- * The Learning Resources Center at NNCC has displayed a strong commitment to meeting the educational needs of the local community. It is an ideal site for a Federal Depository.
- * Begun in 1895, the Federal Depository Library Program is the oldest existing information dissemination program sponsored by the U.S. government. The NNCC Depository Library joins the 1,400-member system.
- * Northern Nevada Community College is the oldest community college in Nevada and organizes much of the post-secondary education in central and Northeastern Nevada. It serves a 45,000 square miles area, which continues to grow.
- * I am a longtime advocate of expanded public library services. Last year, when funds for library services were cut from the budget, I worked to restore the money.
- * My father passed along his fondness for books to me. Although my family never traveled, reading books allowed me to take long journeys into great foreign worlds. And when I left Searchlight, Nevada, no place was too remote, no goal was too difficult.
- * I owe a lot to books. They continue to be my primary source of intellectual guidance. That's why it is a special pleasure for me to take part in this designation. In a free society, every individual must have the opportunity to obtain information about their government from their local library. In northern and central Nevada, everyone now does.

United States Government Printing Office
Washington, DC 20401

Robert W. Houk
Public Printer of the United States

Robert W. Houk serves as the Nation's 22nd Public Printer. As such, he heads the U.S. Government Printing Office (GPO), one of the largest printing, procurement, and information dissemination organizations in the world. GPO employs approximately 5,000 employees nationwide and is the largest industrial employer in the Nation's Capital. Yearly revenues exceed $1 billion.

Houk was nominated to his position by President Bush and was confirmed by the U.S. Senate on March 5, 1990. He was sworn in as Public Printer on March 8, 1990. He brings more than 33 years of experience in the printing industry to his legislative branch post.

The Michigan native began his printing career in 1954 with the Ford Motor Company, where he helped to modernize printed business forms management and procurement. In 1957, he joined Rotary Manifold Forms Corporation, a division of Safran Printing Company, Detroit, MI.

Houk cofounded UFORMA, Inc. in 1965 and became Chairman of the Board in 1971. UFORMA acquired Shelby Business Forms of Shelby, OH, in 1979. During his tenure with UFORMA/SHELBY, retail sales rose to approximately $40 million annually. Houk served as President, Chief Executive Officer, and Chairman of the Board of UFORMA/SHELBY before departing the company on December 1, 1988.

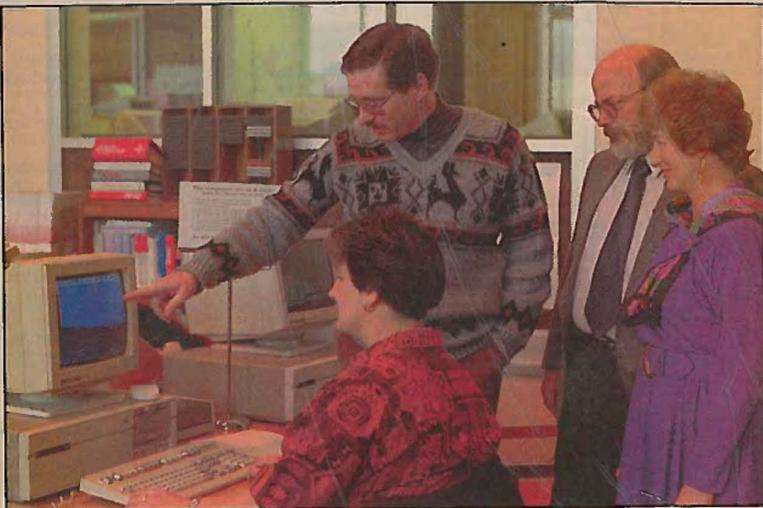

Public Printer Houk has played an active role in the printing community throughout his career, often noting his belief that a balance between the workplace and community service is fundamental to our system of government. He served as Chairman of the Board of Printing Industries of America (PIA) and International Business Forms Industries, Inc.

His commitment of time and energy to such organizations has earned him recognition and numerous honors. In 1988, he was inducted into the Printing Hall of Fame at Rochester Institute of Technology. Houk has earned several Outstanding Service Awards and Achievement Recognition Awards from the International Business Forms Industries and PIA respectively. He was the 1980 Business Forms Man of the Year and earned the Outstanding Leadership Award of the Printing Industry of Central Ohio in 1989.

Houk has served as chairman of the MARK Private Industry Council (which provides training to economically disadvantaged youth for job skills development), chairman of the Ohio State University Citizens Advisory Council, and president of the Richland County Regional Planning Commission. In addition, he has served as Director of the Graphic Arts Show Company, the largest exhibitor of print technology and processes established in the United States. He has also served as a Director of the Graphic Arts Education and Research Foundation, helping to arrange for grants to industry, educational institutions, and research organizations.

A graduate of Michigan State University, Public Printer Houk holds a bachelor's degree and has completed graduate work in psychology. He has had numerous articles published in the printing trade press throughout his career.

Houk served in the U.S. Army from 1945-47, and again from 1952-54. He is the father of two children, Lisa and Raymond. Houk and his wife Sally reside in McLean, VA.

Public library, NNCC designated depositories of federal documents

By Carol Hendershot
This week, April 18-24, is National Library Week and Northern Nevada Community College's Learning Resource Center and the Elko County Library have begun offering an entirely new service to their patrons. Both have been granted Federal Depository status and are receiving federal documents on a tremendous range of subjects.

According to Gary Avent, reference librarian at the Elko County Library, the U.S. Government is this country's largest publisher, issuing 7,000 publications a year ranging from single sheet items to large bound volumes of presidential papers.

Juanita Karr, director of NNCC's Learning Resource Center, says both libraries received their designations about a year ago, although items did not begin arriving until last fall. Depositories are designated by congressional appointment. NNCC was appointed by Harry Reid while Barbara Vucanovich appointed Elko County Library.

Avent says the public library has been a limited depository for state documents for 18 years and has been a State Data Affiliate of the Census Bureau for six or seven years. They have been receiving census information on Nevada during that time. NNCC has been receiving some publications on a subscription basis. The depository designations allowed them both to expand their federal document collections.

Government documents come in all sizes and shapes from paper to CD's, with an extraordinary amount issued in microfiche form. Avent says, "Microfiche isn't as convenient to the public as paper is but it does help with the storage problem."

Ed Nickel, reference librarian at NNCC, explained that the cost of housing the documents is borne by the depository. "That includes space within the facility, shelving, staff and miscellaneous storage devices. The depository must also furnish any necessary equipment, such as microfiche reader-printers and CD players and printers."

Although some of their patrons overlap, both libraries have definite fields which appeal to their primary patrons. Karr says NNCC is concentrating on health areas, mine safety regulations, mineral production, statistics, business information, census reports and educational aids.

"We have a very active nursing program and the health publications are especially useful to students and instructors in this field," she says. "The OSHA mine safety information will be especially helpful to local mining companies and the mining classes taught here at the college."

Avent says, "There are documents that we are all required to collect such as the Federal Register, Statutes at Large and several others. In addition to those we are putting special emphasis on the Great Basin, building a collection of interest to a broad range of people including everything we can get on the geography, wildlife, water resources, and soil surveys of the Great Basin area. The collection will include this information for Nevada, Idaho, Utah and parts of Oregon." As a public library, Avent feels it is important to develop a collection appealing to a large segment of the community.

NNCC is collecting 20 percent of all documents published. The public library is presently collecting about 3 percent. Avent says, "Eventually we will collect 20 percent, but at the present time we are short the number of work hours necessary for that large a collection."

He explained that whatever percentage point of publications a depository receives, an equal number of work hours is required, devoted solely to work on federal documents.

Karr explained how documents are selected. "Once a year we are allowed to select or delete items from our requests. All publications are issued by item number and a single item number can include as many as 50 different things."

When asked how they knew what they were getting when selecting by item number, Nickel laughed and said, "You don't. Items are generally category publications but occasionally a surprise article arrives. NNCC has a very nice poster written entirely in Chinese. Not only do we not know what it says, we don't know its source which end of it is up."

Avent says some item numbers are catch-all classes because some documents don't fit anywhere else and that accounts for unusual items. He has received what he believes is a tax form, written entirely in Russia. "It appears to be a list of regional offices where taxes can be filed."

think that's what it is because I keep seeing it. I don't know many Russian-Americans here filing taxes, but we're sad for them," he laughed.

