nevada (JOIN) will begin June 12 for students between the ages of 14 and 21 who will work from 20 to 40 hours a week this summer. They will be paid by JOIN, not by businesses or other agencies for which they work, explains Denise Aguirre, Elko's branch manager. They also will receive two hours a week of tutoring in preparation for the next school year.

Aguirre says the Summer Youth Employment Program (SYEP) "offers some of our youth the opportunity for career exploration they don't get elsewhere — especially 'hands-on' experience."

Worksites in Owyhee, Elko, Carlin, Jackpot and Wells include working in "medical records personnel" for the Southern Bands Clinic; for the buildings and grounds department at Northern Nevada Community College; in maintenance crews and in the office at Carlin High School and for the City of Carlin; as landscape assistants at Jackpot High School; as a court clerk helper for the City of Jackpot; and as animal control officer helper for the City of Wells.

This year, for the first time, young mothers (14-21) will be able to receive free child care while they work or attend school in a program made possible by a $5,000 grant from Nevada's Women's Fund, Aguirre said.

Another new program is called "Job Tryout" in which a young person's first month's training wages will be paid by JOIN and not by his employer.

Barbara Errecart, local Private Industry Council member, explained the JOIN and SYEP programs work because of good adult participation.

"I've talked to people who were in this program years ago and who are now working in good jobs. They remember their JOIN experiences. For a lot of them, having a relationship with an adult supervisor who cared, really made a difference," Errecart said.

Students and employers who are interested in this program should call 738-8095.

NNCC summer session registration announced

Registration for the summer session at Northern Nevada Community College is being held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. today and tomorrow. Schedules are available at NNCC, reports a spokesman.

"There is a taste of some of NNCC's more exotic listings for the summer," as well as routine classes, he said.

Horse lovers will be interested in two trail rides. One will begin at 2 p.m. June 3 and go from the Spring Creek Horse Palace to the Spring Creek Campground, where participants will eat a bring-your-own-food barbeque before riding back to the Horse Palace. The other will start at 2 p.m. July 8 at the Lamoille Canyon turn-off. Riders will go to the Thomas Canyon Campground, where they will have another barbeque before returning to the Lamoille Highway. Participants must provide their own animals, transportation and food. Because training and teaching are not available, they must be responsible for their own safety and that of their animals. Children will be allowed if they are accompanied by at least one adult.

Drillers will be interested in a class taught by Jim Muth, member of the certifying board for drillers. His class will help students pass the Nevada State Driller's Exam.

A photography class will make a weekend trip to Hogle Zoo in Salt Lake City with instructor Chris Prieux June 2-4 to "photograph animals or fellow classmates." Photo opportunities in early evening and early morning light are planned.

Prieux also will teach a Behavior Modification class to eliminate unreasonable fear of flying. His methods include imagery, relaxation techniques and a trip to the airport to simulate dealing with an upcoming flight. He has had a high success rate using these methods.

A method to control high blood pressure through relaxation and guided imagery will be taught by Dan Stable from Elko Community Mental Health. People who have blood pressure problems in their families or are under stress may be interested.

An introduction to self-hypnosis will be taught by Don Spencer. Relaxation in a matter of seconds, how to attain super concentration and how to identify negative thought patterns will be discussed, and students will learn ways to change negative thought patterns.

The "Kids College" schedule for NNCC will be available soon, the spokesman added.

NNCC to register

The final day to register for classes this fall at Northern Nevada Community College in Ely is tomorrow.

Registration will be held at NNCC's new facility at 685 Lyons Ave., the suite of offices shared by accountant Marshall Coopersmith and Dr. Kathie Coopersmith. The NNCC entrance faces on the alley.

Registration will be open from 2:30 p.m. until 7 p.m.

Classes cost $20 per credit (to be paid at registration). There also is a $5 application fee for new students and some community service classes have special fees.

Senior citizens older than 62 are not charged for tuition, but they must pay to attend community service classes.

Classes start the week of Sept. 6.

Courses are offered in accounting, anthropology, art, biology, business, criminal law, data processing, economics, English, German, graphic arts, history, home economics, humanities, management, math, music, nursing, office administration, physical education, political science, psychology, sociology, Spanish, teacher certification and community services.

NNCC also offers classes in pre-nursing and others geared to help local residents prepare for employment at the new state maximum-security prison.

NOTICE NNCC COUNSELOR HERE!

Stan Aiazzi, NNCC Dean of Student Services, will be in Ely during registration on Thursday, Sept. 1. He will be available to assist persons who need information on the certificate programs, financial aid, transferring courses, or any other general questions.

Please call 289-3589 between 9:00 A.M. and 3:30 P.M. to schedule an appointment.

New Place, New Face

Northern Nevada Community College has moved to a new office, started a new school year and as of Monday had a new Ely coordinator.

Carole Cornell, who had been the NNCC Ely Coordinator for more than a year, announced her resignation. She will be moving to Elko at some future date because of a job transfer for her husband.

The new coordinator is Ely resident Jan Halstead.

Cornell said the registration drive concluded last week was successful.

She said 126 people registered the last night alone and that 54 to 60 people signed up for classes the week before.

Classes began Tuesday.

She said the biggest interest appeared to be in the pre-nursing courses, the prison employment classes and computer classes.

Included in the prison employment class are business communications, introduction to corrections, English grammar and usage, technical writing workshop and supervisor skill development.

The NNCC office has moved from 612 Aultman St. to 685 Lyons Ave.

Registration begins for 'Kid's College'

Registration for "Kid's College" at Northern Nevada Community College began this morning and will continue through Tuesday. Students can register at the college business office from 7 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. A spokesman said the class times will vary and a complete schedule will be available during registration.

Participants will be able to learn lifelong fitness skills in tennis, karate and aerobic dance. Outdoor activities such as fly fishing, camping, and outdoor safety and hunter safety also will be offered.

Dave Charlebois will teach a class in rocket building during the summer schedule.

Students in grades five through 10 can enhance their reading, social and science skills. Personalized instruction will be offered to students to help them succeed not only in high school, but to make college a more pleasant experience.

Classes in photography, dog obedience, babysitting and first aid are also on the schedule, and an NNCC spokesman said participants should register as early as possible.

For more information interested persons should contact the NNCC student services office at 738-0493.

NNCC to register

Northern Nevada Community College will hold their fall registration on Monday, Aug. 22, and Thursday, Sept. 1, from 2:30 to 7 p.m. at the new location at 685 Lyons Ave. The entrance to NNCC is from the alley in the rear of the building.

The Fall schedule of classes appeared in yesterday's Ely Daily Times, and copies of the schedule also have been distributed to the public library and local stores.

The college is offering a wide variety of courses again this semester including those which help prepare students planning to apply for employment at the maximum security prison currently under construction. Pre-nursing courses also are being offered for those who plan to apply for the LPN program which will begin in Ely in the Fall of 1989.

Dr. Kathie Coopersmith, a local pediatrician and family physician will be the instructor for the Anatomy and Physiology course which is a part of the pre-nursing program.

The Corrections 101 class which has been highly recommended by State Director of Prisons George Sumner, will again be taught by Lt. Jim Wood, director of the Ely Conservation Camp.

General Biology will be offered this semester with a instructor rather than as a telecourse. Gerald Miller, a local resident, will be instructing the lecture and lab portions of the course and will be available during registration to answer questions.

Local business owner, Myrna Everts will be the instructor of "Good Health for Better Life Through Natural Foods." This course will cover a broad range of information including good nutrition and health practices.

Four courses offering instruction in computer knowledge are: Word Processing, Computer Assisted Accounting, and two sections of Introduction to Business Software.

There are several offerings under the Community Service heading. Beginning Photography and Machine Quilting have been favorites for some time now, and the new additions are Leather and Nylon Braiding, Mexican Cooking, and Beginning Guitar. During registration, samples from some of the classes will be on display.

Two local residents who recently graduated from NNCC will be listed as instructors this Fall. Carolyn Mouritsen will be teaching Computer Assisted Accounting, and Delores Manchester will instruct shorthand.

Further information may be obtained by calling Carole Cornell, the local coordinator for NNCC, at 289-3589 or by visiting the office located at 685 Lyons Ave. (alley entrance) from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 12:30 - 3:30 p.m.

OPENING AVAILABLE

Northern Nevada Community College has an immediate opening for an instructor to teach anatomy and physiology. A BS degree in biology is required, with a strong background in anatomy studies. For further information,

NNCC sets fall registration

Northern Nevada Community College will open its doors for fall registration from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sept. 1 and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sept. 2.

The course schedule will appear in the Aug. 24 issue of The Humboldt Sun and will be mailed to Humboldt County residents the week prior to registration.

Financial aid director Joan Williams will be at the center from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 1. Students needing financial aid should call the center, 623-4824, as soon as possible and make an appointment to see Williams.

Counselor Bonnie Bilbao of Elko will be at NNCC from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sept. 1 for academic counseling.

All students anticipating signing up for either English or math for the first time need to take the appropriate placement test. Tests may be taken at the college between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Thursday. Students are strongly urged to call the center and make arrangements to take tests well in advance of registration.

Certain high school juniors and seniors may enroll in a limited number of college courses each semester. A written recommendation from the principal is required. If you have a 2.5 grade point average or higher, you may enroll for a maximum of two courses per semester during your senior year. Juniors must limit themselves to one course each semester, and it must be an occupational or community service class.

The college offers a variety of self-paced courses including business, economics, electronics, history, humanities, business law, math, office administration, word processing, medical terminology and American short story. Some math and science classes are computer assisted. These courses offer working adults flexible scheduling and takes into account individual differences in background and motivation.

Course requirements for the Associate of Arts, Associate of Science, Associate of Applied Science and Associate in General Studies, as well as several one-year certificates are offered at Northern Nevada Community College. Students have a number of choices of classes in English, math and science, U.S. and Nevada constitutions, social sciences, fine arts and humanities and electives in order to complete their degrees.

Several courses of interest to farmers and ranchers include agriculture economics, livestock production and selection and beef cattle production. Foaling procedures, mare care and breeding clinic will be present by Dr. Boyd Spratling from Elko. A week-long agri-business tour of northern California is offered through the Elko campus in October.

Three weekend workshops for teachers are on the schedule: art for the elementary school teachers, awareness unlimited and preventing teacher burnout.

Community service classes are geared to meet the varied interests of the community. Classes range from quilting to computer dBase; auto mechanics for women to western dance; jewelry appreciation to aquacise; from computer accounting to drawing on the right half of the brain.

Students will be pleased to see a number of new courses this semester including an exciting video course, American short story, featuring at least one work from all the great American short story authors such as Nathaniel Hawthorne, Mark Twain, William Faulkner, Ernest Hemingway, John Updike and Flannery O'Connor. Several of the video productions were film festival award winners.

Business folks will be interested in personnel administration, a course that deals with recruiting and employment law; developing job descriptions; evaluating performance; employee training and career development, motivating employees and dealing with difficult employees and worker grievances.

The college is anxious to serve the community and welcomes anyone to come in and inquire about the programs offered or make suggestions on how to better serve the needs of our citizens.

LECTURES

CLASSES

NNCC's NEW ESL TUTORIAL TO BE OFFERED IN THE FALL SEMESTER

Target Population: Students who are proficient in spoken English but have academic needs not addressed in basic ESL or developmental English classes.

Purpose: This course will take students from a basic level of reading and writing in English to the higher competence necessary for tackling more difficult work, such as that of the college classroom. It is not a conversation course, but will instead serve as a bridge between the basic ESL classes already offered and English 117D or 101.

Content: Students will practice the writing process: generating and developing ideas and through a series of rough drafts, organizing their thoughts and polishing their sentences and paragraphs. Some in-class writing will be accomplished on the computer, with basic instruction being given in word processing. Grammar will be taught as problems arise, with special attention given to the areas that often trouble ESL students, including subject-verb agreement, irregular verbs, prepositions, definite and indefinite articles, pronouns, idioms, and word order.

Through readings followed by discussion and exercises, students will learn comprehension skills such as reading with a purpose in mind, determining meaning from context, and evaluating and applying what they have read. Vocabulary enlargement will also be stressed.

Mosaic: Writing and reading books designed for ESL students at this level will be the required texts. The class will be limited to five to eight students, and course content will be adjusted to fit their needs.

Time: 9:00 - 10:00 A.M. / M.W.F.

Instructor: Sharon Hogg has taught ESL students in East Africa and has tutored developmental students in the writing lab at NNCC for the past four (4) years.

NNCC to offer three new courses this fall

University of Nevada Reno will offer three new courses at Northern Nevada Community College this fall, reports UNR's Division of Continuing Education — one course in each of three areas: Curriculum and instruction, English and history.

"Supervised Library Practice: Computers in the School Library" (CI 475/675) will be held Mondays, Aug. 29 through Dec. 19 from 7-9 p.m. at the NNCC Library.

Participants in this course will learn how to set up and automate the school library using "Appleworks". Topics are to include the use of computers in the circulation, acquisition and reference departments, as well as the use of on-line catalogs.

The fee for this two-credit course is $80 for undergraduate and $50 for graduate credit. The college's librarian, Juanita Karr, is the instructor.

"Modern Drama" (ENGL 355), a course examining drama from the late 19th century through the 1940s, is scheduled to meet Tuesdays, Sept. 6 through Dec. 6, from 5:30 - 9 p.m. in Room 14 of McMullen Hall, NNCC.

Drama from various nations will be the focus of this course. Works by Ibsen, Checkhov and Shaw will be studied.

The instructor, Margaret Ann Crawford, is an English teacher at NNCC. The course fee is $120 for three undergraduate credits.

"The Era of the American Revolution: 1763-1789" (HIST 412/612) is slated Thursdays, Sept. 8 through Dec. 8, from 7-10:30 p.m. in Room 17 of McMullen Hall, NNCC.

This course includes an in-depth study of the American Revolution with emphasis on the political, social and military aspects of the times.

Paul Hanna will conduct the course. He is a history instructor at NNCC. The three-credit course fee is $120 for undergraduate and $150 for graduate credit.

Pre-registration for any of these courses can be made with Elko's UNR community coordinator, Juanita Karr, at the college, 901 Elm St., 738-8493, or with UNR's Division of Continuing Education, 784-4046.

Telecourse to be held this month at NNCC

"Special Problems: Curriculum with Young Handicapped Children" will be the title of a telecourse being offered to area residents by the University of Nevada Reno. Classes will be held Wednesdays at Northern Nevada Community College from 4-7 p.m. in the UNITE Room. The first session will be Aug. 31, and classes will continue through Dec. 21.

Young handicapped children's environments, including indoor learning centers and outdoor play areas, will be studied. Other areas to be covered include lesson planning, use of the child's individual education plan and development of strategies for improved curriculum planning.

Eva Essa, Ph.D., acting dean and associate professor of UNR's School of Home Economics, will be the instructor. Cost of the three-credit course will be $120 for undergraduate and $150 for graduate credit.

Information is available at UNR's Division of Continuing Education at (702) 784-4046; registration can be made by calling the same number.

One-year lab technician program to be offered

Beginning in the spring semester at Northern Nevada Community College, a new one-year laboratory technician certificate program will be offered, announces Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction. It will be a condensed version of NNCC's Mining Technology degree program.