Both libraries will receive some of their documents as reference material. Avent has been very impressed with the country area stuff he plans to house them in the reference area. Nickel plans to keep all CD's in reference. He says most of the CD's he has received are census statistics. "But the most useful ones aren't. We have a CD which shows fascinating data on natural phenomena including some actual tintypes from the 1906 San Francisco earthquake. Karr says the electronics are so good twisted bricks in chimneys are visible.

Documents can be stored anywhere in the facility as long as they are accounted for. The documents arrive with shipping lists and are checked off, put on shelf lists and shelved. The public library is currently using temporary rolling shelves in the periodical storage section of the main library until additional shelving arrives. Anything classified as reference will be housed in the reference area.

NNCC is housing documents in a separate room that also houses audiovisual equipment. At the present time, the public library does not circulate federal documents. NNCC allows paper items to be checked out.

Avent mentioned that because these documents are published with tax money, they belong to the public; there is no copyright on them and therefore it is legal to copy them. This service is available at both libraries.

Avent's most popular items have been the monthly publications by the Food and Drug Administration. The most popular of those so far has been a cookbook that came out at Christmas time featuring recipes for preparing turkeys. "We had many patrons who used that volume," he

NNCC has received numerous things dealing with Native American issues, and one student is using two publications on the Trail of Tears for a paper he is preparing. The Resources Education series is the most popular series, assisting teachers at all levels in preparing lessons and in planning for further education. Karr says she is receiving approximately 75 different serials ranging in scope from natural disaster information to "ent Business Weekly."

Avent points out that depository designation is a privilege, not a right. Depositors are inspected on a regular basis and it is possible to lose depository status.

Karr pointed out that the basic information for the public access information in the government document collections: there is a monthly catalog issued on paper, a microfiche version of the same thing, and there are various commercial companies issuing indexes on CD's and magnetic tape.

The public library uses one of the commercial companies, called Marcive. NNCC uses Silver Platter CD and will convert to Nevada Academic Library Information System (NALIS) tough UNK before the fall semester begins. There is approximately a two-month overlap between receipt of documents and the time they are entered into the index.

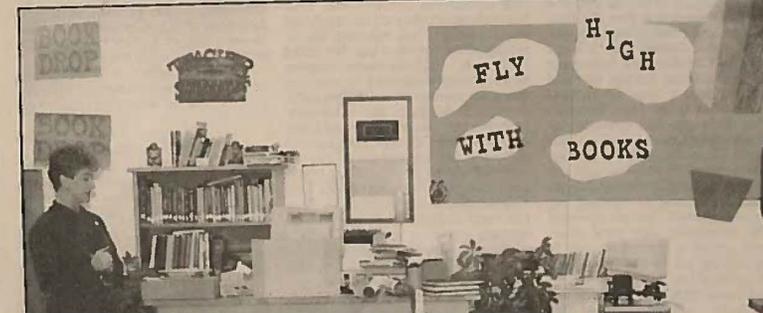

Karr and Nickel pointed out that because both collections are new, nothing issued prior their designations will be received unless another library gives it to them. Avent has received several monthly catalogs dating back to 1964 and NNCC has received back issues of a publication called Dispatch through transfer from other depositories.

Avent says only custodial and the government owner. "If I wanted something required to be good any other way. NNCC Nursing Department receives accreditation

Northern Nevada Community College is pleased to announce the awarding of five years initial accreditation to the Nursing Department. President Ron Remington received a communique from Dr. Gretchen Crawford Beebe, RN stating, "On January 28, 1993, the Board of Review for Associate Degree Programs of the National League for Nursing voted to grant initial accreditation to the NNCC associate degree program in nursing. The award is effective as of the date granted and is retroactive to a 12 month period prior to the date of the accreditation site visit."

Although a voluntary process, nursing accreditation is an arduous task. The nursing faculty at NNCC - consisting of director Georgeanna Smith, Marilee Kuhl, and Martha Fenger - began the first phase (planning) of their four-year accreditation process in October 1988. As the second phase of a three-phase plan, Master's in Nursing degrees were completed by Smith and Kuhl. The third phase of the agenda was completion of a 1.5 year self-study process, as prescribed by the League of Nursing.

According to nursing director Georgeanna Smith. "The self study conducted was an in depth exploration of 24 criteria with 54 items detailed within those parameters. An additional 62 items also had to be researched, compiled, and available for review at an actual site visit. The entire experience is very much like being under a microscope. Every aspect of our operation including course outline and syllabi, job descriptions, clinical evaluation tools, and budgets were examined in detail."

Smith also explained that all associate degree nursing programs, regardless of size, must meet the same criteria. Initial accreditation is awarded for a period of five years, two years, or zero years. Recommendations and deficiencies may also be noted by the board. "We are delighted to have been awarded initial five year accreditation with no recommendations and no deficiencies," Smith stated. "The League of Nursing has also asked permission to use the NNCC self study as a model for future applicants preparing for accreditation."

Two representatives of the League of Nursing, Tanya Purdie, EdD, RN and Patricia M. Bentz, MSN, RNC, visited the NNCC campus for 2.5 days in October. During those visits, the representatives met with various faculty members, current nursing students, the nursing advisory board, President Ron Remington, Dean of Instruction Bill Bonaudi, Dean of Student Services Stan Aiazzi, Registrar Lynn Mahlberg, and Learning Resources Center Director Juanita Karr. In addition, site visits were made to the Ruby Mountain Care Center and Elko General Hospital where the representatives met with administrators, staff, and NNCC graduates. The visiting examiners were required to complete their written report and mail it to the National League of Nursing Office in New York City before leaving Elko. That information was submitted to a Board of Review for final consideration and subsequent accreditation.

Joan Chalmers service in Elko on Saturday

Funeral services for Joan Chalmers, 68, who died Tuesday in Salt Lake City will be conducted at noon Saturday at St. Joseph's Catholic Church.

The Rev. Jim Setelik will officiate, with private interment in the city cemetery. She was born March 5, 1925, in Perth Amboy, N.J., and was raised there. She graduated from high school in Plainfield, N.J.

Following high school, she married Gordon Barrows and they moved to California.

He died in 1957 and she went to medical secretarial school in San Francisco. She moved to Elko in December 1958 and went to work for Drs. Roger Seyferth and John Gaynor.

She married Dr. Gaynor in 1961. He preceded her in death in 1973.

She obtained a real estate license in 1972 and worked for Lipparelli Real Estate until retiring in 1980. She had lived in Lamoille since 1974.

She married Syd Chalmers, who survives her, on June 12, 1981.

She had been active in Republican politics, belonged to the PEO Sisterhood Chapter A, was a member of the Elko Women's Medical Auxiliary, American Medical Association Auxiliary, Northeastern Nevada Historical Society and the Lamoille Women's Club.

The Chalmers were instrumental in starting the dinner dance fundraisers for Northern Nevada Community College.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by a son, Richard G. Barrows of Elko; stepson, John S. Gaynor Jr. of Las Vegas; and five grandchildren. She also was preceded in death by her parents and two brothers.

A memorial has been established with NNCC Foundation, P.O. Box 2047, Elko, 89803.

NNCC and Headstart cosponsor pilot program

Nevada Head Start staff, in cooperation with Northern Nevada Community College, are preparing to join groups in eleven other states for a demonstration training project.

An innovative high-tech/high-touch program, which will deliver training via satellite to Head Start teaching teams from Maine to Alaska, is scheduled to begin in September, and will include classroom teaching teams in Elko, Ely, and Yerington.

Shari Reynolds of Little Britches Head Start in Elko will be a facilitator for the Early Childhood Professional Development Network (ECPDN).

A new collaboration between public broadcasting, higher education, and the early childhood professional community, ECPDN is funded by a three-year demonstration grant to South Carolina Educational Television from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Head Start Office.

Only 400 participants will be enrolled in the first training cycle. The second cycle, beginning February, 1993, is expected to consist of another 400 participants and cover 36 states; coverage of all 50 states is expected by the final year of the project.

Using various local sites, including regional training facilities, institutions of higher education, or public television stations, ECPDN provides training for individuals working with geographically and/or economically isolated populations, including Alaskan villagers, and migrant and American Indian populations.