The 30-credit-hour certificate will include classes in chemistry, mining and computing and will enable students to take a full year to learn skills necessary for them to get jobs in the mining/analytical laboratory job market. The certificate can be used as a "stepping stone" toward completing the Associate in Applied Science (AAS) degree in Mining Technology while providing a student with some documentation to show possible employers he has had some training in analytical laboratory work before he has received an AAS degree, Greenhaw noted.

"NNCC wants to help students enhance skills in a field that is currently in high demand in the rural Nevada work force," he said. Anyone interested in the program should call Mike McFarlane at NNCC, 738-8493, for more information.

Training offered

Northern Nevada Community College is now offering tutoring to adults who have the need and the interest to bring their reading and/or math skills to a level of functional literacy.

The only requirements for one-on-one tutoring are to be over 17 years of age and to need literacy instruction.

The hours are flexible and the tutoring, which is funded by the national Adult Education Act and the State of Nevada, is free to all students. Please see or call Jan Halstead at the NNCC office at 685 Lyons Avenue (289-3589)

Seminar set tomorrow for ranchers

Northern Nevada Community College's Agriculture Department will conduct a seminar for local ranchers tomorrow from 1-5 p.m. in Room 20 of its McMullen Hall.

Louie Horton of NNCC reported a group of speakers with first-hand knowledge of the ranching industry has agreed to conduct the seminar and question and answer periods are planned.

Registration for the class is slated at 12:45 at the classroom and will cost $10.

Paul Bottari, Frank Haight, Deloyd Satterthwaite and Wayne Fahsholtz will discuss marketing cattle; Jack Wather and Bill McKnight will explain preconditioning; and local veterinarian Boyd Spratling will offer advice on maintaining herd health.

Lab Tech Program Is Offered At NNCC

Northern Nevada Community College will offer a new one-year laboratory technician certificate program beginning in the spring semester. The certificate is a condensed version of NNCC's Mining Technology degree program. The one-year program is designed to help students obtain skills in the mining and analytical laboratory industries in a relatively short period of time, according to Dr. Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction. Anyone interested in the program should call Mike McFarlane at NNCC for more information.

Dean slates NNCC stop

Dr. Neil Ferguson, dean of Continuing Education at the University of Nevada Reno, will be at Northern Nevada Community College Tuesday to meet with Bachelor of General Science students.

According to Juanita Karr, continuing education coordinator, Ferguson will be in the Learning Resource Center at about 1:30 p.m. and will be available into the evening hours.

Annual lecture series commences at NNCC

Northern Nevada Community College will present the first annual lecture on education Tuesday at 4 p.m. in the Northeastern Nevada Museum, according to a college announcement.

The spokesman for NNCC said Dr. Robert Sylwester, a professor of education at the University of Oregon, will give a lecture entitled "How Our Brain Works: How Teachers Can Make it Work Better." According to the announcement, the talk will be a non-technical synthesis of what we know about the capabilities/limitations of the human brain and the information technologies our brain has developed to expand its capabilities.

The spokesman said Sylwester has made more than 200 presentations to groups, and is a nationally recognized elementary education authority. He has a long association with Instructor magazine as a writer and editor.

A reception will follow the lecture. Special recognition will be given to longtime NNCC part-time instructors, but all teachers at all levels in the community are urged to attend, the spokesman said.

ALCOHOL AWARENESS ^{Elko Independent 10/11/88}—The Associated Student Body of Northern Nevada Community College is presenting "Alcohol Awareness Week" all this week on the NNCC campus, with films and guest speakers offering insight on the topic of alcohol abuse. Today at noon, students are invited to view the film Days of Wine and Roses in the student lounge. Tomorrow, a guest speaker from Vitality Center will address students from noon to 1 p.m. in the conference room of Berg Hall. Both presentations are offered free of charge, and those attending are invited to bring a sack lunch.

Education Lecture Is Scheduled Next Week

Dr. Robert Syiwester, professor of education at the University of Oregon, will present the first annual lecture on education sponsored by Northern Nevada Community College. The presentation will be held at the Northeastern Nevada Community College. The presentation will be held at the Northeastern Nevada Museum next Tuesday, October 18, at 4:00 p.m.

This first lecture in what is planned as an annual series on education will celebrate teachers. Special recognition will be given to longtime NNCC part-time instructors, but all teachers at all levels in the community are urged to come.

In the past six years, Dr. Syiwester has made over 200 presentations to groups from Portland to Vancouver, B.C., to Saudi Arabia. A nationally recognized elementary education authority, he has specialized in making scientific and technical subjects meaningful to educational and general audiences. In recent years he has spoken and written on the relevancy of brain research to teaching and learning in the school. He has a long association with Instructor magazine as a writer and editor.

His lecture title will be "How Our Brain Works; How Teachers Can Make It Work Better." The talk is described as a non-technical synthesis of what we know about the capabilities and limitations of the human brain and, second, the information technologies our brain has developed to expand its capabilities (cameras, calculators, computers, etc.). The presentation will suggest general policies and procedures for making the best use of both in educational settings, in an electronic era.

A reception will take place immediately following the lecture.

Tomorrow's noon lecture on art history

Dr. Robert Tracy, curator of Parkinson Archives at the University of Nevada Las Vegas and a modernist art historian, will present a free slide lecture at noon and at 1:15 p.m. tomorrow in room 12 of McMullen Hall at Northern Nevada Community College, announces Sarah Sweetwater, art department head.

She describes his lecture as dealing with "impulses of classicism and romanticism in 19th and 20th century art." He will discuss the romantic vision in English and American art and will pay particular attention to relevant issues confronting artists in contemporary society.

The visit is funded by the Nevada Humanities Committee and the NNCC Art Department and is free to the public, Sweetwater said. Questions and discussions from listeners will follow the lecture.

NNCC slates art tour to Salt Lake exhibits

Community members are invited to participate in an art tour of Salt Lake City sponsored by the Art Department of Northern Nevada Community College. The tour will leave Elko at 6 a.m. on Nov. 5 and return the following evening.

Sarah Sweetwater of NNCC said the group will visit the Gayle Weyer Gallery to see an exhibit by Bonnie Susec. Participants will have an opportunity to talk with the artist when they visit her studio in the Guthrie Complex. The Guthrie Complex houses more than 15 artist's studios, she said.

Also scheduled for the tour is a stop at the studio of Lee Deffebach. Sweetwater said Deffebach is a nationally known abstract expressionist who operates a studio in Tuscarora each summer.

A visit to the University of Utah Art Museum, with a special exhibit of the Greek vase, is also planned.

Another highlight of the trip will be a visit to the Salt Lake City Art Center where the Utah 88 exhibit is on display, the college spokesman said. She said the Utah 88 display is titled the Best of Painting and Sculpture in Utah.

Cost of the trip will be from $75 to $100 depending on the number of participants, Sweetwater said. A deposit of $25 must be paid by 4 p.m. Wednesday to insure a tour reservation, she stressed. The cost will include transportation, museum fees and lodging in the historic Peery Hotel. All participants will also receive one college credit.

AARP driving course scheduled at NNCC

A refresher course to help older drivers improve their skills and prevent traffic accidents will be offered from 1 to 5 p.m. Thursday and from 8 a.m. to noon on Friday at Berg Hall on the campus of Northern Nevada Community College.

Workshop set for Friday

A workshop for receptionists is scheduled for 2 to 5 p.m. Friday in room 17 of McMullen Hall at Northern Nevada Community College. The college and the Nevada Small Business Development Center are co-sponsoring the workshop.

Jill Stringfield and Sally Foo will be instructors for the afternoon session, which is entitled "Reach Out and Be Professional." Participants will learn diplomatic ways to screen telephone calls, make or cancel appointments, and how to use good judgment and discretion in giving out information.

Cost of the workshop is $10 and participants should call 738-8493 by Thursday to register.

EDFP 11/29/88

The course is sponsored by the local chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons and will cost $7. Grace VanDalsen, the local AARP president, said space for the class is limited and anyone 50 or older wanting to take the course should register right away. People interested in taking the course can call 738-8983 in the morning and evenings to register, she noted.

According to VanDalsen the eight-hour course is an opportunity for the elderly to review the handling of adverse driving conditions and traffic hazards. She said the class is taught by trained volunteers. The AARP-sponsored refresher course is the first nationwide, comprehensive curriculum designed especially for older motorists, she explained.

In this submitted photo, jumping instructor Ernest Herrmann is seen riding the French warmblood stallion, Orly du Villemer, as they competed in a three-day event this summer.

Tax course for ranchers

"Tax Preparation for Ranchers" will be taught by Bob Heguy, certified public accountant of Kafoury Armstrong and Company, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at Northern Nevada Community College.

The same course, sponsored by the college and the Nevada Small Business Development Center, also will be taught at the same time in Eureka High School by Mark Paris, a CPA with McMullen McPhee and Company.

Course content will be specific for the needs of ranchers, who must register by Wednesday at the student services office at NNCC. Cost of the class will be $15.

Further information is available from Val Easterly or Pat Warren at 738-8493.

Dressage-jumping clinic slated for Horse Palace

Ernest Herrmann, dressage and combined training instructor, will be in Elko to teach a dressage and jumping clinic from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 19 and 20, in the Spring Creek Horse Palace, according to Pat Warren, head of continuing education at Northern Nevada Community College.

Hour-long dressage lessons will be scheduled both days and group jumping will be from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday. Cost for the jumping class and dressage lessons (two riders each hour) is $25. Individual lessons may be scheduled for $35. There will be no charge for spectators.

From noon to 1 p.m. Saturday an unmounted discussion with the instructor has been planned and homemade chili and salad will be available for a nominal fee.

Herrmann, who conducted his first clinic here in October, was an apprentice of internationally known Nels Von Bruggen of Germany and later came to the United States as a rider with a traveling company of Lippizzan horses. He now teaches dressage to Level IV and manages a hunter/jumper, combined training and dressage stable in Eagle, Idaho.

To help prepare for his visit, riders may practice in the Horse Palace starting at 6:30 p.m. Thursday when a few jumps can be set up and cost of the lights will be divided among riders.

Registrations must be made by Thursday, Nov. 17, with Warren or Jeanette Baker at 738-8493. Evening phones are 738-9626 or 753-6445.

ATRA schedules tests at NNCC Saturday

EDFP 2/8/89

Written examinations for automatic transmission rebuilders, R&R technicians, and service writers will be held at 9 a.m. Saturday at Northern Nevada Community College. The examinations are being given by the Automatic Transmission Rebuilders Association (ATRA).

According to Paul K. Brenkert, executive director, ATRA is a non-profit organization dedicated to the improvement and welfare of the automatic transmission repair industry. Each year the group sponsors more than 500 proficiency tests throughout the country to encourage technical competency and professionalism in the industry, he noted.

Brenkert said, "Consumers should look for a certified shop when they need automatic transmission repair work. ATRA certification helps identify which shops are capable of competently diagnosing and repairing automatic transmission problems."

He said the tests are free to members of the ATRA, but non-members are required to pay a small fee to help defray the cost of the program.

The executive director said individuals wishing to register for the test should contact Darla Sides at the ATRA International Business Office in Ventura, Calif., at (805) 654-1700.

NNCC monthly seminar topic: Feeding livestock

The monthly seminar organized by the Department of Agriculture at Northern Nevada Community College will be about the proper feeding of livestock. It is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. Friday in room 20, McMullen Hall, reports Louis Horton, agriculture department head.

about "Ideas That Have Worked!" and between 3:30 and 4:30 p.m. Ron Torell, Elko County extension livestock specialist, will discuss "Balancing Rations."

Horton reminds everyone the seminar is open to the public.

Dr. Les Krysl, livestock nutritionist from the animal science department of the University of Nevada Reno, will open the program with a discussion titled "Winter Feeding Your Beef Herd and Growing Those Heifers Up Right!"

Following refreshments between 2 and 2:15 p.m., Betsy Bailey, livestock nutritionist and graduate of Colorado State University, will talk about "Minerals — Which Ones Do Your Cattle Need?"

John Reed, a rancher from Jiggs, will speak between 2:45 and 3:15 p.m.

NNCC karate students awarded belts at UNR

Five members of Northern Nevada Community College's karate class recently earned belt advancements in testing at the University of Nevada Reno, announces instructor Baruch Zohar.

Zohar said the students were tested by eighth-degree black belt Hidetaka Nishiyama.

Brian Strain earned a green belt and was given the highest rating of all students in his level, including those from UNR, Zohar said. Gary Noeske earned an orange belt. Jeff Kuhl, Eric Lenz and Joan Hoxane earned yellow belts.

Zohar explained students have to advance through eight levels, each marked by a different color of belt, before they achieve black-belt status. After that, there are 10 degrees of black belt.

A new semester of karate classes starts next week. Zohar said registration will be held at NNCC Monday and Tuesday, and karate classes will be held Tuesdays and Fridays from 7:15 to 8:45 p.m.

Zohar provided this inspirational quote from Nishiyama:

"Of all the world's creatures, only the human being has been granted the capacity to expand and improve mental and physical abilities by his own accord. And so it is with karate-do that this capacity is given another interpretation through the unlimited seeking of improved technique. This unlimited seeking becomes part of the overall expansion of human abilities."

NNCC horse packing class set Saturday

A workshop about "how to make pack trips with horses" will be taught by Evan Dodson starting at 9 a.m. Saturday in Room 14 of McMullen Hall, announces Pat Warren, director of continuing education at Northern Nevada Community College.

Dodson, with 28 years of experience in the guiding and outfitting business, will teach students how to tie knots, choose suitable pack animals, select and adjust appropriate pack saddles or harness and balance loads to prevent hurting the horses.

He will discuss what supplies and gear to pack and what feed concentrates to take for the animals.

The class will move in the afternoon to the auction barn at the Elko County Fairgrounds for a demonstration with horses and equipment.

Registration is still open and may be made Saturday for a $20 fee before the class begins, Warren said. There will be no charge for 4-H members.

A one-day ranch photography workshop with Linda Dufurrena, who lives on a ranch near Denio, is slated for 9 a.m. Saturday in Room 17 of McMullen Hall at Northern Nevada Community College. Registration will be at the door the morning of the class, according to Pat Warren, director of continuing education.

Warren pointed out that Dufurrena is a well-known professional who sells her work throughout the country. She usually is represented with several slides and photographs in the annual Nevada travelling photography show put together by Northeastern Nevada Museum and has presented this class several times through NNCC in Winnemucca.

Basic photography techniques and composition will be illustrated with her slides. Participants should bring their cameras.

Cost for the class will be $20. More information is available from Warren at 738-8483.

Financial aid topic of NNCC workshop

Types of financial aid for college students will be the topic of a workshop scheduled Wednesday, Jan. 25, at Northern Nevada Community College. The workshop will be held from 6:30 to 8 p.m. in the conference room of Berg Hall.

Joan Williams, director of financial aid at NNCC, said many people do not plan for education beyond high school because they are not aware of resources available for education and training. Without awareness that financial-aid programs are available to them, their career goals may never be attained, she added.

Williams reports the workshop will address loans, grants, college study programs, scholarships and aid available for special populations. Included will be financial assistance available through the single-parent program, Bureau of Indian Affairs grants and Veterans' educational programs.

Financial Aid Awareness is a project of the Nevada Association of Financial Aid Administrators (NAFAA), a non-profit professional organization. Williams said NAFAA members represent post-secondary educational institutions, lending institutions, government agencies and individuals in Nevada.