The natural scope of the program offers participants a unique opportunity to observe a cultural variety of working classrooms. Nevada's teaching teams will see how Head Start teachers in widely different environments deal with the universal issues of providing good early childhood education. Eskimo children in Alaska and children of migrant families in Maine may produce different challenges, however, ECPDN provides a way for Head Start staff nationwide to share, gain support and learn from the challenge of giving America's children a Head Start.

The complete training cycle of 40 weeks meets the requirements for the CDA credential; college credit also may be obtained.

Community college presidents seeking increased funding

2/19/93

CARSON CITY (AP) — Nevada community college presidents say they can't accommodate expected enrollment increases under Gov. Bob Miller's proposed higher education spending plan for the upcoming two years.

More than 37,000 students now attend the state's four community colleges, based in Carson City, Reno, Elko and Las Vegas, and enrollments at the schools are expected to grow more than 14 percent in the next two years.

But Ron Sparks, finance chief for the University of Nevada System which includes the community colleges, told lawmakers Wednesday that Miller's budget only allows for a 5 percent increase.

"We are now facing a budget that doesn't allow for increased enrollment," said Tony Calabro, president of Western Nevada Community College in Carson City, which also has satellite campuses in a few outlying towns.

Budget cuts over the last two years resulted in 20 position cuts at the Carson City campus, including 14 directly associated with instruction, Calabro said.

He also told members of the Senate Finance and Assembly Ways and Means committees that about 10 percent of students were turned away because they couldn't get into over-filled classes.

WNCC sought $17.6 million for the next two years, $3.1 million over current spending levels. Miller has recommended $14.6 million.

Paul Meacham, president of the Community College of Southern Nevada, echoed Calabro's comments on the squeeze created by more enrollments, saying, "Ladies and gentlemen, there is no way we can do that."

CCSN in Las Vegas requested $63 million for 1993-1995. Miller recommended $39 million.

Meacham also said during the day-long meeting on college funding that higher education should be a priority to help the state emerge from its recession by ensuring a trained work force.

"We're all in this together," Meacham said, adding that the state's biggest concern "should be to find the quickest way out of this mess."

Ronald Remington, president of Northern Nevada Community College based in Elko, said that college's service area covers a 35,000-square-mile area, with satellite operations in Winnemucca, McDermitt and Ely.

NNCC requested $11 million for the next biennium. Miller proposed $8.4 million, the same approved by lawmakers in 1991-1993.

Community college presidents seeking increased funding

EDFP 2/19/93

CARSON CITY (AP) — Nevada community college presidents say they can't accommodate expected enrollment increases under Gov. Bob Miller's proposed higher education spending plan for the upcoming two years.

More than 37,000 students now attend the state's four community colleges, based in Carson City, Reno, Elko and Las Vegas, and enrollments at the schools are expected to grow more than 14 percent in the next two years.

But Ron Sparks, finance chief for the University of Nevada System which includes the community colleges, told lawmakers Wednesday that Miller's budget only allows for a 5 percent increase.

"We are now facing a budget that doesn't allow for increased enrollment," said Tony Calabro, president of Western Nevada Community College in Carson City, which also has satellite campuses in a few outlying towns.

Budget cuts over the last two years resulted in 20 position cuts at the Carson City campus, including 14 directly associated with instruction, Calabro said.

He also told members of the Senate Finance and Assembly Ways and Means committees that about 10 percent of students were turned away because they couldn't get into

over-filled classes.

WNCC sought $17.6 million for the next two years, $3.1 million over current spending levels. Miller has recommended $14.6 million.

Paul Meacham, president of the Community College of Southern Nevada, echoed Calabro's comments on the squeeze created by more enrollments, saying, "Ladies and gentlemen, there is no way we can do that."

$50,000 Donation To NNCC — Newmont Gold gave the first part of their 1993 $100,000 pledge to Northern Nevada Community College Foundation last week. The money will go toward phase II of the College Community Center. New engine: Cummins Intermountain, the distributor of Cummins Products in Nevada, Wyoming, Utah and Idaho, and Cummins Engine Company of Columbus, Ind., Friday presented Northern Nevada Community College with a new 2,000 horsepower engine valued at $169,000. John McDonough, chairman of the NNCC Foundation, said "students will be disassembling and rebuilding the state-of-the-art engine, which will expose them to real experiences related to their training." And Bret Murphy, NNCC diesel technology instructor, said the donation "will prove to be invaluable in the training of basic and advanced diesel students." Lorin K. Pugh, chief executive officer and president of Cummins Intermountain, said the donation of the engine, Cummins' largest, emphasizes the company's commitment to education, the mining industry and the economic development of Elko. The engine is built to power 190-ton haul trucks. From left are: Murphy, Pugh and McDonough.

Kitchen Equipment — Northern Nevada Community College Foundation recently received kitchen equipment donated by Western Nevada Supply Co. for use in the College Community Center cafeteria. John McDonough, chairman of the Foundation (right) stated, "the availability of food service has truly enhanced campus life. Students spend more time interacting with each other and faculty more frequently." Representing Western Nevada Supply Co. was Steve Tartaglia (left) and he said, "Western Nevada Supply Co. is a community minded business. We are happy to support NNCC and its students." Western Nevada Supply Co. is a wholesale distributor of plumbing, heating, air conditioning, water works, irrigation, valves, pumps, tools, appliances, and fireplaces. It is the largest firm of its kind in the state and has been in business 29 years. F. IND 4/11/93 (staff photo)

IS THE KNIGHT WRITER DOOMED??

STUDENTS OF NNCC:

Last year the Knight Writer, a student-run newspaper became a reality. This year, that reality has been threatened because of a shortage of funds.

As you may be aware, last year the Knight Writer was allocated $2000.00 from the Associated Student Body to cover this year's publication costs. It was our hope to publish three issues per semester this year. However, due to situations beyond our control, the allotted amount may not cover our budget.

If you wish to keep the Knight Writer a student-run newspaper, a voice for student issues and information, then we may be forced to return to the ASB again and request additional funding.

In the event that this is the case, the staff of the Knight Writer would like to know that it has the collective support of the student body of NNCC in this request.

We will be circulating a petition in the near future outlining:

- *WHY ADDITIONAL FUNDING IS NECESSARY
- *WHERE THE FUNDS WOULD COME FROM
- *WHAT AFFECT, IF ANY, ALLOCATION OF ADDITIONAL FUNDS WOULD HAVE ON THE STUDENT BODY AS A WHOLE

We began publishing the Knight Writer in the hope that it would give every student a forum for the expression of opinions, access to information and serve as a "watchdog" for student interests.

If you believe, as we do, that a student voice such as the Knight Writer is a necessary element of the NNCC campus, then please sign the petition and give us your support.

College enrollment boasts boost

Official enrollment figures for 1992-93 were released this week from Northern Nevada Community College, boasting an increased student population all around.

The Winnemucca campus has swelled to 480 students with 133 full-time equivalent (FTE) students, plus 120 ESL (English as a Second Language) students.

Humboldt Sun 4-21-93

According to Winnemucca Campus Director Barbara Tenney, the number of FTE students is calculated by adding the credits of all the part-time students and dividing it by 15 - the number of credits taken by a full-time student.

Tenney said that the FTE figure is important, as the distribution of state funding is based on that total.

In addition to the overall student population, the number of students declaring a major continues to increase.

University parallel course enrollments in Winnemucca have increased an average of 13 percent, and community service class enrollment has increased 12 percent from spring 1992 to spring 1993.

This semester, a total of 21 students will be graduating from the Winnemucca Campus of Northern Nevada Community College - the largest group ever experienced by the college.

College summer session planned

Northern Nevada Community College will sponsor its first official session of summer school from June 7 to July 30. According to NNCC director Barbara Tenney, the session will provide more "meaty" contributions than have other summer schedules.

MSHA training course offered

Northern Nevada Community College will be offering MSHA training for all newly-hired contractors and mine vendors. Persons needing the eight-hour refresher course may sign up for the May 10 class session only. The course will be held at Northern Nevada Community College at 395 W. Minor Street. Pre-registration and payment of fees at the college center is required. Call 623-4824 for more information.

vide more "meaty" contributions than have other summer schedules.

Registration for classes will begin on Monday, May 10, and run through the end of May at the NNCC office located at 395 W. Minor Street. Students must pay class fees at the time of registration.

A schedule of classes may be obtained from Northern Nevada Community College, though a list of class offerings is available in the Friday, May 7, issue of The Humboldt Sun.