NNCC Sets Spring Semester Lecture Series

Northern Nevada Community College's spring semester lecture series—titled "The Soul of Small Places"—will begin Feb 15 with a lecture on Carlin, according to an announcement from the college.

The Rev. LaVern Inzer will offer the talk, titled "Carlin, Nevada: Going for the Gold," at noon in Rooms 8 and 9 of Berg Hall, on the college campus.

Inzer, who calls himself a "circuit rider" for Carlin, Valmy and Wildhorse, has been a Carlin resident since 1970 and has interviewed many longtime residents. He says his lecture will attempt to "recreate Carlin-area history through eyewitness accounts of old-timers," including Flying Hawk, a 106-year-old Beowawe man interviewed by Inzer.

Upcoming lectures in the series include "Wells, Nevada: Many Routes" by Anita Cory, and "Eureka, Nevada: I've Found It," by Connie Hicks.

This picture, taken at the last Elko County Fair and Livestock Show during the rabbit judging, indicates a great interest in the project. Therefore, Northern Nevada Community College is co-sponsoring a rabbit, cavy and poultry clinic Saturday at the fairgrounds.

Rabbit clinic scheduled Saturday at fairgrounds

The third annual rabbit clinic co-sponsored by the Lamoille 4-H rabbit club and Northern Nevada Community College is slated to begin at 9 a.m.

Saturday in the sale barn at Elko County Fairgrounds, announces Pat Warren, director of continuing education at NNCC.

Saturday morning will include discussions on nutrition, conformation and common diseases and local 4-H members will describe the history and characteristics of their particular breeds of rabbits.

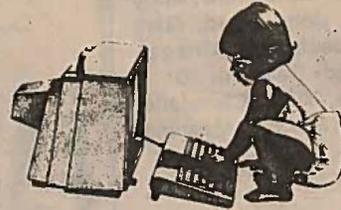

After the clinic there will be a rabbit, cavy (guinea pig) and poultry show with purebred and crossbred sections in each division. Entry fees will be $2 per class.

Clinic participants may sign up at the door and are encouraged to bring their animals. Cost, which includes informative "handouts," is $5 per person, $12 per family and $2 for children under 12.

Warren reports the clinic has been attended by more than 40 participants each year, and says interest continues to grow in the project.

More information is available from Mary Ann Heseltine at 753-6765 or Warren at 738-8493.

Wildlife Instruction Is Topic Of UNR Course

"Special Topics: Project Wild," a course designed to acquaint educators with methods of teaching environmental wildlife topics to students, is being offered in Elko next month by the University of Nevada-Reno.

Class meets Fri., March 10, from 4-10 p.m. and Sat., March 11, from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. at Northern Nevada Community College, Lundberg Hall, Science Room. The one-credit course fee is $40 for undergraduate and $50 for graduate credit.

Project Wild is a joint effort made by educators, resource managers, and conservationists to provide young students with information regarding their environment and the wildlife that exists within it. Its overall purpose is to motivate children to take constructive action to conserve wildlife and natural resources. Participants will learn how to implement the program in the classroom.

Dave Sanger, B.S., B.A., is the instructor. He is the education coordinator for the Nevada Department of Wildlife.

NNCC, Kiwanis Club Sponsor Livestock Judging

Northern Nevada Community College and the Elko Kiwanis Club are holding their annual invitational Livestock Judging contest on Saturday, March 11, on the NNCC campus. Sign up is at 8:30 a.m. at the college shop building and judging begins at 9:00 a.m. in the nearby fairgrounds auction barn. There is a $2.50 registration fee that includes lunch on the campus. Three classes each of sheep, beef and swine will be considered by contestants.

Competing 4-H and FFA members will be judged in teams and as individuals. FFA members will be divided into Junior and Senior members and 4-H into Junior, Intermediate and Senior age groups. There will also be a division for the younger set, so future 4-H members can try their hand at livestock judging with help and guidance from a teacher/leader.

Event Chairman Louie Horton reported there will be a new contest included in the day's events. Those wishing to compete at sheep showmanship may sign up to hold the sheep while they are being judged. The sheep showmen, in turn, will be judged on their expertise at this task and the top sheep showman will also receive an award. No one who is competing in the judging contest is eligible to compete in the showmanship contest.

The Elko Kiwanis Club will serve lunch at noon to all participants, helping crews, chaperones and leaders.

Ribbons will be awarded to the high point individuals and high point team, Horton reported. Plaques will be presented to the high scoring individual judge in each of the six judging divisions.

The Elko County 4-H Livestock Judging teams in Junior, Intermediate and Senior divisions will be selected at the conclusion of the event. These three teams will compete in the State 4-H Judging Contest in Reno during the Nevada Junior Livestock Show, May 10-12.

Horton and the Elko Kiwanis Club extended an invitation to all FFA, 4-H and prospective 4-H members to come and enjoy the day.

Reading Group Will Study Native American Writings

An evening reading group is being formed in Elko as part of a year-long series of programs entitled, "To Carry the Dream Wheel: Native American Voices in the Old/New World."

The group will meet each Tuesday evening at 7 p.m. at the Elko County Library. The public is invited to join the group, and there is no registration fee.

Spokeswomen Georgia Hemsley and Cyd McMullen said the purpose of the year-long program is to encourage the public to read and discuss recent works by selected Native American writers. A noon reading group will meet at Northern Nevada Community College weekly as part of the same series, they noted.

An author's tour has been scheduled in conjunction with the reading program, Hemsley and McMullen said, noting poet Joy Harjo will be visiting the Elko area in late March.

The group is sponsored by the Nevada Humanities Committee in cooperation with the Elko County Library, the spokeswomen explained. Anyone interested in further information on the Native American series is encouraged to phone Hemsley or McMullen at NNCC, 738-8483; Laurie Risland at 738-3731, or Hailie Gunn at 738-3066.

Rabbit show termed success by sponsors

Northern Nevada Community College, Lamoille and Mountain City 4-H clubs co-sponsored a rabbit clinic Feb. 25 at the college. Members of both clubs presented the history of various rabbit breeds and standards to the 25 people attending the morning classes.

Christ Weller and Krishna Graham presented information on satins; Brett Withers, Champagne D'Argents; Daren Withers and Travis Heseltine, Rexs; Wayne Withers, Himalayans and Nathan Weller, Angoras.

Mary Ann Heseltine, Lamoille 4-H rabbit leader, gave a presentation on rabbit nutrition. A video from the American Rabbit Breeders' Association, "Proper Methods to Administer Medication," was shown.

Following the lunch break, Travis

Graham gave a presentation on "Back-yard Poultry Raising," exhibiting some of his chickens. Vern Marion, 4-H small animal project director, gave a talk on health and general care of poultry.

The members were divided into groups and judged the rabbits. This was the beginning of 4-H rabbit-judging teams in Elko County.

George Cole of Spring Creek donated the use of cooping cages for the show. He built the special show cages for the Northern Nevada Rabbit and Cavy Club for its shows.

NNCC offers signing class

A beginning sign language class for teachers is being offered this spring at Northern Nevada Community College commencing next week. The seven-week class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. each Wednesday.

Instructor Pat Waldvogel said students may enroll at the first class session in Room 17 of McMullen Hall. One credit will be given for the course, which is designated EDUC 195B, Sign Language for Teachers.

The instructor said individuals wanting more information about the course should contact her at 738-4121.

Travel Films Set At College

Elkoans feeling a bit of early-spring wanderlust are invited to attend a free series of educational travel films at Northern Nevada Community College.

This Sunday, April 2, "The Glacier Express—Swiss Adventure" will be screened and, on April 9, "Treasury of Vienna" and "Austria" will be shown.

The series continues on May 7 with films featuring Switzerland and Germany.

ELKO IND 3/29/89

All of the travel films are scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. in Berg Hall on the NNCC campus. The films are offered as a primer course for those attending a college-sponsored tour of Germany, Austria and Switzerland this June—but those unable to make the trip are still invited to view the presentations.

Sign-up deadline for the trip is April 16. More information is available by phoning Sarah Sweetwater at NNCC, 738-8493.

NNCC Schedules Lecture Series

As part of an ongoing program of cultural and visual literacy through the arts, the Northern Nevada Community College art department is sponsoring a special lecture series next week in Elko, Wells and Carlin.

The series, presented by Dr. Robert Tracy, assistant professor of modern art at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, will focus on artists including Monet, Van Gogh, Gauguin and Cezanne, as well as modern and avante garde artists.

Tracy's first lecture, "The Value of Crisis, Fall of the Masterpiece," concerning Monet, is scheduled April 3 from 12:45-1:15 p.m. in the Forum room at Wells High School.

Three lectures are planned April 4 in Elko. "The Lure of Modernism: Originality vs. Imitation," examining society's needs and how they affect art, is scheduled at 11:12 a.m. in the old Elko High School gymnasium, to be followed at 1 p.m. by a related talk on "Official Art' vs. the Avante Garde" in Berg Hall on the NNCC campus.

At 7 p.m., "Culture of Negation: Alienation and Suicide," which concerns Van Gogh, Cezanne and Gauguin and their attempts to survive in an inflexible society, will be presented, also in Berg Hall.

The final installment in the series, "Excess, the Driving Force of Modernism," is set for April 5 at 9:15 a.m. in the Carlin High School art room.

NNCC art instructor Sarah Sweetwater notes transportation from Elko to the Wells and Carlin presentations can be arranged, and further information obtained, by phoning her at NNCC, 738-8493.

Agri-educational event set April 27 at NNCC

Northern Nevada Community College's agri-business department and the Nevada Small Business Development Center will sponsor an all-day "agri-educational event" from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday, April 27, in Berg Hall, announces Louie Horton, chairman of the ag department.

He explained, "We will offer several short classes throughout the day, and our keynote speaker is internationally known Dr. Hiram Drache — someone everyone in the ranching community can benefit from."

He said Drache is an agri-economist who grew up on a farm, was a rancher and has been researching and writing about agriculture since 1950. During his years in the industry, he specialized in cattle feeding and introduced many innovations that have been featured in regional and international agricultural periodicals.

Drache will discuss husband and wife teamwork, progressive attitudes, record keeping, planning formats, change and adaptability and management techniques in his talk titled "Keys to Ranching Success."

Other speakers will include Bill McDorman from the Idaho Department of Agriculture, who will speak on high-altitude seed production; and Richard Gardner of Ketchum Gardens, who will discuss recreational opportunities for the ranch.

"We are quite excited about this event," Horton said. "We've worked hard to bring these speakers to Elko and encourage everyone in the agricultural community to attend."

Pre-registration by April 24 is required. Cost is $15 per person or $20 per couple, which includes lunch. Family rates also may be arranged through Horton or Valerie Easterly at 738-8493.

NNCC sets garden class Thursday

Home owners and backyard gardeners are invited to a gardening clinic Thursday at Northern Nevada Community College, reports Louie Horton. The class is scheduled from 3:15 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. in Room 7 of Berg Hall.

Horton said NNCC's Agri-Business Department has arranged for Bill McDorman of Ketchum, Idaho, to conduct the clinic. He explained McDorman is a gardening specialist with many years of experience growing flowers, vegetables and herbs at high altitudes. He said the gardener prides himself in finding, growing and documenting the characteristics of plant varieties from around the world.

Horton added, "Bill has a deep love for plants... strong enough to survive in our mountain climate. At his nursery, he grows trial gardens with hundreds of new varieties of wild flowers, vegetables and herbs."

McDorman also is scheduled to answer questions from local gardeners.

Orchestra program set for Elko students

Three hundred Elko students are slated to attend a special afternoon lecture-performance by the Northern Nevada Concert Orchestra tomorrow. The program, entitled "An Afternoon in Old Vienna," will be presented at 2 p.m. at the Elko Convention Center.

According to Charles Greenhaw of NNCC, the program is designed to encourage young people to evaluate the importance of musical expression in their lives and demonstrate to them how mankind communicates culture and mind state through art, dance and music.

Orchestra director George Rosenberg will lead the orchestra, recreate a slice of music history and describe the political and social climate of Vienna around 1815. Using the orchestra, he will discuss the way attitudes and political actions changed the modes of self-expression in music and dance, Greenhaw said.

Northern Nevada Community College received a grant from the Nevada Humanities Committee to sponsor the afternoon program.

Last NNCC noon lecture Wednesday

The last of the Great Basin lectures at Northern Nevada Community College is scheduled for noon Wednesday in Room 8 of Berg Hall. Mark Ports, life science instructor, will discuss the mountains he says are often described as "islands in a sea of sagebrush."

His lecture will be accompanied by slides as he discusses the variety of mammals, birds, plants and invertebrates that colonized the mountains in the Great Basin during a much wetter climatic period 20,000 years ago. He will describe the creatures, tell where they came from, explain how they got here and speculate on what the future holds for them.

The lecture is free. "Bring a sack lunch and a friend," said an NNCC spokesman.

Spectators welcome at Al Dunning clinic

The Al Dunning Clinic for horsemen, arranged by Northern Nevada Community College and scheduled this weekend at Spring Creek Horse Palace, is full and has a waiting list for riders but plenty of room for spectators, announces Pat Warren, head of continuing education.

The spectator fee will be $10 for all day. No observers will be allowed in the arena on horseback, but during the noon hour, Dunning will discuss some of his videotapes and will be available to answer questions, she explained, and noted the concession stand will be open.

Dunning, who lives in Scottsdale, Ariz., has won many professional competitions in this country and is sought after as a teacher internationally, Warren said. He recently returned from Essen, Germany, where he was invited to put on a working cow-horse demonstration at the huge, annual international Equitana.

He will be in Argentina in August to instruct professional trainers who belong to the American Quarter Horse Association. Clinics also are scheduled this year in Australia, Japan, New Zealand and Brazil.

Cutting classes have been scheduled Saturday evening and early Sunday morning and there will be a morning and an afternoon session each day to accommodate reining students.

Warren noted some Mount Lassen College students are coming from Susanville, Calif., as spectators.

Stress classes for educators set next week

A workshop designed to provide educators with an understanding of personal stress, where it comes from, what it does, and how to cope with it will be offered in Elko next week by the University of Nevada Reno.

"Special Topics: Coping with Stress-Stress Workshop for Educators" (CU 491/691) is scheduled to meet Friday from 4 to 10 p.m. and Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Northern Nevada Community College, McMullen Hall, Room 18. The one-credit course fee is $40 for undergraduate or $50 for graduate credit.

Mary Maples, a professor in UNR's Counseling and Guidance Personnel Services Department, is to be instructor.

Registration can be accomplished by calling Elko's UNR community coordinator, Juanita Karr, at the college, 738-8493.

Marketing class set for June 20 at NNCC

Sam Males, director of the Nevada Small Business Development Centers, will be the featured speaker during a workshop slated for 8 a.m. June 20 at Northern Nevada Community College. The session will cover market strategies for small business owners and marketing managers.

According to Valerie Easterly of the Nevada Small Business Development Center, one of the sponsors for the program, Males will also discuss marketing tactics; how to organize the market planning process, the data collection process and the analysis of information; how to write a concise and coherent marketing plan; and how to follow through.

She said the class will be held in the college's conference room and the $5 fee includes a continental breakfast. Reservations should be made through the Elko Chamber of Commerce office at 738-7135 by June 19, she stressed.

Easterly said the program is a part of the chamber's monthly speaker's breakfast series. The North East Nevada Development Authority is the third sponsor, she added.

Registration begins for 'Kid's College'

Registration for "Kid's College" at Northern Nevada Community College began this morning and will continue through Tuesday. Students can register at the college business office from 7 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. A spokesman said the class times will vary and a complete schedule will be available during registration.

Participants will be able to learn lifelong fitness skills in tennis, karate and aerobic dance. Outdoor activities such as fly fishing, camping, and outdoor safety and hunter safety also will be offered.

Dave Charlebois will teach a class in rocket building during the summer schedule.

Students in grades five through 10 can enhance their reading, social and science skills. Personalized instruction will be offered to students to help them succeed not only in high school, but to make college a more pleasant experience.

Classes in photography, dog obedience, babysitting and first aid are also on the schedule, and an NNCC spokesman said participants should register as early as possible.

For more information interested persons should contact the NNCC student services office at 738-8493.

Training seminar set at NNCC

Representatives of Measurement and Control Technology, Inc. (MAC Tech) are offering a training seminar on their products from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. tomorrow at Northern Nevada Community College.

Paul Connors explained the company sells valves, pumps and instruments for all types of fluid systems. The company's field training unit includes more than 200 operational examples of its products, in addition to several cross-sectioned examples.

Connors added those involved with fluid systems will be able to see many products in actual operation, pressure tested and technically discussed. "We doubt that you have ever seen anything so well designed to answer your questions," he said.

The MAC Tech training van has been touring many of the state's mines and communities and participated in last weekend's Mining Expo here in Elko.

FACULTY

AND

STAFF

NNCC educator Charles Greenhaw tells of college history, activities

May, another class of liberal arts majors, nurses, diesel mechanics, mining technicians and potential businessmen will have taken their certificates or associate degrees.

In summer, NNCC is at its sleepest — green as the desert can be green, sometimes windy but still beautiful with the snow-mantled Ruby Mountains rising into the Nevada blue.

Elko Community College opened for classes Sept. 27, 1967. A spirited group of local citizens led a fund-raising drive that allowed the college to start and which eventually attracted the attention of Howard Hughes. Hughes' donations encouraged the Nevada Legislature to fund "comprehensive community colleges" in the state. In 1969, Elko Community College became a part of the University of Nevada System. It was chartered for a five-fold mission: general education transfer courses, occupational-technical programs, developmental and community education, and counseling and guidance programs.

Over the years, the college has added programs to benefit the people. NNCC inherited the practical nursing program of the Elko School of Nursing in 1969, and a decade later added associate degree nursing. In 1979, diesel mechanics was first offered as a certificate program. An associate-degree program in mining technology — emphasizing geotechnical, metallurgical and engineering curricula — commenced in 1984. Later, diesel and automotive technician programs were merged into an associate degree in technical arts. Recently, they have become a part of the concept of the Center for Mining Education which provides "contract training" for gold mine companies in the college service area. A highly regarded small business development center, the child development center and the adult learning center are showcase programs at NNCC.

NNCC's full-time teaching faculty is small, and much of the teaching load is carried by Elko citizens. But the staff is versatile and effective, and committed to teaching, to practical affairs and to public service.

Several instructors regularly contribute essays and scholarly articles about the Great Basin, another co-authors a computing textbook, and two science instructors have written a book on the natural history of the Ruby Mountains.

Many NNCC graduates have been as distinguished as the town of Elko and the college campus have been special for their small size. The college has produced national winners in VICA (Vocational-Industrial Clubs of America), government officials and many professional leaders in Elko life.

Students in college composition classes regularly publish papers in the local historical quarterly. The Cowboy Poetry Gathering — now internationally famous — originated in an NNCC community education project.

The Gathering couldn't have happened without Elko, the buckaroo shrine of the Great Basin. It couldn't have happened without NNCC either. "Town" and "gown" are inseparable in this improbable setting, where strong individualism, with traces of anarchy, reigns. Even after so short a season, year after year, each knows that the other is special.

By Charles Greenhaw
Two places — Nevada's first community college and the storied old cowtown/mining camp of Elko — really are one. Northern Nevada Community College and Elko are as integrated as "town and gown" can be, and one cannot write about one without writing about the other.

In its infancy, NNCC was called Elko Community College, but when it had study centers at Ely, Winnemucca, Battle Mountain and several other rural communities, the name change from Elko to Northern Nevada became inevitable.

In late August, as the college year begins, NNCC is at its snappiest. Already the air has the crispness of fall, and the Great Basin desert displays subtle colors. Swarms of people come into town for summer's last weekend at the Elko County Fair. Nearly a thousand students rush to the campus to begin their annual renewal of classes.

All fall, there are classes, excursions, special lectures and performances. At September's end, everyone tours Lamolle Canyon to enjoy green, yellow and red leaves of the quakes making brilliant the flanks of the mountains.

The college-community orchestra and the college-community singers begin to practice for the line-up of Thanksgiving and Christmas concerts. More students will want computing classes than the college can offer.

In October, the Aggies will take their annual California agribusiness grand tour. Musica Antiqua will surprise newcomers with its faithfulness to Baroque, and the Little Theater Company may revive dinner theater in Elko.

In spring, the cross country class will test the powder snows around Wildhorse Reservoir, the famous Cowboy Poetry Gathering will draw worshippers from all over the West, and by the time Elko's lilacs bloom in

Flammang opens jewelery exhibit at Elko museum

Amy Buckingham-Flammang of Spring Creek is the Spotlight Craftsman through Oct. 15 in the Northeastern Nevada Museum Galleria. Her exhibition of gold jewelery is sponsored by the Museum Guild.

Buckingham-Flammang was born in Kansas City, Mo. She received a bachelor's degree from Mills College in Oakland, Calif. She studied at the Craft Students League in New York City and the University of Kansas at Lawrence. She earned master's degrees in education and fine arts from Tyler School of Art, Elkins Park, Pa.

Through her career, she has been part owner and manager of the Craft Workshop, New York City; studio assistant at Tyler; instructor of jewelery at Abington Adult School,

Abington, Pa.; instructor of metalsmithing, Arrowmont School of Arts and Crafts, Gatlinburg, Tenn.; assistant professor of metalsmithing, Western Illinois University, Macomb, Ill.; visiting artist, Metro State College, Denver, Colo.; and adjunct professor of art at Northern Nevada Community College in Elko.

She was part owner and manager of Craft Workshop, New York City. In 1976, Buckingham-Flammang started 14k Combinations, a wholesale gold jewelery business in Illinois and later owned Gold Combination, Ltd., in New York City. She has moved this business to Spring Creek and Elko, now using the name Buckingham Gold. Most of her work is custom work.

Buckingham-Flammang first became interested in making jewelery as a child, but didn't begin developing the skill until her college years. She taught the art of metalsmithing several years before beginning here career as a jewelery designer. She teaches lost-wax casting and will have a class starting in October at NNCC.

Buckingham-Flammang uses two methods to make her gold jewelery — fabricating the jewelery from thin sheets of gold and gold wire, or by casting, using the lost-wax method. Simple pieces of jewelery can be made without elaborate casting equipment and only a few simple tools.

She has exhibited and received awards at many jewelery shows throughout the United States.

The museum is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sundays. Admission is free.

Glenda Penrod weds Richard E. Culver

Glenda M. Penrod and Richard E. Culver were united in marriage on June 27 during a reunion of the Culver family in Colorado. Both are from Elko.

The bride is the daughter of Margu-rite Johnston of Elko, and the bridegroom's mother is Minnie M. Culver of Montrose, Colo.

The couple was married at the home of Robert and Joyce Culver on Spring Creek Mesa near Montrose. The wedding took place under the apple trees at the Culver home with the Rev. Nick Resovich officiating.

John Culver of Colfax, Wash., gave the bride in marriage. The best man was Robert K. Culver of Montrose, brother of the bridegroom. Melinda Culver, daughter of the bridegroom, served as the maid of honor.

Following the ceremony and refreshments, the couple was charivariied by the wedding guests. The Culvers make their home in Elko.

Part-time instructors recognized by NNCC

Elko Daily 10-29-88
Northern Nevada Community College honored its part-time instructors last week with a wine and cheese reception at Northeastern Nevada Museum, according to Pat Warren, director of continuing education. She said approximately 50 NNCC educators attended the first "Celebrating Teaching" lecture, which is planned as an annual event.

After a talk on making teaching more effective by Robert Sytwester, professor of education at the University of Oregon in Eugene, Elkoans who have taught courses for more than five years at NNCC were recognized. Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction, conducted the ceremony in which pins were awarded by department heads.

Warren said NNCC would not be able to offer the variety of classes it does were it not for these people. "They perform a real service to the community," she added.

Steven Ashworth dies at age 41; services set

Steven James Ashworth, 41, died of an apparent heart attack while hunting Friday near Jackpot.

He was born Aug. 15, 1947, in Compton, Calif., and had lived in Elko for the past nine years, coming from Reno. He had been reared in the Virginia City and Carson City areas.

He was a graduate of the University of Nevada Reno and had been an outdoor recreation planner for the Elko District of the Bureau of Land Management.

He was a Vietnam veteran, a member of the Elko Masonic Lodge and the Reno Veterans of Foreign Wars. He had participated as a judge at the Elko Science Fair for several years and often gave woodcutting demonstrations to the Boy Scouts. He was an avid outdoorsman.

He married Madeline Stone, April 12, 1969, in Verdi.

Survivors include his wife of Elko; daughters, Cindy and Vicki Ashworth, Elko; mother and stepfather, Treva and Arnold Smith, and father and stepmother, Richard and Beverly Ashworth, all of Elko; brothers, Mike of Reno, Tim of Palm Springs, Calif., Bob of Winnemucca and Jason Smith of Freemont, Calif.; sisters, Arlene Hall, Sacramento, Calif., Karen Ashworth, Carson City, and Judy Smith, Freemont.

Funeral services, with members of the Masonic Lodge officiating, will be conducted at 10 a.m. tomorrow at Burns Funeral Chapel. Interment will follow in the Elko city cemetery.

Visitation will be from 2-6 p.m. today at Burns Funeral Home.

In his memory, contributions are suggested to the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children, care of 1025 First Street in Elko, or a charity of the donor's choice.

Tours to Hawaii, Europe available through NNCC

Tour tickets to Hawaii or to Alpine regions of Austria, Italy and Switzerland would make wonderful Christmas gifts, says Sarah Sweetwater, head of the art department and tour director for Northern Nevada Community College. Deposits of $100 are due Jan. 24 for both tours, but since there are only 15 spaces available for the Hawaiian tour, Sweetwater suggests earlier reservations.

The Hawaiian tour is scheduled for spring break — March 18-25. The Grand Alpine tour is slated June 18-July 2.

Based on double-room occupancy and four passengers to a car, the Hawaiian tour price is $991 and includes all pre-trip lectures and films, round trip air fare from Salt Lake City, inter-island air fare to Maui and Kauai, four days at Maui Kaanapali Villa (beach front condos), three days at Kauai Hilton

12-14-88

Beach Villas and a luxury car on both islands.

Sightseeing, horseback riding, golf, snorkeling and tennis will be available.

"Kauai is a sportsman's paradise," Sweetwater said. Outrigger canoeing, water skiing, kayaking, windsurfing and sailing are possible and deep sea or bone fishing expeditions can be arranged.

Sites to be visited include island historical museums, plantation homes, Hanapepe Valley, Waimea Canyon, Kalakau Lookout or the old Russian Fort on the South Shore of Kauai, the "garden island."

On the north shore, sites such as Lumahai Beach where "South Pacific" was filmed, Wailai Mission House, Hanalei Valley, the Fern Grotto, Kamokila Hawaiian Village or the Botanic Gardens may be seen.

Visits to the Kilauea Light House, Bird Sanctuary, Lava Stone Church and to the studios and galleries of artists are all available with veteran tour guide Sweetwater.

Jan. 25 is due date for the second deposit of $500 and the balance is due Feb. 15, she said.

For the Alpine trip, there is room for 30 people. The price is about $2,900 based on double room occupancy, which includes round trip TWA tickets from Salt Lake City to Vienna; first-class hotel accommodations in cities such as Vienna, Salzburg, Oberammergau, Geneva, Lucerne and Amsterdam; and a three-day Rhine cruise.

Highlights will include a visit to Mozart's birthplace and museum, Nymphenburg Castle or Amalienburg Hunting lodge, Reformation Monument and Jet d'Eau Fountain, Lion Monument and medieval covered bridges, the Lorelei Rock and a Dutch dinner party.

The second deposit of $500 is due in February and the balance by April 25.

Deposits may be mailed to Sarah Sweetwater, in care of Northern Nevada Community College, 901 Elm St., or 1375 Oak St., Elko 89801. More information is available from her at 738-8493 or 738-5770.

Four NNCC instructors have works published

EDFP 11/4/88

Northern Nevada Community College announces several of its instructors are authors of recently published or forthcoming works:

Biology instructor Mark Ports and his wife, Lois, a teacher at Grammar School No. 2, conducted a two-year field study which involved the live trapping of small mammals. The results of the study have been published in the Great Basin Naturalist, a journal of Brigham Young University. The paper is entitled "Small Mammal Communities Found in Pluvial Ruby Lake." As a result of the study, NNCC notes, 34 species of mammals have been added to the checklist used by the personnel of the Ruby Lake Wildlife Refuge.

Carl Diekhans, director of mathematics and computer education at NNCC, is co-author of a computer business applications textbook. The recently published second edition is entitled BASIC Problem-Solving in Microsoft. The textbook, published by a division of McGraw-Hill, is used in computer business applications in about 50 college and universities, NNCC reports.

Georgeanna Smith, NNCC director of nursing, is a contributor to a nursing textbook, Geriatric Care Manual. Published by Atlas Publishing Company, the book will be used by health-care facilities that train geriatric nursing aides. "The first responses to the book have been greater than expected," Smith said.

"Desert of Riches" is the title of an article by Charles Greenhaw of NNCC. The essay is the latest in a series of commentaries on life in the Great Basin. It will appear in the 1989 Halycon. It will be published this spring. Greenhaw's "Wall Street West" essay has been republished in the book, East of Eden and West of Zion, soon to be released by the University of Nevada Press.

Volunteer, Teacher Of Year Named

The Northern Nevada Community College Foundation recently honored its volunteer of the year and teacher of the year.

Foundation chairwoman Ginger Rackley said Connie Satterthwaite—a foundation trustee and past vice-chair of the organization—earned top volunteer honors for her many years of service to the facility. Aside from her volunteer work, Satterthwaite is also a student at the college, Rackley noted.

NNCC named Karen Martin its teacher of the year. Martin, who instructs behavioral science courses at the college, has been on the faculty since 1975.

Satterthwaite and Martin were presented with awards recognizing their achievements at the college's recent fund raising dinner-dance, Rackley reported.

Colorado plane crash kills 3 Elko children

GARFIELD, Colo. (AP) — Federal investigators today began examining the charred wreckage of a single-engine plane in which three Elko children died and their parents were critically hurt Tuesday.

The Piper Cherokee 140 carrying John Shippen, 38, his wife Shirley, 33, and their three children crashed and burned below the crest of 11,600-foot Monarch Pass about 5 p.m. yesterday. The crash site was about a mile west of this west-central Colorado community and about 20 miles west of Poncha Springs.

Killed in the crash were the three Shippen children — Charity, 5, Jonathan, 3, Serena, four months — authorities said.

The cause of the crash remained under investigation today, with National Transportation Safety Board and Federal Aviation Administration investigators at the scene. Authorities said weather conditions, which were clear when the plane crashed, have been ruled out as a possible factor in the crash.