Help keep the 'community' in our local college -
Humboldt Sen 5-14-93
NNCC needs your support!

The Humboldt Committee of Northern Nevada Community College Foundation is asking for your help.

In order to secure funding from the Nevada Legislature to expand the local college campus, the community must offer matching funds as a show of support for the project.

The college center is currently housed in an 1,450-square-foot rented building and two adjoining trailers. At present, 90 percent of the classes are held at Lowry High School. In order to adequately serve the educational needs of the citizens of our area - now and in the future - a permanent community college facility is necessary.

The current goal is to raise at least $1.6 million to fund a new 20,000-square-foot building. The Foundation has already secured five acres of property, located across from Lowry High School, in a generous donation by the Humboldt County School District.

NNCC's Winnemucca Center now needs the financial support of area residents in order to realize the goal of a new facility in the near future. It's not going to be easy, but we're trying to make it fun.

You're cordially invited to get involved in the festivities of NNCC WINNEMUCCA WEEK and we hope you'll offer your own contribution toward Humboldt County's educational future!

NNCC WINNEMUCCA WEEK - May 16-22

Events planned — Humboldt Sun 5-14-93

Winnemucca college celebrated in wake of funding shortages

"NNCC Winnemucca Week" will be observed May 16-22, with a number of special events planned to draw attention to the quest for expansion of the local campus of Northern Nevada Community College.

One goal of the week is to raise funds toward a new $1.7 million building to serve as a permanent college center in Winnemucca. Money for the project is currently being sought from the Nevada Legislature, but several obstacles have cropped up to slow the process.

Last summer, the University of Nevada Board of Regents ranked the new building for Winnemucca fourth on its priority list, behind nearly $70 million in funding for new construction in southern Nevada and at Truckee Meadows Community College.

The Public Works Board rejected the priority list and recommended the expenditure of only $30 million, which included funding for NNCC's Winnemucca Center.

This turned the local project into a political hot potato, as the Board of Regents were angered by Public Works' disregard for its priority list. In February, Gov. Bob Miller recommended that the Legislature fund $27 million in expansion to the Community College of Southern Nevada, with no dollars offered for Truckee Meadows or NNCC-Winnemucca.

While this was discouraging, the Humboldt Committee of the NNCC Foundation did not give up, but has sought the aid of Assemblyman John Marvel and the community to secure the funding.

In March the foundation launched a major fund raiser with a three-prong goal: first, to gather as much money as possible to show the Legislature that Humboldt County residents back the college expansion; second, to raise money to augment the "bare bones" construction budget if the $1.7 million is provided by the Legislature; and, third, to raise all money needed to build the facility if the Legislature declines to provide any funding.

Foundation fund raiser co-chairman Gael McGibbon said the initial phase of the drive involved seeking contributions from staff members and students of NNCC's Winnemucca Center. This effort raised $27,000.

That, combined with pledges of $50,000 each from the city and county, donation of five acres of land by the Humboldt County School District, contributions of $5,000 per year from Amax Gold and money raised through NNCC's Performing Arts Series, brings the fund raising total-to-date to around 10 percent of the new facility construction cost.

It is hoped NNCC Winnemucca Week will promote further awareness of the need for a new facility and encourage area residents to contribute to the building fund, said McGibbon.

She called the observance a "short term" fund raiser, aimed at raising every dollar of community support possible to help sway legislators toward allocating funds for the building this year. The Humboldt Committee has until June 1 to prepare its presentation to the Legislature.

NNCC Winnemucca Week

kicks of Monday with an eight-hour cut-a-thon at La Mane Beauty Salon, 319 Aiken Street. Eleven hair stylists from four local salons will participate in the event, offering haircuts for an $8 minimum donation to the college fund from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Participating stylists will be Fran Case of Denim; Connie Pickett of the Looking Glass; Pat Edmondson, Roxanne Chabot and Gloria Plaza of House of Style; and Lori Stoker Miller, Alicia Garijo, Shirley Corbett, Gina Mercer, Stacy Cassinelli and Tammy Tompkins of La Mane. The Family Hairitage has offered the use of equipment and made a donation toward the college building fund.

Tuesday, Mayor Paul Vesco will make an official proclamation of May 16-22 as NNCC Winnemucca Week.

Wednesday, NNCC art students under the direction of Teddy Swecker will hold an exhibit and reception from 7-9 p.m. at the Humboldt County Library. Refreshments and entertainment will be provided.

Fund raising efforts will hit their peak as KWNA broadcasts live from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday at the Model T as part of an eight-hour telethon. Businesses, public officials and individuals will be challenged to contribute to Winnemucca's efforts for a full-time, permanent college campus.

Friday, NNCC students, instructors and volunteers will canvass neighborhoods and business districts in an effort to raise contributions.

A complete schedule of next week's activities is published on page four of this issue of the Sun, as well as contribution coupon.

For more information on the fund raiser, contact NNCC's Winnemucca Center at 623-4824.

Ely D.T.

The Ely Center of Northern Nevada Community College has good overall quality of education, good quality of instructors, but has poor facilities, resources and equipment, according to a students survey.

The survey showed 93 percent of the respondents said the overall education at NNCC, Ely Center was very good or good. Less than 8 percent said the quality was fair or poor.

The center's instructors also fared well. The survey showed that 90 percent of the respondents felt good about their instructors.

Joel Munson, NNCC Ely director, said in a press release that he was pleased with survey results.

"The primary mission of the college is to serve students and when we make improvements toward that mission it is very exiting," he said.

But while the survey showed the product may be good, its package got poor marks. Over 60 percent of the respondents said they considered facilities, resources and equipment available fair or poor. Only 39 percent believed such resources to be good or very good.

Of the 303 students enrolled at The Ely Center for the spring semester, 163 students responded. A copy of the survey is available at the Ely Center.

Shame on Elko for poor treatment of grads

To the Editor:

We are 1993 graduates from NNCC Winnemucca branch. On May 17, we traveled to Elko to attend the graduation ceremony at the convention center. We were told that the Winnemucca students would be seated together and recognized as a group. We were not recognized and we were totally disgusted with the conduct of the ceremony. The Winnemucca branch was not recognized even though we had a graduation class of 21.

As we sat through the ceremony we listened to the president congratulate the students and applaud the Elko faculty. No mention of the Winnemucca faculty was ever made. In fact the Winnemucca faculty was not invited to the ceremony. The only faculty from Winnemucca who was invited to attend was Barbara Tenney, and this only because she is the Winnemucca director. However, even she was treated with uncalled-for disrespect. Instead of being recognized and being seated on the stage with the other deans and branch directors, she was seated in back of the graduating class with some of the Elko faculty.

Although part of the graduating class, we felt like the illegitimate children. There was never any recognition for the hard work and dedication that is put into the community college here in Winnemucca. None of the students from Winnemucca were recognized as coming from here. If we had known that Elko wanted to take the credit for us graduation, we would have refused to go to that ceremony. We felt rejected and we found out exactly how the Elko college felt about our faculty here. If truth be told, we have a better faculty with far more dedicated teachers, who care about their students and put far more effort into their teaching. We are not putting down the Elko teaching faculty; however, these people teach in a college environment from 9 - 5. The faculty in Winnemucca hold down jobs during the day and at night teach three-hour classes. They cannot just be doing it for the money. The love of teaching and caring for the students is what keeps these people teaching.

We feel that for their efforts and dedication they should be recognized. If we had had our way, we would have held our own ceremony here, surrounded by the faculty of the Winnemucca branch and run by the lady who held our hands and helped us wind our way towards graduation, Barbara Tenney.

Shame on you, Elko NNCC, for the unprofessional and rude attitude with which you treated us. It is our money that helps support you and it's our efforts which give you a good name. Bravo to Winnemucca NNCC for the late nights spent teaching classes to people who have to attend at night. Bravo for the caring, personal approach that every student receives. Bravo for the extra time spent in helping us to learn and the open doors and telephone lines for all of the faculty, for whenever a student has a problem. Bravo for the efforts that the faculty is putting forth to build another building, without the help of Elko NNCC.

Survey: Ely businesses pleased with NNCC

Northern Nevada Community College Ely Center received good marks in a recent survey taken by local businessmen.

The Occupational Needs Assessment Survey, which was conducted, by NNCC's Office of Institution Research and Assessment, showed that over 90 percent of local employers said that NNCC provides important services to the community.