The elder Shippens are in the burn unit at Penrose Hospital in Colorado Springs, where they were airlifted last night after receiving emergency treatment at Salida Hospital.

Shirley Shippen was in critical but stable condition with second- and third-degree burns over 35 to 40 percent of her body, hospital spokeswoman Kitty Bethune said. She said John Shippen was in serious but stable condition, with second- and third-degree burns over 35 percent of his body.

Bob Johnson of the NTSB Denver office said preliminary indications are that the Shippens had left Pueblo, Colo., and were bound for Salt Lake City when their plane crashed.

Witnesses said the plane, headed west toward Monarch Pass, was seen maneuvering in an attempt to gain altitude to clear the pass before it veered suddenly and crashed.

"All of a sudden, there was a big cloud of smoke from the dirt, and then we saw smoke from the fire," said Harry Armstrong, who works at the Four Seasons restaurant near Garfield. "It was quite a noise."

The crash site was a few hundred yards from the Boss Lake Trail west of Garfield, and rescue vehicles were able to make their way to about three-quarters of a mile from the wreckage, officials said.

Bob Bell, a newsman for radio station KVRH in Salida, described the wreckage: "The wings were ripped off and the fuselage was a mass of twisted, scorched metal."

Bell said the burning plane touched off a small fire, but it was extinguished before it could spread far.

Information provided on survivors of wreck

Friends and acquaintances of Shirley and John Shippen, who were badly injured yesterday in a Colorado airplane accident that claimed the lives of their three children (see adjacent story), today provided information regarding the couple.

Shippen, 38, is employed as a mechanic at Newmont Gold Company's Gold Quarry Mine north of Carlin. He has been with the company since Aug. 6, 1984.

He previously was employed by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management and moved to Elko in September 1978 from Worland, Wyo., in a transfer with the BLM. Local employees of the agency who know him reported Shippen left the BLM in January 1984 to attend a school in Utah to prepare for a career with the mining company.

Shippen also is one of the founders of the local soccer league and was a coach for a period of time, although he has not been active in the league in the past few years.

He has owned an airplane for some time, and his friends described him as an avid pilot. They reported the Shippens were returning from a vacation visit with relatives in North Carolina.

Mrs. Shippen was a secretary for the Elko Chamber of Commerce from March 1982 until January 1983.

The Shippens are members of Grace Baptist Church in Elko. Funeral arrangements for the three Shippen children had not been determined at presstime today, according to a church spokesman.

A spokesman for Penrose Hospital in Colorado Springs said at 2 p.m. today that the Shippens' conditions were unchanged — she was in critical but stable condition and he was in serious but stable condition.

"I don't know what I'll do this summer," Grandpa Al Warmouth said as I drove him back to the nursing home. We had gone to lunch together and he had talked about his work at the NNCC Child Center.

"I give Marilee a hug every day. I give most of the kids a hug every day too. But the Center will be closed this summer."

"I started working at the Center four years ago. I was restless at the home, and the head nurse suggested that I might go over to the Child Center and be Grandpa. 'You don't have to do anything,' she said. 'You let the kids do it.'

"So I went and met Marilee. Pretty soon I read to them and they flocked around. And they asked me to read some more."

Grandpa Al is 85. He is one of the foster grandparents at the Child Center. During the regular college year the Center is the daytime home for about forty preschoolers aged three to five. To the kids and to many of the college students and to Marilee Harper, the director, Grandpa Al is a refreshing presence. They are all touched by his beautiful reverence for life.

"There's something about hugs that's a mystery to me," he said. "Sheer life is found in hugs...you rise to your real status when you hug. There's something exalting about it. I can't do that at the nursing home. And you can't do it where you work either, Charles," he said.

"These kids come up to me and muss my hair. They have all the faith in the world in you. They hug you and talk to you about their feelings.

"There are a thousand stories with the children. Most of them go in one ear and out the other. A hug almost always gets a problem straightened out. But not all. Some are hurting from losses.

"Just the other day a little girl came up to me and mussed my hair. Then she took my hand and said, 'hold me tight.' She had two tears going down her face. 'I'm going to get a new Mamma and I want the one I've got.'

"What was happening to her was incomprehension. There was no defensiveness and disdain. The child was wise...her openness and incomprehension was a matter of being alone, although she didn't want to be apart. I remembered my own childhood, but I could not comfort her very much. Being human means learning that you are solitary. You have to learn that as a child."

"A few days ago this little boy came up to me. He had not been getting good marks on his papers. So I took him for a walk around the college campus. He thought I was going to bawl him out. He was bothered because his parents had been fighting.

"I said to him: 'I'd like to have a boy like you. We could go fishing down in Pine Valley. I have some secret fishing holes down there. I've never told anyone else...' He went back to class and pretty soon he was turning in better papers.

"I feel good when I leave the Center. I feel clean inside. I would have been an old man if I hadn't gone over there to be with those kids and the students.

"I couldn't have done it for money. I never realized how many kinds of love there are in the world. A student nurse comes by and we hug. She says, 'I needed that.' A little tyke comes up and says, 'I don't feel good. Grandpa. Just hold me a little while.'

"I'm not religious at all, but I sometimes think the man upstairs is giving me a second chance to do some good.

"I don't know what I'll do this summer...Charles, don't ever think that the love that you learned when you were a boy is lost. The adult world may deny it. But it is powerful in your memory. It was your first time of being alone and looking inside yourself.

"I try to comfort with simple words and sometimes hugs. Mr life, too, has sadness and loneliness. If it were not so, I would not be able to spend my days with those kids."

Betty Jean Kaiser dies at 61 in Salt Lake City

Betty Jean Kaiser, longtime Elko resident, died Sunday in Salt Lake City at age 61.

She was born Oct. 19, 1927, in Elko,

Betty Jean Kaiser

to Charles D. and Herminia Westerbeek Perry.

She had been married to Roy E. Kaiser for 38 years and they had lived in New Castle, Wyo., for 10 years, before returning to Elko.

She had taught piano lessons and later taught classes at Northern Nevada Community College and helped start the Child Development Center at NNCC.

For the past 15 years, she had been a teacher at Southside Elementary School in Elko and had been very popular with her many students.

Survivors include her husband of Elko; sons, Roy D. Kaiser, Elko, and Perry G. Kaiser, Salt Lake City; daughters, Kristine E. Kalmer, Elko, and Karlina J. Kaiser, Salt Lake City; a brother, Charles D. Perry Jr., Elko; and one grandson.

Private funeral services will be conducted in the Starr Valley Cemetery.

A memorial has been established in her name with the American Cancer Society, P.O. Box 646, Elko.

Room for three more in NNCC Hawaii tour

There are three spaces left in the Northern Nevada Community College's tour to Maui and Kawai in the Hawaiian Islands March 18-25, announced Sarah Sweetwater, tour leader. Deposits of $500 are due Sunday — the same day a video about the islands will be shown at 7 p.m. in Berg Hall, she said.

A film on Germany will be shown at 8 p.m. Sunday in preparation for a college tour to Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy and Holland June 18-July 3. The "very special tour" is planned as a college-retirement trip for Bill Berg, president of NNCC, she said. There also are a few spaces left in this tour, for which $500 deposits are due Sunday.

Total price for the European tour is $2,991, which includes first-class accommodations, round-trip air fare from Salt Lake City, all breakfasts, several special dinners, three-day Rhine cruise with outside cabins and private motor coach for all land travel.

Highlights will include visits to Vienna's Schonbrunn Palace, Mozart's birthplace and museum in Salzburg, Nymphenburg Castle in Munich, Oberammergan and a train ride to the mountain village of Zermatt. In addition, tourists will visit Italian and Swiss Alps and historical monuments in Geneva and Lucerne. The trip will end with a glass-bottom boat cruise on the canals of Amsterdam and a Dutch dinner party, she said.

More details are available from Sweetwater at 738-8493 or 738-5770.

Dennis Parks

Dennis Parks to tell about Poland trip

Dennis Parks, Tuscarora artist, will show slides he took on his recent trip to Poland at noon and 7 p.m. tomorrow in the multipurpose room at Berg Hall on the Northern Nevada Community College campus, announces Sarah Sweetwater, head of the art department, which is sponsoring the lecture.

Parks will show slides and talk about his trip to Poland, where he was the only American among 18 invited artists from all over the world to attend the 12th annual Porcelain Symposium.

Sweetwater noted Poland's porcelain artists don't have studios, but work in factories. She said Parks' slides will show many types of Polish art as well as some of his own pieces.

Those who attend the free noon lecture may bring sack lunches, she added.

THE ARTS

Sarah Sweetwater

Many-faceted mother of Nevada's folk art revival

By Mary Branscomb

The last spittoon is emptied, the last pickup truck has left for the ranch, and the last journalist has exchanged his jeans for a wool suit and caught a plane back to New York. The Cowboy Poetry Gathering, that put Elko on the modern map, is over for another year.

But the woman who made it happen will go home to a solar-heated house, and back to work next day in the intellectual environment of Northeastern Nevada Community College. She's no cowgirl but a serious contemporary artist. Yet it was this intellectual who fostered the appreciation of folk arts that made this festival possible.

For more than two decades, Sarah (Campsey) Sweetwater has enthusiastically sought out cowboys, ranch women and other artisans who could show her how to braid rawhide, make soap, patch together quilts, make cheese and soap, twist mecatees (hair ropes), bend willows into furniture and entertain her with storytelling, poetry recitations and songs accompanied by fiddles and homemade dulcimers.

In her enthusiasm, she has been involving local people since 1967 when she moved as a young mother to Elko. "I saw that Elko, probably because it is so isolated, was almost unique in having all these resources still intact," she remembered. "People still knew how to do these things; there was a chance to keep these traditions alive."

Sarah Sweetwater with "Strong Woman," which she started carving in Pietra Santa, Italy, in 1988.

Solar sun-room addition to Sweetwater's once-ordinary house won her a national design award. It's full of plants and art.

So, beginning in 1971 as a part-time instructor at Northern Nevada Community College, Sarah rounded up buckaroos and ranch wives, making them instructors in the community service classes she set up to teach these arts to others.

In 1974, as head of NNCC's art department, she won a $8,000 grant from the Nevada State Council on the Arts to support NNCC's Pioneer Arts and Crafts Program.

Armed with tape recorder and camera, she taped Joe McKnight. The old cowboy spun yarns as he "picked" (straightened) horse-mane hair to make a mecate — a lead rope favored by Northern Nevada horsemen. She also recorded Lamoille rancher Jack Walther's original poetry and many classic cowboy poems recited by Stan Aiazzi, now dean of students at NNCC.

In 1975 Sarah brought together her ranch-raised "teachers" in Elko's first folk life festival, held in the city park. It resembled an old time fair with craftsmen showing off whatever they could create, from horsehair cinches to fiddle music. It drew nearly 500 people.

The event, most often called Pioneer Arts and Crafts Folk Life Festival, was repeated annually through 1980. It was in 1979 and 1980 that the cowboy emerged in the festival as an American hero, she said. By then the event drew as many as 3,600 people at once, listening to cowboy poetry, watching Indian dancing, eating Mexican or Basque food in the park.

Funding for the event was unavailable in 1981, the artist noted, but in 1983 Meg Glaser, daughter of Halleck ranchers Art and Marianne Glaser, was working for the National Council for Traditional Arts in Washington D.C. She asked Sweetwater to help present the Cowboy Reunion — a touring company of authentic punchers and tale-spinners and singers off ranges from Louisiana to Hawaii — to Elko. There, in the very heart of cow country, it proved a whooping success, and paved the way for the Cowboy Poetry Gathering.

Main credit for organizing the gathering, in 1984, usually goes to Hal Cannon, a Utah folklorist. It was Sweetwater, however, who brought Cannon to Elko, hiring his Deseret String Band to play at the 1978 folk festival.

Sarah, meanwhile, was discovering other folk artists. She met and recorded poet Owen Barton in the Diamond A Desert, straddling the border of Nevada and Idaho. In 1978 she met cowboy poet Waddie Mitchell, who signed up for one of her art classes, and recommended that he recite for Storytelling Conference in Reno in 1982 and later that year at the National Storytelling Conference in Tennessee. Since becoming well-known through the annual poetry gatherings, Mitchell has appeared twice

THE ARTS

Sarah Sweetwater

Many-faceted mother of Nevada's folk art revival

By Mary Branscomb

The last spittoon is emptied, the last pickup truck has left for the ranch, and the last journalist has exchanged his jeans for a wool suit and caught a plane back to New York. The Cowboy Poetry Gathering, that put Elko on the modern map, is over for another year.

But the woman who made it happen will go home to a solar-heated house, and back to work next day in the intellectual environment of Northeastern Nevada Community College. She's no cow-girl but a serious contemporary artist. Yet it was this intellectual who fostered the appreciation of folk arts that made this festival possible.

For more than two decades, Sarah (Campsey) Sweetwater has enthusiastically sought out cowboys, ranch women and other artisans who could show her how to braid rawhide, make soap, patch together quilts, make cheese and soap, twist mecate (hair ropes), bend willows into furniture and entertain her with storytelling, poetry recitations and songs accompanied by fiddles and homemade dulcimers.

In her enthusiasm, she has been involving local people since 1967 when she moved as a young mother to Elko. "I saw that Elko, probably because it is so isolated, was almost unique in having all these resources still intact," she remembered. "People still knew how to do these things; there was a chance to keep these traditions alive." So, beginning in 1971 as a part-time instructor at Northern Nevada Community College, Sarah rounded up buckaroos and ranch wives, making them instructors in the community service classes she set up to teach these arts to others. In 1974, as head of NNCC's art department, she won a $6,000 grant from the Nevada State Council on the Arts to support NNCC's Pioneer Arts and Crafts Program.

Sarah Sweetwater with "Strong Woman," which she started carving in Pietra Santa, Italy, in 1988.

Solar sun-room addition to Sweetwater's once-ordinary house won her a national design award. It's full of plants and art.

Armed with tape recorder and camera, she taped Joe McKnight. The old cowboy spun yarns as he "picked" (straightened) horsemane hair to make a mecate — a lead rope favored by Northern Nevada horsemen. on Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show."

She also may have organized the last "coffee house" style poetry reading in America — a gathering of poets in the Palm Bar of Elko, in 1980. At the time, she recalled, it had only recently begun to allow women inside, but still retained its cowtown flavor.

The artist was born Sarah Whisenant in 1940 in Sweetwater, Texas. Her married name was Campsey, but she recently changed it to Sweetwater "to better describe who I am."

The experience that most shaped her life, she thinks, was confinement to hospital beds and wheelchairs as a child. "I was taught to weave, in the hospital, by a blind woman. And that was the most important thing a six-year-old could have learned. Here I was thinking about all the things I couldn't do, and this woman taught me to focus on what I could."

"As a result, neither the after-effects of polio, nor anything else negative that ever happened to me, seemed more than an unimportant detail. It's like when you run into a fault when carving a stone; you don't throw away the stone, you work around the fault. I've run into faults in my life, but they were just things to work around."

Her childhood illness, she thinks, taught her to use her eyes and hands instead of her legs. She remembers with pleasure such homely things as patterns made by rows of canned fruit, beautiful quilts, and colorful laundry drying on a clothes line. And that, she thinks, lies at the root of her love for folk crafts and cowboys.

"Colorful" describes Sweetwater herself. She is a people-lover, collector, reader, builder, gardener, seamstress, gourmet cook, teacher, plumber, roofer, mother, travel guide and artist accomplished in many media. She also enjoys traveling and camping.

Her house won an award for redesign Woman's Day magazine in 1982. "It's a passive solar design," she said. "Every contractor I talked to said what I wanted wasn't possible so I got a couple of friends who owned chain saws, cut down the middle of the roof, and built a different front on it. Now there are three stories of glass at the proper angle to catch winter sun."

"I have a studio upstairs flooded with sunlight. My bedroom is up there, and a guest loft too. I have hundreds of house plants; it's like living in a jungle, though it's winter outside."

Why did she go to all that trouble?

"I wanted Prince Charming to come along and change my name and build me a dreamhouse," said the artist, who was divorced some years ago. "Finally I decided to do both myself."

Her education included undergraduate work at Sul Ross State College in Alpine, Texas (where the cowboys go to rodeo). She completed her bachelor's degree at West Texas State University in Canyon in 1965, and earned a master's in art education in 1977, encumbered by three children and as many jobs at the University of Utah.

Last year she spent a sabbatical studying with Pasquale Martini in Pietra Santa, Italy, the sculpture center of the world. She also went to Santa Fe, N.M., to study with the Nez Perce Indian sculptor Doug Hyde and recently was commissioned by Accutrack of Dallas, a photo finish electronics company, to create a bronze sculpture of two runners.

Soroptimist International of Elko's choice for Woman of the Year in 1979 and recipient of the Governor's Folk Art Award in 1985, Sweetwater continues to expand her interests and share learning and teaching with people around her.

On several occasions she has helped elementary art teachers teach hundreds of children how to weave with sticks as the Indians did, and has had several kite-making days for children at the college.

Her soft, slow Texan speech makes her an appealing and well-loved teacher.

But she is also a controversial one, as strong people are apt to be — particularly in the art world. She shocked conservative Elko by using nude models in figure drawing classes. She taught relaxation long before it became an accepted technique. Oddly enough, one detractor criticized her for teaching "creativity" which Sweetwater firmly believes is not a born attribute but one which can and should be learned.

If she ever finds time to pursue her real love — sculpture — and can hone her skills on eight tons of marble she had shipped from Italy, her contributions to art and society in Nevada will be even greater.

Patricia Fox Opens Museum Exhibit

Patricia M. Fox of Lamolile, and her solo show entitled "Elko County Gold" is on exhibit from March 23 to April 23 at the Northeastern Nevada Museum. The exhibition is of Fox's most recent watercolor paintings and a new medium for her called

"mono-printing." Hand-painted ceramic tiles are also part of Fox's artistic expression and are available in the museum's Galleria gift shop.

Fox was born in Boise, Idaho and moved with her family to southern Nevada in 1956. She was raised in Las Vegas and graduated with a B.F.A. from the University of Nevada at Las Vegas. In 1976 Fox entered graduate school at Utah State University, Logan, studying textiles with Tetsuo Kusama from Japan and drawing with Adrian Van Suchtelen.

After receiving her M.F.A., Fox moved to Lamolile and says she found the landscapes there to be inspiring. She has lived in Lamolile for nine years and is currently employed at Northern Nevada Community College.

Fox explains that the current museum exhibit is entitled "Elko County Gold" because she wanted to portray in the exhibition the resources of Elko County which help to maintain the area's cultural richness. "I am attempting to illustrate the preciousness of its resources such as the land, the ranches and the uniqueness of its small rural settlements," the artist says.

Louis Horton displays one of two awards he recently received from state conservation agencies. Horton, head of Northern Nevada Community College's agriculture department, was named "Conservationist of the Year" and was honored for "Distinguished Service to the Cause of Conservation."

L. Horton receives conservation awards

Louis Horton has been named the recipient of two conservation awards for his dedication to teaching.

Horton, director of the Northern Nevada Community College Agriculture Department, received the Nevada Association of Conservation Districts' (NvACD) "Distinguished Service to the Cause of Conservation" award and was named "Conservationist of the Year" by the Soil and Water Conservation Society. Horton's work with conservation districts and elementary schools across Nevada, training them in the use of a new conservation education computer program, was cited as the basis for both awards.

In acknowledging the awards, Horton said, "These awards certainly were a surprise. I never expected to be recognized for my efforts, especially when I enjoy doing it so much."

Leland Campsey of the Soil Conservation Service in Elko noted Horton has been working with the NvACD to encourage conservation districts to purchase the computer program for schools in their area. When the program is purchased, Campsey explained, the NNCC department head and his students deliver the program to the school and train the teachers on how to use it.

"I enjoy going out and promoting the computer program. It's an excellent introduction to conservation for the kids because it's fun and yet it challenges them. They think they are playing, but they're really learning. And, most teachers have so much other material to cover, this is something easy for them to add to their curriculum," Horton noted.

Horton began teaching at NNCC in 1979 and has actively worked to maintain a curriculum beneficial to Elko's agricultural community, Campsey said. Horton has worked with local ranchers to learn what their needs are and how the college can help fulfill these needs, said Campsey.

Prior to joining the staff at NNCC, Horton taught vocational agriculture at Elko High School. He and his wife, Alice, have two daughters.

NNCC slates Wells lecture

Anita Cory is scheduled to continue Northern Nevada Community College's lecture series on small northeastern Nevada towns Wednesday with a discussion of Wells.

Cory's lecture is titled "Wells, Nevada: Many Routes" and is scheduled for noon Wednesday in Room 8 of NNCC's Berg Hall. The lecture is free and is the third in the college's "The Soul of Small Places" lecture series.

Charles Greenhaw of NNCC traces the background of Cory and her family in Wells in an article on Page 4 of today's newspaper.

Anita Cory scheduled for lecture on Wells

By Charles Greenhaw
Wednesday, Anita Cory will give a lecture on Wells at Northern Nevada Community College. The lecture is a part of an NNCC program titled "The Soul of Small Places."

Why Anita Cory?

Anita Cory is the sister of the late Jean McElrath, one of Wells' most famous citizens. For 27 years Jean wrote a column Tumbleweeds for the Wells Progress.

Many of those columns were gathered in a book with the same title, which was published in 1971, four years after Jean died.

The columns are almost totally devoted to the people and events of Wells between 1940 and 1967. She wrote about events ranging from high school graduation to wagon pulling contests to the drafting of local young people into the military service. Her often whimsical, always fresh style revealed the people of Wells as if they were merely a part of the family — one committed to the Jacksonian ideals of the hard working capitalism of the common man. There is never a sense of boosterism, but there is always a concern for "sticking up for your own."

Jean McElrath's columns are notable not only for their portrayal of small town life, but also for their sheer volume. There are hundreds of them — all about a town she described as being "eight blocks long and six blocks wide." She also wrote Aged in Sage, a collection of stories about Nevada people and places, and she contributed many columns and articles to such publications as the Nevada Magazine and the Farm Journal.

Jean's efforts did not go unnoticed by the outside world. She received the "Salute to Freedom" award from KUTA Radio in Salt Lake City. Twice she was cited for meritorious newspaper writing by the Nevada Press Association. She also received the prestigious "Distinguished Nevadan" award toward the end of her life.

Jean McElrath wrote all of her columns at home. She was blind. She was crippled by arthritis. She got her news by telephone, or from people stopping by to relate it to her.

Two people made it possible for Jean McElrath to portray Wells to the world at large and to entertain the Progress readers. They are both heroines to the people who know them — people like Sally Gardner and Barbara Read.

One of the heroines is Anita Cory who will soon tell her impressions of Wells. During the years Jean was writing all those columns, Anita worked on the family ranch trying to make ends meet. The ends did not always meet.

The other heroine is Mabel McElrath, now 96. "If ever there was a saint," Edna Patterson said, "it is Mabel McElrath." Mabel was always near her writing daughter. She was on call 24 hours a day, and she inspired Jean to rise above her blindness and the dreadful arthritis and create her columns.

Life for Mabel McElrath never ceased to be difficult, and for this reason she never ceased to grow. Had life been different she would never have stayed beside her daughter and found the words to inspire her. Thus, it was that Jean McElrath — blind, invalid — never thought of the world as being against her. Her writing is full of happy mimicry. She was not set apart from the world; she was scarcely to be distinguished from the Wells that surrounded her.

Mabel McElrath lives in Elko now in an apartment near Anita Cory, who cares for her mother. Mabel gets out of the apartment to go to St. Paul's Episcopal Church most Sundays. She is alert and full of cheer. She has been "Aged in Sage."

I hope Mabel will be able to come to hear Anita on April 19.

Remington Named To Head NNCC

Dr. Ronald K. Remington has been named the new president of Northern Nevada Community College, replacing Dr. Bill Berg, who is retiring after 17 years at the helm of NNCC.

Dr. Remington, currently vice president of instructional services at Truckee Meadows Community College (TMCC) was named to the Elko post Friday. He was selected by a Board of Regents search committee chaired by regent Dorothy S. Gallagher of Elko. Gallagher said the committee conducted a national search for Berg's successor, and interviewed four finalists before offering their recommendation of Dr. Remington to the full board on Friday.

Holder of a Ph. D. in psychology, Dr. Remington has had nearly 15 years experience in Nevada education, in both administrative and teaching positions. In his present position at TMCC, he supervises two associate deans, six directors, 14 department chairs, 71 full-time faculty members, and some 387 part-time faculty.

The new NNCC president has also taught at both the undergraduate and graduate levels at the University of Nevada, Reno, and was an honored UNR alumnus representing the psychology department during the university's Alumni Day. Dr. Remington is also a member of UNR's College of Education Advisory Board and of the University of Nevada System Computer Planning and Procedures Committee.

Active in community organizations, Dr. Remington currently works with Chambers of Commerce in western Nevada, and is a member of TMCC's advisory boards.

He and his wife, Nancy, have four children.

Dr. Berg, who received an honorary degree from UNR Saturday, in recognition of his contribution to education in Nevada, has led NNCC since 1973, guiding its growth from a student population of 500 to more than 2,000. The retiring NNCC president is credited with establishing the college's highly successful nursing and diesel technology programs, encouraging the school's accreditation, and establishing an advanced placement program for high school students in which community college credits can be earned while they are still in high school.

In addition to his administrative duties, Dr. Berg has also taught U.S. History each year both at NNCC and at Elko High School, and has been active in Elko's civic and service organizations.

R. Remington of Reno is new NNCC president

Dr. Ronald K. Remington was named by the University of Nevada System's Board of Regents as new president of Northern Nevada Community College last Friday. He will replace retiring Dr. Bill Berg, who has been the institution's president for 17 years, announces they system's director of public information, Pamela Galloway.

When he assumes his duties here on July 1, Remington will have left his post as vice president of instructional services for Truckee Meadows Community College in Reno.

The new president has nearly 15 years of experience in administrative and teaching positions in Nevada, including serving as associate dean to the liberal arts coordinator for Western Nevada Community College in Carson City.

In his present position he supervises two associate deans, six directors, 14 department chairmen, 71 full-time faculty members and about 387 part-time faculty members. The instructional budget for TMCC is $5.5 million and includes operating budgets and payrolls for full- and part-time faculty, teacher assistants and classified personnel.

As instructor or professor, Remington taught psychology at Minot State College in North Dakota; Mount San Antonio College in Walnut, Calif.;

College of the Desert in Palm Desert, Calif.; and Humboldt State University in Arcata, Calif.

He has taught at both the undergraduate and graduate level at the University of Nevada Reno and was an honored alumnus representing the psychology department during Alumni Day. He is a member of UNR's College of Education advisory board and of the system's computer planning and procedures committee.

By serving on a number of system committees he has demonstrated an interest for quality instruction at all levels and at all campuses within the system, Galloway reports. He has already provided leadership in planning for rural satellite campuses in vocational-technical programs and in proposing curricular and instructional changes that have resulted in improved instruction.

Remington also has been active in community organizations including area chambers of commerce and Western Industrial Nevada, and is a member on TMCC's advisory boards.

He and his wife, Nancy, have four children.

NNCC hires new president

ELKO (AP) — Dr. Ronald K. Remington has been named the new president of Northern Nevada Community College here.

He replaces retiring President William J. Berg, who served the college for 17 years.

Remington, who was chosen Friday by University of Nevada regents, has been vice president of instructional services for Reno-based Truckee Meadows Community College.

He has nearly 15 years experience in Nevada in both administrative and teaching positions.

An ad hoc committee conducted a national search for Berg's replacement and interviewed four finalists before making a recommendation Friday to the full Board of Regents.

Louis Horton attends Ag Business program

Northern Nevada Community College Agribusiness Department is looking to the future by developing a complete management program for ranchers in Northern Nevada, the college announces. Louis Horton, NNCC instructor, recently attended a four-day national farm and ranch business management conference in Greeley, Colo., to obtain ideas for this program.

Sessions included a "Future Look into Computer Software used in Ranch Management," including balance sheet, income statement, cash-flow statement and enterprise analysis.

Participants also visited the Montfort feedlot where there are currently over 80,000 head of cattle.

Valuable information was gained from instructors from other community colleges in the mid-west and western United States concerning the application of similar programs in their communities, Horton noted. He said instructors see their programs as a life-time commitment to the ranching community. He plans to incorporate many of these ideas into NNCC's program, which begins this fall, and invites anyone wishing more information concerning the new program to call him at 738-8493.

Sweetwater to speak in Sweetwater

Sarah Sweetwater, head of the art department of Northern Nevada Community College, is scheduled to give the commencement address at Sweetwater High School in Sweetwater, Texas, this weekend.

The Elko artist graduated from this school in 1958 and said she will address a graduating class of about 225.

She observes, "Everyone should have the opportunity to speak at his... alma mater. The preparation has caused me to examine why my life is as it is and what the good parts are."

She will talk about "having the courage to make choices and the commitment to carry through."

College president named

May 18, 1987 Reno Gazette

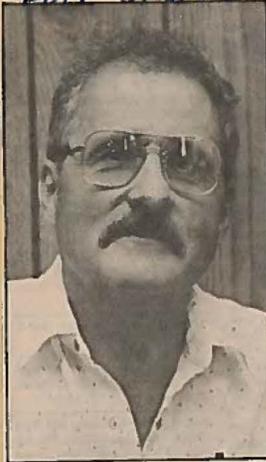

A Reno-Sparks educator has been appointed president of Northern Nevada Community College in Elko.

Ron Remington, 47, currently vice president of instruction at Truckee Meadows Community College in Reno, was selected by the University of Nevada Board of Regents from among four finalists after a nationwide search.

He has served as vice president of instruction at TMCC since 1987 and was dean of instruction from 1984 to 1987. Remington also has served as associate dean of instructional services, director of general education in psychology and has taught psychology since coming to TMCC in 1978. He earned his Ph.D. in psychology at the University of Nevada-Reno.

Remington replaces William J. Berg, who served NNCC for 17 years. The Elko college, one of four community colleges in the University of Nevada System, serves more than 2,000 students in five rural northern Nevada counties on the main campus and eight off-campus sites.

Larry Martin

Larry Martin joins race for city council

Larry Martin, 54, Wednesday joined five other candidates vying for the two seats up for election on the Elko City Council. Wednesday was the last day of filing for the June 6 election.