The survey also said that roughly half of the employers — a total of 45 took the survey — considered themselves informed or very informed about the college and its programs.

In rating the quality of NNCC classes taken by employers or employees of a company, the college was given more good and excellent ratings than poor and average.

Employer comments included the need for more computer classes but a general approval of what classes the college offers. One employer wrote that he would like to see higher expectations from instructors and quality of programs.

Sixty percent of the employers interviewed agreed that short courses would be important for their employees. And according to the survey, about fifty percent would support employees who took such seminars.

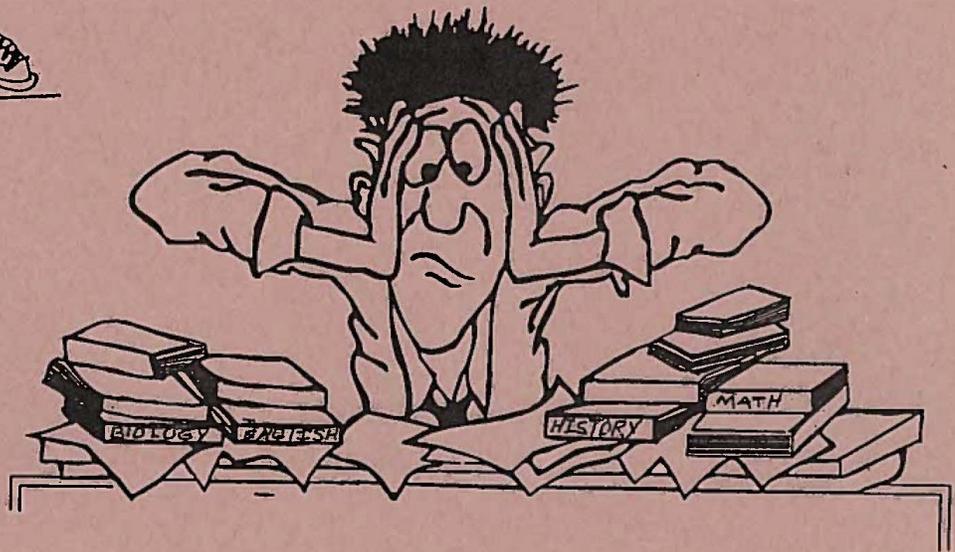

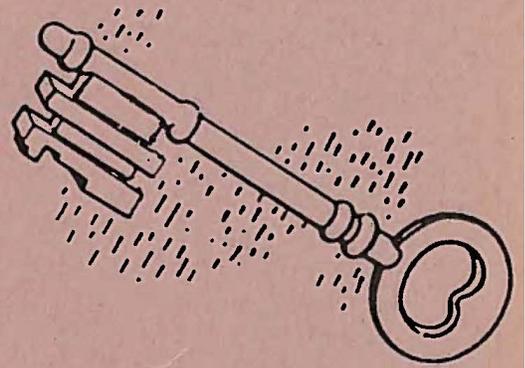

Ely D. Times 7-30-93

The survey also asked employers which areas K-12 and secondary schools are most deficient in developing students. According to the survey a significant amount thought that deficiencies existed in basic skills, problem solving and creative thinking.

NNCC intends to use the results of the survey to improve services and programs, according to a press release.

Employers interviewed ranged from the Ely State Prison to banks to insurance companies to retail stores.

For a free brochure on the survey results call the Ely Center at 289-3589.

Cultural Rainbow set

The Ethnic Minority Affairs Committee of Northern Nevada Community College will sponsor a free multicultural event titled Cultural Rainbow on April 15 from 4 to 6 p.m. in Berg Hall. The community is invited to attend the event which will feature exhibitions demonstrating the music, dance, and interpretive movements of various cultures. Each presentation will also include an explanation of the significance and meaning within the culture of the performance. Scheduled exhibitions include the following: The Native American Dance Consortium, the Basque Dancers, the East Indian dancers, Hispanic music, Appalachian clogging, and a Tai Chi demonstration.

Ethnic foods will also be available for purchase for $1 per item during the event including Hopi stew, Indian tacos and fry bread, tamales and red chili, a Dominican Republic dessert, a Japanese dish, and many others. The event will definitely offer something for everyone and is a perfect family entertainment opportunity.

Trike-A-Thon set at NNCC

Northern Nevada Community College will sponsor the St. Jude Trike-A-Thon at the college's Child Development Center, reported Patricia Agard-Haye, event coordinator. The event will be held Monday through Friday.

Three preschool classes will be participating under the direction of Marilee Harper, center director, in a trike-a-thon safety program. Liz Oliver's class of four and five year olds; Becky Kerna's class of four and five year olds; and Barbara Tjoa's class of three and four year olds. After the children have been instructed on the proper safety rules for tricycles, bicycles and riding toys, each class will conduct their own trike-a-thon.

The trike-a-thon will help raise funds for research and patient care at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

Enrollment at NNCC increases 7.5 percent

Northern Nevada Community College enrollment increased by 7.5 percent this year, according to figures released earlier this month.

According to Lynn Mahlberg, director of admissions and records, the increase in the number of full-time equivalent (FTE) students makes NNCC the second fastest growing community college system in Nevada.

Mahlberg further explained, "For the spring 1993 semester, 2,972 students enrolled in state-support classes. Because the majority of community college students take classes part-time, state funding for each college of the University and Community College System of Nevada is based on the equivalent of full-time students each taking a 15-credit load. The total credits taken by the 2,972 students brings the total full-time equivalent (FTE) student count to 932. This, along with the increase in FTE NNCC reported for the fall 1992 semester represents a net annual increase of 7.1 percent for the 1992-93 academic year."

NNCC offers classes in 15 sites within the five-county service area covering 45,000 square miles. The Elko campus headcount was 1,667 students this spring with an FTE of 564. Enrollments have also continued to increase in the rural areas. Outside of Elko, centers post the following headcounts and FTE: Winnemucca — headcount 480 and 133 FTE; Ely — 303 and 84; Battle Mountain — 75 and 16.3; Owyhee — 65 and 10.0; Wells — 49 and 8; McDermitt — 26 and 6.2; Eureka — 21 and 2.9; and the combined prison and honor camp programs in Carlin, Ely, Wells, and Winnemucca — headcount 112 and 64.1 FTE.

In addition, the number of students declaring a major is continuing to increase. University parallel course enrollments in Elko, Ely, and Winnemucca have increased an average of 13 percent over the last year. In addition to the state-support, academic credit increases, NNCC offers Community Service classes as well. The number of students enrolling in community service classes also increased 12 percent last year.

Those interested in further information on the types of courses available through NNCC can call Student Services at 753-2101. — submitted by NNCC EDFP 4/26/93

Editor:

While scanning the class descriptions of NNCC's course roster I read the following under the political science category:

"103 Principles of American Constitutional Government

"The Constitution and the Bill of Rights were not ordained by God or nature. They are human creations —

Maybe I'm being too sensitive or just tired with the way many walk over others beliefs, but an institution that promotes itself as a support to the surrounding communities should show respect to their beliefs. The statement would certainly never be proven in class as both the pro and con of the question have to do with our basic concept of the Supreme Being and that varies to quite an extent.

I hope I'm not misunderstood. I've not spoken against freedom of speech only against intolerance and discourtesy. A very large portion of the communities do believe that Divine Providence put this country on it's feet. It might be interesting how many of our congressional leaders have taken this class. The pattern seems to fit generally. As soon as their payroll checks are arrived they thumb their noses at the very people that verbally they say they are helping.

So to the political science department of Northern Nevada Community College, I give a thumbs down.

NNCC hosts barbecue

Northern Nevada Community College faculty members invite Elko area residents to "join us for an afternoon of festivities, food and fun" at a barbecue from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. tomorrow on the NNCC campus. The barbecue will kick off a year-long celebration of NNCC's 25th anniversary.

Those attending are asked to bring a salad, side dish, or dessert. Drinks will be provided, and the Kiwanis Club will prepare hamburgers.

Randy Vasquez, Charlie Harmer

and Hal Caywood of the rock group Recreation will provide music. Participants also may play volleyball, softball and pee wee golf games. The child center playground will be open under adult supervision for those bringing small children.

The barbecue affords an opportunity for Elko area residents to visit with faculty and staff, tour the grounds and facilities, and take a "sneak preview" of NNCC's newest, state-of-the-art addition, the Technical Arts Center, scheduled to house classes beginning Aug. 31.

Northern Nevada Community College

Elko, in northeastern Nevada, is not just a cowboy town. Or a gold and barite mining center. Believe it or not, it's also a cultural oasis between Reno and Salt Lake City. And one of the main centers of culture in Elko is Northern Nevada Community College, the state's first community college.

Whether you're looking for a solid education or concerts or lectures — day or evening — NNCC is worth looking into. You'll find Elko's community college quite competitive with other institutions in its courses, its faculty, and its state-of-the-art instructional equipment. Outsiders are also impressed with the creative methods NNCC uses to deliver educational programs throughout its 47,000-square-mile service area (Elko, Eureka, Humboldt, Lander, and White Pine counties). In addition to the main campus in Elko, for example, NNCC operates a full-service center in Winnemucca.

One advantage of serving this sparsely populated area is being able to stay small. Individual attention — by instructors, counselors, even administrators — is a reality at this small college. And for those who live in our many small outlying towns, a variety of courses in person or by television are available in their home communities.

NNCC, on the other hand, is just big enough to offer full facilities and services to its students. For example, the new Student Services building, William J. Berg Hall, houses the offices of faculty members who set aside a number of hours each week to meet with students. NNCC offers a variety of services — financial aid, career assessment and counseling, and personal counseling. The college also operates a sophisticated Career Information System which enables students to explore careers suitable to their interests and abilities, as well as the Nevada Occupational Information System.

In addition to vocational programs designed to train students in specific job skills, Northern Nevada Community College assists those with special problems. The Single Parent Center offers counseling, child care, tuition assistance, and training in job skills to families with only one parent. Our Adult Basic Education program enables a student weak in basic skills, such as math or English, to go ahead with his or her college education.

English as a Second Language (ESL) is available for those who come to NNCC speaking a foreign language. The college's At-Risk program has saved a number of high school students from becoming dropouts. And Job Placement secures positions for current students and those who have completed their college work.

What about living in northeastern Nevada? Most people choose to come here — for the hunting or fishing or hiking or cross-country skiing or just its serenity, which makes the quality of life so good. Elko has well-kept parks and two health clubs. The beautiful Ruby Mountains are just down the road. There are dozens of alpine lakes and bouquets of Nevada wildflowers on nearby mountain slopes. And America's newest national park, Great Basin, is less than four hours from the main campus. The world-famous Cowboy Poetry Gathering is held in Elko every January. And people come from throughout the U.S. to enjoy the National Basque Festival in July.

Northern Nevada Community College has the good fortune to be at once small and expansive. We're the rural "Other Nevada," mostly outside the adult playgrounds of Reno and Las Vegas. But we're not rural in the sense of dull sameness. Living in isolation in the Great Basin and Range, people cherish diversity. And we're friendly, so you are welcome, too.

Northern Nevada's community colleges develop qualified employees

Approximately 65 percent of U.S. corporations are finding it difficult to hire qualified professionals as well as skilled and technical employees, according to Area Development magazine. And, the U.S. Department of Education estimates nearly 25 percent of the labor force does not have basic reading, writing and math skills.

Nevada is attacking the problem through its education programs. Besides the well-known University of Nevada in Reno, northern Nevada is home to three community colleges: Truckee Meadows Community College in Reno, Western Nevada Community College in Carson City, and Northern Nevada Community College in Elko. All are ready and eager to assist businesses with a variety of training needs in addition to providing a qualified work force.

Northern Nevada's community colleges offer a wide range of courses. Training courses can be taken from the current curriculum or customized to meet each employer's needs. Whether on campus or at the job site, courses range from mining, welding and forklift safety to customer service, computer skills and Spanish for supervisors.

"Businesses realize it is more cost effective to have employees trained instead of hiring outside the area," said Val

Easterly, director of planning and public information at Northern Nevada Community College.

"This trend will continue because skill levels are continually increasing," said Mike Rainey, executive director at the Institute for Business and Industry at Truckee Meadows Community College.

Collectively, northern Nevada's community colleges have conducted over 1,000 classes and served more than 15,000 students in the past three years.

New or expanding manufacturing companies may be eligible for reimbursement of employee training costs through the "Quick Start" training program of the Nevada Commission on Economic Development. The Quick Start Job Training Program provides state funds for short-term, intensive job training. Each participating business is required to contribute, in kind or cash, an amount equal to 25 percent of the state's contribution.

The state's commitment to education was expressed by Gov. Bob Miller in his 1993 State of the State Address when he said, "If we are to rebuild America as a world leader, we absolutely must adequately fund the growth in our schools, community colleges and universities."

The University and Community College System of Nevada is committed to helping businesses identify problems and implement solutions. In fact, the community colleges, in conjunction with state supported training programs and pro-business policies, are part of the reason Nevada is the fastest growing state in the nation. Thanks to Nevada's commitment to higher education, as the labor force grows, so will employees' skills.

The University and Community College System of Nevada is committed to helping businesses identify problems and implement solutions.

ELKO, NEVADA

Elko tops list of best small towns

Author Norman Crampton surveyed all the small towns in the country for his new reference book, The 100 Best Small Towns in America. His conclusion: Elko, Nevada, is #1.

"In addition to being a vital community with high marks for education, available health care and the like, this high desert town is home to gold mining, gambling and cattle ranching, and hosts a one-of-a-kind annual Cowboy Poetry Gathering," Crampton observed.

Elko is located in north-eastern Nevada, approximately halfway between Salt Lake City and Reno, on Interstate 80 which runs from New York to San Francisco. It was established as a railroad town site during construction of the transcontinental railroad in 1868. Since the mid-1980s it has benefited from a boom in gold mining, which is viewed as steady employment for decades.

To determine his rankings, Crampton defined small towns as those with between 5,000 and 15,000 inhabitants (Elko's population in 1990 was 14,736.) He rated such factors as economic base, scenic location, population diversity, educational level of the inhabitants, local government spending for education, available health care, low crime rates and per capita income. Elko had the highest average score of all the factors considered.

Crampton selected towns "where the traditional values of family, community, faith, hard work and patriotism remain strong ... [towns] that are helping to preserve the American dream. All the towns are ideal places to live, work and raise families."

Based on Crampton's criteria, Elko richly deserves its top ranking.

Elderhostel?

What is an Elderhostel?

NNCC will offer Elko's first Elderhostel program this September 26 - October 3, Sunday afternoon to Saturday morning. The Elderhostelers will be on campus all day Monday and Tuesday, including lunch at the cafeteria. Wednesday through Friday, they will be on field trips.

Elderhostel is a non-profit educational program which provides an academic adventure for adults 60 and older who are looking for something different. Promoted through the national organization's catalogs, the fast growing organization currently has programs located on 1800 campuses across the country and throughout the world. Last year, almost 1/4 million people enrolled in Elderhostel.

The typical Elderhostelers are people who enjoy learning, and attend programs to learn about the special features and people of the area. Our 39 Elderhostelers are mostly from California, with five from Nevada, and others from Florida, Canada, Ohio and Virginia. Most are married couples or friends traveling together. Seven are traveling alone, including an 85-year-old. They are arriving to learn about and enjoy Elko's cultural heritage, history and beautiful setting.

Their fee of $350 pays for the 6-night program, including housing, meals, classes and any incidentals. Elderhostelers will stay at the Gold Country Inn. Breakfasts and dinners are taken at the restaurant in the motel. Newmont Gold and the Red Lion have donated buses to transport the participants.

The three non-credit, undergraduate level courses offered include:

"Folk Arts of the Nevada Cowboy" with Hal Cannon
"The Donner Party Through Nevada" with Charles Greenhaw
"Exploring the Desert in Sketches" with Patty Fox

There is no homework, preparatory work, or grades. Each class meets for one and a half hours a day, and involves lengthy field trips. Evening activities are also planned during the week.

Our next Elderhostel program is already planned. It will take place the week of June 12- June 18, 1994. The courses offered will be "The Roots of Cowboy Music" with Blanton Owen, "Wagon Ruts in the Sage" with Charles Greenhaw, and "Islands in the Desert" with Lois and Mark Ports.

When you see them here on campus, please take the time to greet them. They are an interesting and enthusiastic group.