Martin said he has lived in Elko for 25 years and is presently working in construction, specializing in residential remodeling. He added he also has mining interests in Idaho. His wife, Karen, is an instructor at Northern Nevada Community College and the couple has four grown children, three of whom remain in Elko.

"Elko has been good to me; it's a great place to live and I feel deeply the need to pay my dues by contributing some time and effort served on the city council. Elko is experiencing spectacular growth and is in need of careful and responsible attention. I would like the opportunity to help resolve some of the problems we are experiencing as a result of this growth. I believe it's possible to achieve a balance between progress and quality of life. Crisis management, a necessity in the short term, must eventually be replaced by sound, long-range planning."

Martin joins Tom Murphy, Lee Hoffman and Kevin Rosenau in challenging incumbents Marv Churchfield and Carol Davis. The two candidates receiving the most votes in the June 6 election will fill the council seats.

Blach explained that Harper and the other members of the campaign's Advanced Division are responsible for soliciting between 40 and 50 gifts in the $25,000 to $100,000 range over a five-year period.

Assisting Harper in the division are vice chairs Tom Kuhl, B.J. Rusk, Joe Santos, Bonnie Bilbao, Chuck Briggs, Russ McMullen, and Ralph Pnoli. Division "team members" are Park Blair, Tom Bland, Tom Jenkins, Dan Kessler, John McDonough, Tyler Sciotto and Rich Traynor.

Harper said he is happy to be a part of the drive. "Northern Nevada Community College is one of the most positive aspects of our community," he said. "The administration, faculty and staff have done an excellent job and are highly regarded. I support the current campaign because the college has performed well and deserves the community's support."

Blach said between 200 and 300 volunteers will assist the college in reaching its goal through six service committees and eight soliciting divisions which will be organized during the campaign. Blach said more than 90 volunteers are already committed to the project.

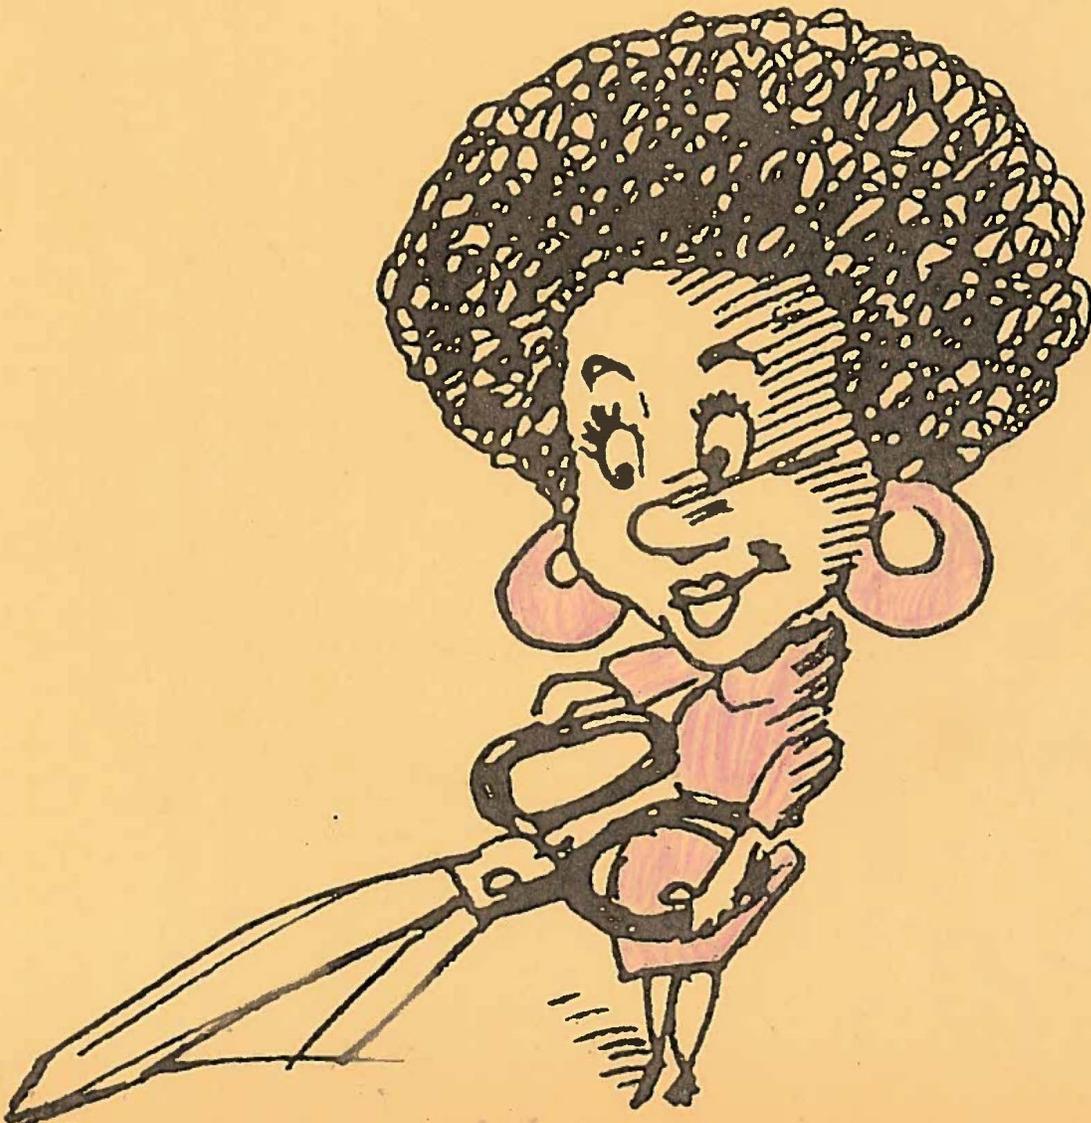

Charles Harper of Elko has agreed to chair the Advanced Division of the Major Gifts Campaign now being conducted on behalf of Northern Nevada Community College, according to an announcement yesterday from Jeanne Blach, general campaign chair.

The campaign is an effort to fund construction of a "college community center" on the NNCC campus, and Blach said chances for success of the drive "have substantially increased because of Chuck's acceptance of the responsibility. MISCELLANEOUS CLIPPINGS

NORTHERN NEVADA COMMUNITY COLLEGE

ANNUAL NOTICE TO STUDENTS

Annually, Northern Nevada Community College informs students of the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, as amended. This Act, with which the institution intends to comply fully, was designated to protect the privacy of education records, to establish the right of students to inspect and review their education records, and to provide guidelines for formal hearings. Students also have the right to file complaints with the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act Office (FERPA) concerning alleged failures by the institution to comply with the Act.

Local policy explains in detail the procedures to be used by the institution for compliance with the provisions of the Act. Copies of the policy can be found in the following offices: Student Services, Veterans, Business, and Administration. Announcing,

Summer Jobs for 1989
 Opportunities in the Federal Government

The United States Office of Personnel Management has just released its listing of anticipated summer openings.

The majority of these positions are located throughout California with Las Vegas and Boulder City openings as well.

Among the various openings are Lifeguard, Social Services Assistant, Biological Sciences Technician and Electronics Aid, to name a few.

Generally speaking, the filing deadline is April 15, 1989, though some have overruling alternatives. Come by Artemisia Center and check the Federal Job Board, just inside the northern doorway.

Person Needed for Volunteer Position

Must be dedicated and have time to research and write a proposal. Interest and/or experience in the Child Care field also extremely helpful, as would grant writing knowledge and the ability to deal with federal, state and local governmental policies.

If you or anyone you know is interested, contact S.P.O.I.L.S., 738-8493, extension 243. Ask for Mallory Bozeman.

SITTER BOARDS
 You may have noticed the new bulletins regarding sitters available or needed. If you have any changes or additions, feel free to do so. As sitter demands do not commonly follow office hours, this will be largely self-service.

CLEP, Another Use for Your Experience

First of all, CLEP is the College-Level Examination Program. Passing these exams can earn you up to 2 years of college credit for knowledge gained elsewhere, such as high school, work, observation, reading or life experiences.

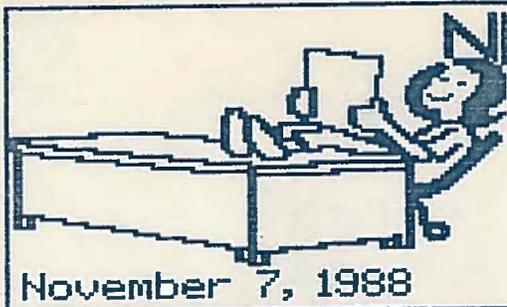

There are 5 General Examinations and 30 specific Subject Examinations to choose from. General Exams include English Composition, Humanities, Mathematics, Natural Science and Social Science, and are tested at first and second year college levels. Subject Exams test specific knowledge and skills, and require a higher level training and knowledge.

Besides the credit earned, CLEP can be instrumental in revealing how well a returning adult or recent high school graduate will perform in the college environment. Attached to transcripts, CLEP scores can ease admission by demonstrating your accomplishments.

In addition, by earning credits this way, you can bypass the required introductory courses and spend the saved time and money on more advanced, challenging and enriching courses.

Fees are $35 per examination. Arrangements can be made through our own Student Services Office, 4 to 6 weeks prior to the date you wish to take the exam.

The Government Board

In case you all are not aware, we have and constantly update, various government job announcement lists.

Weekly we receive "Recruitment Announcements" from the Nevada Department of Personnel.

These notices very thoroughly state job description, annual salary, filing date, necessary examinations, etc. It has been known to take 6 months to complete the application process, but if the position represents a major personal goal, it can be well worth it.

On a monthly basis, the "Recruitment Bulletin" from the Opportunities in the Veterans Administration. The majority of these positions are medically oriented.

Applications may be obtained by calling the Delegated Examining Unit, 1 (800) 368-6008.

Renewed quarterly (4 times annually), with occasional supplements, is the "Federal Job Opportunities" list from the U.S. Office of Personnel Management, Sacramento Office.

The normal application process entails filing out and sending in the Standard Form 171 (application form). The Sacramento Office will then contact you regarding the position for which you applied, whether it has been filled, where/when testing will take place, etc. Again, the process can take quite some time.

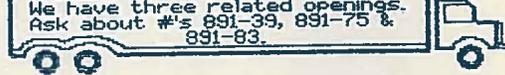

Annually, from the USDA Forest Service, we receive "Volunteer Opportunities". The positions listed range from Archeology Technician to Writer/Editor, and are normally seasonal, say summer work. They are good for students in that they allow experience in your major or minor areas. The drawback is pay - usually a place to stay and subsistence only. Must be why they call them Volunteer Opportunities!

We also have information from the Peace Corp and Friends of World Teaching, which is a teacher's information agency assisting American and Canadian educators/administrators to secure overseas positions.

So, come and check our "Government" Board, just inside the north Artemisia Center doorway. You may run across something interesting.

DELIVERY/STOCKING

We have three related openings. Ask about #'s 891-39, 891-75 & 891-83.

Woodcutter Needed

Starting the last week of November, one of our local firewood suppliers will be needing some extra part time help. Pay's $5 per hour and the hours are reasonably flexible.

Job #891-59.

Now with the weather turning frosty and the holidays fast approaching, it may be time to consider some part time, Christmas-money employment.

We have several flexible-hour, listings which will keep you indoors out of the cold.

Check the Job Boards; in Berg Hall across from the CIS room, in McMullen Hall next to the south stairwell entrance and in Lundberg Hall across from the bookstore.

SPECIAL NOTICE

If ever you've considered earning extra cash by providing child care, now's an opportune time to seriously re-consider. As anywhere nationwide, Elko is experiencing a severe child care crunch. Parents are missing classes and turning down jobs as a result.

If you are interested, contact either the NNCC Child Center or the Single Parent Center, and your name, number and even hours available will be listed for anyone needing child care services.

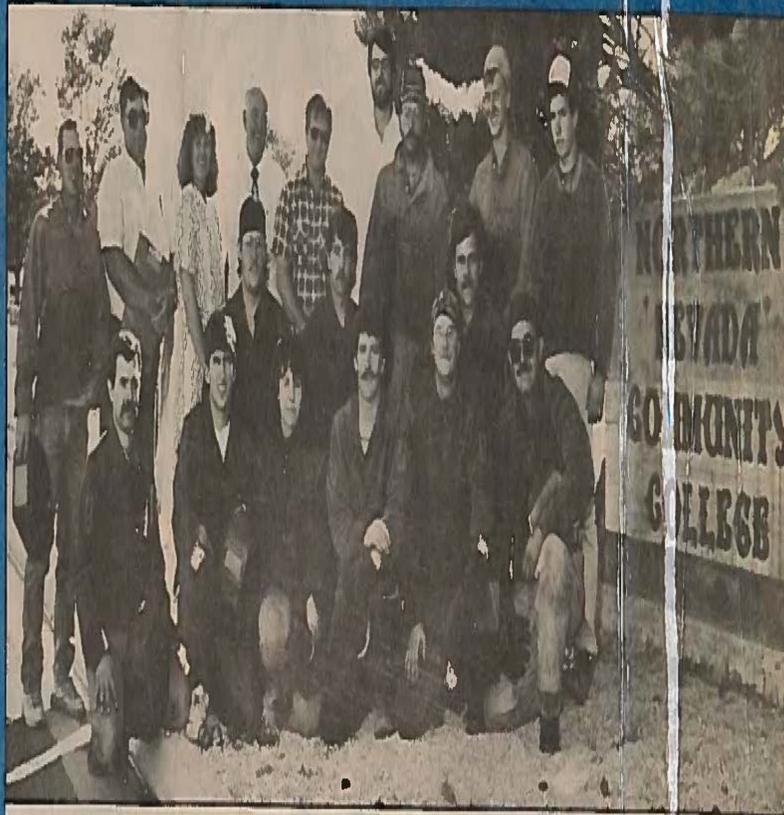

ARTISTS, check the entranceway board to McMullen Hall: information from the N.N.A.P. (National Network for Artist Placement) and Opryland on 1989 Auditions.

College, Newmont join in educating mine workers

By Mary Branscomb

Newmont Gold Company and Northern Nevada Community College have joined in putting together a "contract training program" that is making possible a major learning opportunity for Newmont employees, according to Charles Greenhaw, NNCC dean of instruction. He noted, "This 'contract program' is giving us the experience to plan a vastly expanded multi-skill occupational center to help everyone in the area."

Newmont invested about $50,000 in the Basic Mechanics part of the Maintenance Helper Training program now under way. This includes instructor salaries, textbooks, welding rod and steel, training models, transmissions, bearings and other equipment and supplies, he said.

NNCC instructors, administrators and staff members, joined by professional people from Newmont, spent several months developing the basic program in which 24 credit hours of instruction are available to selected full-time students.

(Instruction started last month and will be completed Aug. 12, he said.)

The 13 students currently enrolled in the 10-week program are undergoing training eight hours a day in applied math, technical reading and writing, welding, diesel and auto mechanics, electronic repairs, shop practices, basic electricity and hydraulics. They will become familiar with computers, study safety practices and attend work ethic seminars. The program will be repeated this fall for as many as 30 Newmont employees and an Advanced Diesel Mechanics program is being planned for students who completed the basic program. Some of Newmont's equipment will be available to other NNCC students, Greenhaw pointed out, and other specialized classes geared for mine workers will be offered.

Because of the gold boom in the area and the need to provide continuing education for mine employees, NNCC has adapted other programs to meet specific educational needs of individual mines, he explained.