NNCC hosts barbecue

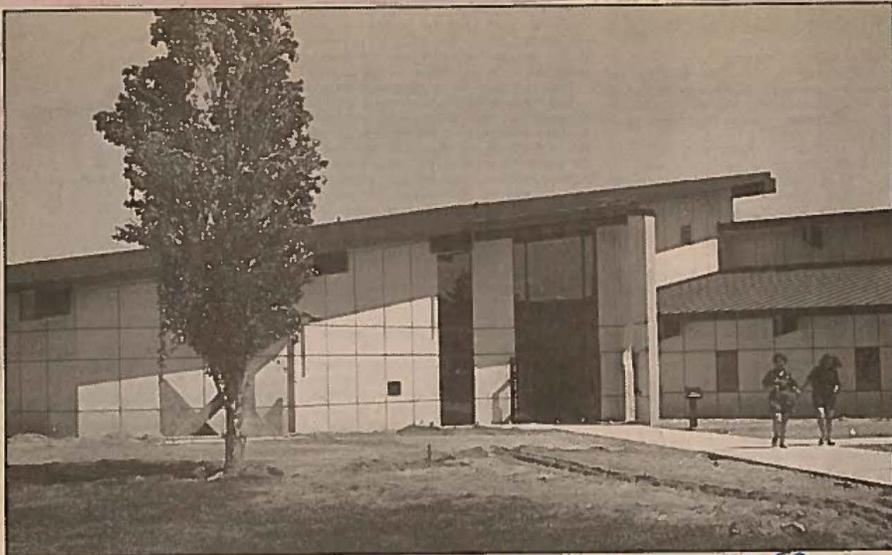

Northern Nevada Community College faculty members invite Elko area residents to "join us for an afternoon of festivities, food and fun" at a barbecue from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. tomorrow on the NNCC campus. The barbecue will kick off a year-long celebration of NNCC's 25th anniversary.

Those attending are asked to bring a salad, side dish, or dessert. Drinks will be provided, and the Kiwanis Club will prepare hamburgers.

Randy Vasquez, Charlie Harmer

and Hat Caywood of the rock group Recreation will provide music. Participants also may play volleyball, softball and pee wee golf games. The child center playground will be open under adult supervision for those bringing small children.

The barbecue affords an opportunity for Elko area residents to visit with faculty and staff, tour the grounds and facilities, and take a "sneak preview" of NNCC's newest, state-of-the-art addition, the Technical Arts Center, scheduled to house classes beginning Aug. 31.

Newest building: Area residents and faculty attending a 25th anniversary barbecue at Northern Nevada Community College Saturday also got a chance to preview the new Technical Arts Center. Work is nearly done on the building, which

Discover NNCC September 30

ELKO, NEVADA- Northern Nevada Community College extends an invitation to high school seniors throughout Northern Nevada to Discover NNCC. Discover NNCC, scheduled for September 30, is an event designed to bring seniors from Austin, Battle Mountain, Carlin, Elko, Eureka, Jackpot, Lowry (Winnemucca), McDermitt, Owyhee, Wells, Wendover, and White Pine High Schools to the NNCC

Elko campus.

Participants in the event will tour the campus, experience how college differs from high school, have an opportunity to meet and ask questions of college students, receive an overview of NNCC's vocational programs, visit classrooms, and receive financial aid information. Also planned for the four-hour visitation is a barbecue and recreational activity.

Public radio station KNCC finally on air

KNCC is finally on the air. The public radio station came on the air at 9:30 a.m. Thursday, said District Attorney Marshall Smith, who led the drive to establish the station. The station, which airs jazz and classical music and other shows, broadcasts at 91.5 FM.

Organizers have been ready to go since early last year, but Federal Communications Commission approval was lacking. It was needed after a transmission antenna was moved from Adobe Summit to Elko Mountain.

Permission was granted last month, but Smith said he did not know about it until Oct. 7. Smith said the antenna was moved for better reception. The 100-watt station can be heard from up to 80 miles to the northeast, 30 miles to the west and from the southeast to the Ruby Mountains, he said.

The signal originates from KUNR on the University of Nevada Reno campus. "Down the road" local broadcasting may start, said Smith. Smith is joined on the station's executive board by Tony Salvatierra, David Lockie, Paul Stevens and Julie Duewel.

Northern Nevada Community College is the "licensee" of the station, which is housed at the college. Plans are under way to move to Western Folklife Center, said Lockie.

Those seeking information should call Smith at home, 738-3145.

NNCC staff cookbook available

Served on a Silver Platter, a cookbook compiled by the Northern Nevada Community College classified staff, is now available at the bookstore in the college community center.

The book contains more than 400 recipes plus campus photographs and history; it also commemorates the college's 25th anniversary. Cost of the cookbook is $10. Proceeds from sales go to a scholarship fund or to support various campus projects.

"NNCC has always had a reputation for being staffed with many of the county's best cooks. Those who have attended memorable occasions at the college have been treated to diverse, gastronomical delights," said Jackie Buzan, classified council chairman. "Here is an opportunity for the community to share in the wealth of recipes heralded by staff members." Free Press 10/14

Horsemen to learn computer recording

Northern Nevada Community College is slated to offer a one-day workshop titled "Computerizing Your Horse Records" from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday in the computer lab of the Charles Greenhaw Technical Arts Building.

All horse owners from a teen-ager with a horse as a 4-H project to a manager of a large horse breeding operation will benefit from "this very practical course," according to instructor Les McKenzie.

McKenzie has developed a "user-friendly" software program to help students organize various horse rerecords onto a personal computer. Each horse will have his date of birth, sire, dam and registration number on file. In addition, shoeing records will enable students to tell at a glance dates of trimming and shoeing, which farrier was used and the cost.

Vaccination and worming records will record dates, product used, costs and who wormed and vaccinated the horse. McKenzie also has included a section for general veterinary records with a special section to write in comments in addition to the dates, costs and any medicines and procedures the veterinarian has recommended.

The program can print out expenses in each category or provide summaries for a specific period of time. Another feature of the program is that students will be able to predict foaling dates for mares that have been bred.

No previous experience with computers is required, but students should bring their own horse records with them to enter onto the disk during the workshop. IBM compatible computers will be used for the workshop. Students should enroll for the zero-credit community course in the NNCC Student Community Center building at the desk across from the bookstore. The cost of $35 includes a programmed disk to take home. Those seeking information should call Pat Warren at 733-2231.

NNCC Meets EHS Seniors

by: Marielena Peña

Last Wednesday Northern Nevada Community College held an orientation day for high school seniors. NNCC staff offered the seniors a tour around the campus, a conference about NNCC, and a barbecue.

At the conference the recently elected Student Body, answered all the questions the seniors had about NNCC and college.

Student Body President Tammy Gardner, Vice-President Angel Riley, Secretary Mona Noakes, and Senators Eric Ford, Jenny Stevenson, Shauna Pilola, and Megumi Sato shared their experiences in college. They also explained the seniors how they became a part of the Student Body.

After the conference, the seniors enjoyed hamburgers at the barbecue held at the new Community Center Building.

Shoshone storytellers featured in program

Northern Nevada Community College will present the final program in the year-long humanities series titled "Celebrating Stories" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the gallery of the Northeastern Nevada Museum.

Beverly Crum, Sylvia Dick and Art Cavanaugh will captivate audiences with "The Shoshone Storytellers," a special evening exploring the myths, stories, songs and prayers of the Shoshone people. The program, made possible with assistance from the Nevada Humanities Committee, the state affiliate of the National Endowment for the Humanities, is free and open to the public. Those attending will also want to peruse the work of Native American artists currently on display at the museum. The exhibition is the first of a seven-part series of craft displays scheduled for the "1993 Year of the American Craft."

Crum, an Owyhee native, is a distinguished author, linguist and ethnologist. She received an Associate of Arts degree from Northern Nevada Community College in 1973 and completed her bachelor's and master's degrees in education and anthropology, with an emphasis in language from the University of Utah. Crum is coauthor of the textbook How to Read and Write Shoshone and of a grammar text that will be released next fall. At the request of author Ann M. Smith, Crum wrote the afterward for a publication titled A Collection of Myths. The work, published by the University of Utah, will

Day of the Young Child set for the 17th of April

On April 17th, the Northeastern Nevada Association for the Education of Young Children, area Child Centers, and KRJC will sponsor the 2nd annual "Day Of The Young Child."

The National Association for the Education of Young Children encourages child care centers and preschool across the nation to focus attention on the needs of young children and their families through public activities. A commitment to improving opportunities available to the children in our community will be made only if citizens are challenged to become aware and involved.