For example, class meeting times have been changed to make courses accessible to shift workers and a variety of intensive training programs have been offered. Some are a day long and others range from three days to a week in length.

This makes it possible for mine employers to have their employees trained by qualified instructors and get freshly trained workers back on the job quickly.

Examples of courses adapted to specific needs include computer instruction (word perfect, lotus and advanced lotus), General Motors Corporation electronic ignitions, technical writing, welding, hydraulics and air conditioning.

The college has also provided seminars by DuPont, such as Strategy of Experimentation, supervisory training and pump maintenance. Future bearings, lubrication, belts, specialized welding, pipe fitting and electrical controls workshops also are planned.

"This basic maintenance program is an adaptation of NNCC's technical arts program, which includes truck and auto technology training," Greenhaw said.

"The training program may be the ultimate expression of community college occupational education," he said. "Students, community, industry — they all benefit. It's hard to imagine where or how these students could receive a better benefit."

Summer school instructors include Jim Cooney, welding; Bret Murphy, basic shop; Debi Nelson, math; Karen Temple, computers; and Norma Moody, technical writing. Stan Popeck is the "project scout," the liaison between NNCC and Newmont.

Newmont employee (and student) Edward Huarte is seen using an oxyacetylene torch in the auto shop at NNCC. Three new welders, which may be used by other NNCC students, were purchased for the program by the gold company.

Students, teachers comment

Students Bryan Preece and Gene Senek are enthusiastic about the education they are getting in the Maintenance Helper Training Program. They say this is a wonderful opportunity for them. Stan Popeck, Northern Nevada Community College liaison between the college and the mine; Jim Cooney, welding instructor; and Bret Murphy, shop instructor, all agree.

Preece observed the mine will get employees trained the way they want it done and pointed out, "It benefits Elko, other Northern Nevada Community College students and Newmont."

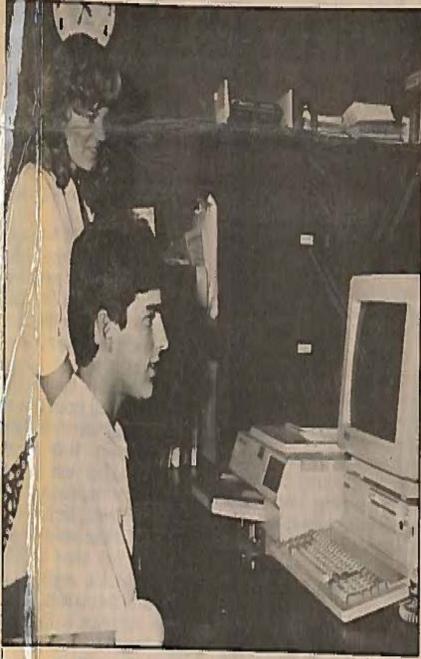

Senek said he graduated from high school in 1987, so this program amounts to his going on to college in his chosen field — and getting paid for the privilege instead of having to come up with tuition.

Student Stan Green said in May about 15 employees took examinations in which manual dexterity, logical thinking and IQs were evaluated. They were in class two weeks later, "and the academics have been tougher than I thought they would be," he noted.

As Newmont employees, students remain on the payroll, get two raises while they learn and can expect another raise after successfully completing the course, Green explained.

Leah Jones is the only woman of the 13 students currently enrolled in the class, but finds it no drawback. "She's just one of the guys," says Lloyd Clawson.

Popeck was hired by NNCC to be class coordinator between all Instructor Debi Nelson helps Stan Green, Newmont maintenance helper trainee, understand a computer. Nelson also teaches basic math to these students.

Maintenance helper training explained

"Training is a common happening at Newmont Gold Company," said Denise C. Rice, training coordinator, in a recent article in the mine's monthly newspaper, Newmont Gold Standard, as she described a new pilot program titled "Maintenance Helper Training." She says it is different from any previous training offered by NGC.

She said in December, vice president and manager of services Ken Brunk began working closely with Northern Nevada Community College and others to put together the new program to fill NGC's need for mine and mill mechanics.

Early in May, bids for "helper trainees" were posted throughout NGC, she explained, and a pre-screen testing procedure was administered to all employees who applied. Applications weeks to complete.

A second Phase I is slated to begin Sept. 6, and testing and selection for this group has begun, she said.

Phase II will begin Aug. 15 for the original group of students with a three-week, on-site skills development program at the mine. Then, on Sept. 6 at NNCC, students will continue for approximately 42 weeks in a "skills development" program.

Phase III is scheduled to start next June and will be a "one-on-one task training experience," in which each helper will be assigned to a mechanic using company equipment for training.

When a trainee successfully completes all three phases, he or she will become a mine or mill mechanic and will be assigned to a specific location. (In the first group, Newmont has

Remodeling almost done at NNCC's Lundberg Hall

Remodeling of Lundberg Hall at Northern Nevada Community College is expected to be finished in about two more weeks, allowing classes and more students back into the campus's original building.

Construction is about 85 percent complete, according to project architect J.D. Long of Elko. He said hard work has put the project about four weeks ahead of schedule.

Remaining work includes putting in cabinets, installing some floor tiles, completing the ceiling and painting.

The project involves putting a new ceiling system into the building and installing additional classrooms. The classrooms have been added by dividing large existing rooms.

Previously, the building had only one science room, which was used for geology, biology, physical science and chemistry.

New labs have been added for chemistry, physical science and biology. In addition, the computer room now is divided into two rooms so more students can be taught.

The nursing room also is being divided into lab and classroom sections.

An administrative office is being enclosed in the bookstore, which will be a walk-through facility in the future. Teller windows have been added to the business office.

The entire interior is being repainted. "For all intents and purposes, the inside's going to look like a whole new building," NNCC President Bill Berg said.

Long said noise won't travel as far in the modified building.

Work began Aug. 10. Construction is being handled by low bidder West Coast Contractors of Reno. The project's overall cost is set for about $304,000. The state and university system are splitting the expense, Long said.

Lundberg Hall was built in 1972-73 as the campus's first structure. McMullen Hall was added on the north side a year later.

Remodeling should be wrapped up by Oct. 14, according to Long.

That's good news for college officials, who have had to move classes to temporary quarters throughout Elko during remodeling.

Some classes have been placed in the lecture room at Berg Hall. Others are being held in building space at Elko High School, Elko Junior High School, National Guard Armory, Elko Regional Medical Center, LDS Church, Southside Elementary School, Northeastern Nevada Museum, Red Lion Inn and Casino, Elko County Library, Stockmen's Motor Hotel, Elko General Hospital, Headstart of Nevada, St. Paul's Episcopal Church, St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Girl Scout House, Senior Citizen Center, and USDA Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. Those facilities' spaces have been donated.

In addition, NNCC has been paying to hold classes at Leotard Corner, Desert Gold Art Gallery and Elko Athletic Club.

"We're real thankful to them because without them we'd be up the creek," Dr. Berg commented.

Plans are being discussed for an open house after the Lundberg Hall project is finished.

Worker Frank Evans of Tahoe City, Calif., tapes off newly installed ceiling supports. Remodeling has included putting a lower ceiling into the building. Work is expected to be finished in about two weeks.

NNCC phones to be restored this afternoon

Phones at Northern Nevada Community College were scheduled to be back in service this afternoon after a two-day outage attributed to a failed power-supply unit in the college's telephone system, reports Charles Greenhaw of NNCC.

Greenhaw explained that since the failure yesterday morning the college has been unable to receive or make any phone calls.

He added a new power unit was to be flown in to Elko from Florida and was scheduled to arrive here early this afternoon. Workers were lined up to immediately install the new unit.

City, NNCC exchange approved by council

Elko City Councilmen and University of Nevada Regents have approved a land trade that will accommodate a new city street and consolidate Northern Nevada Community College's campus. City councilmen approved the trade Tuesday and noted the actual exchange will take place early next month.

The city will acquire 14 acres located north of Interstate 80 in the trade and the college will get seven acres adjacent to the Nevada National Guard Armory.

Assistant City Manager Lorry Lipparelli said the NNCC land was sought by the city in order to build a street connecting the Ruby View Heights and College Park subdivisions. The subdivisions abut one another, but no roads connect them. Lipparelli said the NNCC land was the only place for a road, and rather than taking a section for an easement, the city felt a trade would be better.

He noted the trade helps the college as well, as the freeway runs between the NNCC parcel and the main campus.

Both parcels now are vacant, but the parcel next to the armory is used by the Elko County Fairgrounds for parking during events.

NNCC President William Berg told councilmen he will honor the fairgrounds parking lease for as long as the fairgrounds remain at that location, adding the college has no near-term plans for building on the land.

Fairgrounds representatives earlier had told councilmen that the facilities eventually will be moved to a different area, probably on the outskirts of town. They did not say when the move would take place.

The new street connecting the subdivisions is on a list of projects given priority by the council, although where funding will come from has not been decided. The project has been estimated at $25,000.

The street is one phase of an overall plan to develop a route from the east Elko freeway exit to Mountain City Highway, allowing a motorist to cross town on the north side of the interstate.

Folk singer: Nancy Raven, a folk singer from California, is visiting Elko elementary schools this week and will be making a presentation at 4 p.m. today at Elko County Library. She is seen in this photo taken yesterday singing with preschool children at Northern Nevada Community College. Besides the guitar, Raven uses instruments such as a "guiro" (South American wooden rasp shaped like a fish), mbira (African thumb piano), chekere (African gourds), tortoiseshell drum from Nicaragua, rain stick (tube with rocks inside that sounds like rain when it is shaken) and others from around the world. During her programs, the children also sing and play instruments from other cultures. Raven said for 30 years she has been researching folk songs in her travels, in libraries and in used-book stores. She writes them down and records many she has found. She said since 1979, she has been singing to children and making records.

Seated, from left, Valerie Easterly of Elko; Kelly Lucy, NENDA director; Donna Welch, NENDA clerk; Donna Forsberg-Crick, Wendover, and Dan Kessler, Wells. James Young of Carlin and Lee Hoffman of Elko were not available for the picture. During the meeting, Eriksen was presented a plaque in appreciation of his efforts as chairman.

Last night's snowfall plastered this stop sign at the intersection of College Parkway and Walnut Street, near Northern Nevada Community College (in background). The storm boosted Elko's November precipitation count to .82 of an inch, just shy of the normal mark of .83. More snowfall was predicted for the Elko area through tonight.

Elko AARP Sponsors Program For Older Drivers

Elko, Ind., 11/30/88

Larry Franklin, Nevada State Coordinator for the 55 Alive/Mature Driving program sponsored by the local chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons, will speak at Northern Nevada Community College this Thursday afternoon from 1 to 5 p.m., and Friday from 8 a.m. to noon, at Berg Hall. Recognizing the need to help older drivers improve their skills and prevent traffic accidents, AARP offers the program to all motorists age 50 and over, notes spokeswoman Grace vanDalfsen. The eight-hour classroom refresher is the first nationwide, comprehensive curriculum designed especially for the older motorist.

AARP provides the program, materials and the instruction, vanDalfsen said, providing an opportunity for the elderly to review the handling of adverse driving conditions and traffic hazards, in addition to learning about the effects of aging and medications on driving. "There is more to it than just the rules of the road, although they will be covered as well," vanDalfsen said.

Anyone 50 or older who wishes to take the course, and has not already made a reservation, is asked to phone vanDalfsen at 738-8983, early mornings or evenings. There will be a small fee of $7.00 for the course and space is limited.

struction phase to pour on the sculpture, turning it to a statue made of ice. He said they completed the beast in about two hours. The artist is a fifth-grader at Northside Elementary School.

New governor wants more mining money

LAS VEGAS (AP)—Gov. Bob Miller has joined with Las Vegas Assemblyman Marvin Sedway, saying he wants Nevada's mining industry to pay more taxes, but industry officials say that doesn't jibe with the deal they struck with the 1987 Nevada Legislature.

Miller said he is concerned that constitutional changes on mining taxes that are expected to be approved this year could exempt the miners from possible corporate or business taxes in the future.

"If this is the last shot we have at mining, we should talk about what is their fair share," Miller said yesterday.

EDFP 1/6/89

Nevada's mining industry has paid an extra $20.5 million in taxes during the past two years under a compromise reached with the 1987 legislature.

"We thought we had a deal and we'd like to stick to it," said Rod Higgins, executive director of the Nevada Mining Association.

In addition to the extra $20.5 million, the 1987 compromise required the mining industry to support a constitutional change that would make miners continue paying higher taxes.

Miller has not said how much more he wants the mining industry to pay. But Higgins said the rumor is that it's another $20 million.

The extra money would help to balance the state's budget as Nevada continues to grow, Miller said.

State agencies have submitted requests totaling $2 billion for the next two years, a 60 percent increase over the current two-year, $1.2 billion budget.

Miller, who took over as governor this week, said the compromise reached between the state and the mining industry in 1987 did not include him.

"There are extremely huge profits that mining is making from this state that are largely going out of this state and this country," Miller said.

Robert Zerga, president of the Nevada Mining Association and local head of Newmont Gold Company, said Miller's request for additional taxes took the miners by surprise.

He said Marvin Sedway, D-Las Vegas, has mentioned adding as much as $100 million in mining taxes during the 1989 legislature.

"We didn't expect mining to be the target for anybody with the exception of Marvin Sedway," Zerga said.

The industry has not decided how to respond to Miller, Zerga said.

NNCC gets good marks on technical programs

Occupational and technical programs at Northern Nevada Community College received high marks during a recent review commissioned by the Academic Affairs Office of the University of Nevada System.

Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction at the local college, said, "After reading the report, I'd say we've got a lot of good things to tell the community about." The dean said the review was completed by Mick McWilliams and Harry Miller, who visited the Elko campus in October.

McWilliams is the director of the division of engineering and technology at Johnson City Community College in Kansas, Greenhaw said, and Miller is the dean of the college of technical careers at Southern Illinois University.

According to Greenhaw, a highlight of the review was the evaluation of the Newmont training program in mine maintenance at NNCC. The review said, "Northern Nevada Community College's contract training with Newmont Gold is truly an excellent example of industry and education working together for Nevada's economic development."

"This program, besides educating skilled technicians for Newmont, is building a lasting base on which NNCC can develop a comprehensive industrial technology program," Greenhaw noted. The program consists of training in welding, diesel and mine mill technology.

Also singled out in the review for meeting employment needs was the diesel technology program, the school official said. The reviewers noted that the computer-degree programs were "outstanding," he added.

Greenhaw explained this report is a prelude to occupational-technical education planning at the community college. He said the report contained several recommendations, most of which are related to the administration of technical education.

One of the recommendations, Greenhaw said, is that the college district be reviewed and expanded to include programming initiatives through a variety of state and educational agencies. Two suggestions made in the review were student teaching, graduate education programs and telecommunications programs.

The study also suggested that NNCC should not base its technical offerings on demonstrated need alone, but that the college should design its offerings as support for future economic development.

EDFP 1/21/89

COMMUNITY COLLEGE MONTH—Gov. Bob Miller has declared February "Community College Month" in the state, praising Nevada's four community colleges—including Northern Nevada Community College—as offering "a broad array of educational services" which allow them to "meet diverse and changing local needs and fulfill a vital function within the state's higher education system." In making his proclamation, Miller noted the skyrocketing community college enrollment in the state, pointing out that NNCC alone now serves more than 2000 northeastern Nevada students.