"The Day of the Young Child" will be held at the Elko Convention Center 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. The sponsors would like to extend an invitation to the children and families of Elko County to come and join in a day of arts, crafts, games, education, entertainment, and much more. Parents are asked to accompany their children. Booths will provide information and handouts for parents of young children. Special guests of the day will include: Smokey the Bear, Woodsey the Owl, Vince and Larry the Nevada Highway Patrol Dummies.

Booth tickets will be sold inside the door for a quarter a piece for games and art activities. All health, safety and educational booths are free of charge. There is no admission fee. The following preschools and centers will be co-hosting the event and exhibiting their children's art work at the Convention Center: Creative Kid's Coop, Frances Keller Child Care Center, Magic Moments Coop, Noah's Ark Northside, NNCC Child Care Center, St. Mark Lutheran Preschool, Elko Colony Head Start, Little Britches Heat Start, Calvary Baptist Church Sunday School, Early Intervention Program, HAP-PY Program, Busy Body Daycare.

If any organization or individual would like to set up a booth or provide entertainment, contact Lynette Remington at 753-5941 or Maria Toledo at 753-1214.

be released this month. Crum, an avid outdoors person and runner, is totally committed to preserving as much of the Shoshone heritage as possible. She is a founder of the Shoshone Language Program whereby, Northern Nevada Community College, with funding assistance from the Nevada Humanities Committee, has presented literacy classes in Owyhee, Elko, Duckwater and the Goshute Reservation.

When funding is not available for materials and supplies, she continues to offer courses to local groups in an effort to preserve the Shoshone culture by means of "scholarly preparation of oral traditions." Language fluency is critical to the accomplishment of this goal for the rich cultural traditions of the Shoshone are in danger of being lost and forgotten. Shoshone youth are also encouraged to get involved in the projects, passing family and community traditions from generation to generation — critical to the survival of their heritage.

Elko resident Sylvia Dick is a well-known basket maker and healer. Well into her seventies and despite health problems, Dick gives generously to her people of her prayers and oral traditions. The songs and prayers she recites have been learned from elders and she continues the traditions in a personal effort to keep the tradition alive.

Arthur Cavanaugh, Shoshone singer, storyteller and resident of the Fort McDermitt Paiute/Shoshone Reservation, has an awesome responsibility. The 64-year-old carries with him the voices of his ancestors, kept alive through oral tradition for 1,000 years. Cavanaugh learned the songs from his father. He states, "When I was a boy growing up around Winnemucca, we had no TV and no electric lights. The only entertainment was listening to my dad sing stories. Today, many of our younger children don't even speak Shoshone. I haven't met any young people interested in becoming singers. There are other Shoshone singers, but each has his own repertoire of stories from his own branch of the legends."

The songs are relegated to memory and not written down. They are tales filled with stories of nature — about animals, mountains, thunderclouds, streams, plants and the blessing they bestow on man. Cavanaugh is a past tribal chairman and has served on the Nevada Indian Commission. Having worked as a ranch hand, miner and carpenter, he says he sings "just to be singing."

Those interested in more information regarding the Shoshone program can call Nancy Remington, 753-2260. — submitted by NNCC

NNCC celebrates 25th anniversary this week

Old-fashioned pioneer spirit gave birth to Nevada's first community college 25 years ago in Elko. Today, while celebrating its silver anniversary, that same spirit has Northern Nevada Community College "going for the gold."

Paul Sawyer, now a member of the NNCC Foundation, was one of the enterprising Elkoans who helped bring the college into existence in 1967. He explained that the late Fred Harris planted the seed that started it all.

In 1963, Harris and Mark Chilton donated 100 acres north of town for a community college but there was no organized drive to get a school started. In the spring of 1967, Harris visited a friend, Bill Schroeder, who had helped form Treasure Valley Community College in Ontario, Ore. He brought Schroeder back to Elko and together they convinced a group of businessmen to visit the college firsthand. Their reaction?

"Well this is just exactly what Nevada needs, particularly the rural areas," Sawyer said.

They returned home and immediately began planning a community college to serve rural Nevadans. Sawyer headed the effort to raise about $40,000 to get the college started. Elko didn't have its booming gold mine industry at that time, but Sawyer said they were able to raise the money in one month with the slogan "Give a Day's Pay."

Besides Harris and Sawyer, other founders included Mike Marfisi, Bill Wunderlich, Bob Burns, Mark Chilton, Hugh Collett, Al Huber, Les Moren and Carl Shuck.

Although they had a friend in then-Gov. Paul Laxalt, Sawyer said the plan met immediate opposition from University Regents, the state Board of Education and politicians concerned about the fiscal impact of rural higher education.

Despite that opposition, the founders decided to open the college, then called Nevada Community College, as a demonstration project for the state.

"We wanted to sell the state officials on the idea and benefits of a community college," Sawyer explained. "We started offering courses on Sept. 25 at Elko High School, after regular school hours. We had about everybody in town going to school to show their support."

The college offered 31 different classes and 490 people were enrolled. But the college had only enough money to operate for one year. Local legislators Roy Young and Norm Glaser made a request for state support during a special session of the state legislature in 1968, but the request failed to produce any funding for the new college. The legislature did, however, change the name of the school to Elko Community College.

"Apparently, they figured it was going to go down the tube and they didn't want the name 'Nevada' involved in it. This was a little Elko project, so they thought 'let Elko take the fall.'"

And that is exactly what appeared to be happening as the college's funds dried up, Sawyer explained. Co-founder Mike Marfisi invited Elko's service clubs to a "state of the college" meeting to report that the college was folding. Then a miracle happened. Laxalt, a guest at the meeting, stood up to announce that Las Vegas billionaire Howard Hughes had donated $125,000 to keep the school going, plus another $125,000 to study the possibility of a statewide community college system.

State funding was provided beginning in 1969 when the university system took over control from local trustees. Classes were moved to the old grade school building at Eighth and Court Streets, now the site of an apartment complex. And another financial boost came with a $100,000 donation from the Fleischmann Foundation for construction of a library.

In May 1970, the first class of seven students graduated. That fall, the city council approved a land swap that created the current 45-acre campus on the site of the old golf course, which was moved to make way for Interstate 80. The college was given the land in exchange for the 100 acres that had been donated earlier by Harris and Chilton.

In 1971, the college began its first round of expansion by setting up classes in Ely and Winnemucca. Funding was approved for the college's first building, now called Lundberg Hall. That structure, along with McMullen Hall, was opened for classes in 1973. Dr. William Berg became the executive vice president in charge of the college, and later became its president.

The school received accreditation from the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges in 1974. The name was changed to Northern Nevada Community College in 1975 as other community colleges were being established.

As the college grew, so did the expertise of its faculty. In 1968, instructor Mark Ports published a book called Great Basin Nature. Carl Diekhans published Basic Problem Solving in Microsoft. Georgeanna Smith contributed to a nursing textbook entitled Geriatric Care Manual, and Charles Greenhaw published an article called "Desert of Riches."

Ron Remington became the new president of NNCC in 1989, replacing 17-year veteran Bill Berg. Also that year, the Foundation began a successful fund-raising drive headed by Jeanne Blach to build a college community center.

Mining education took another step forward in 1990 with development of the Mining Technical Training Program, which was recognized as a national model by the National Council of Instructional Administrators. Ties with the University of Nevada Reno were strengthened and NNCC began offering master's degrees in educational leadership and nursing.

Enrollment continued to soar in 1991 with a 23-percent increase in full-time students. A computerized telephone registration system allowed students to enroll for classes in the comfort of their home or office.

The college has come a long way in the past 25 years, but even greater progress is planned for the future.

This fall a new 22,500-square-foot Technical Arts Facility is scheduled to open. It contains a 150-seat lecture and video hall, new shop facilities for auto and diesel mechanics, a computer-assisted drafting classroom and rooms for other classes, including art. The old diesel shop is being converted into an area for mill mechanics and the old auto shop is being remodeled for welding classes.

Starting this year, high school students may enroll in a program in which they can earn up to four hours of early credit in diesel mechanics and mill mechanics, according to Stan Aiuzzi, dean of student services.

Under development is a computer system that will allow local students to go "on-line" with any library around the world. This same technology will allow the Elko campus to set up two-way video links with satellite schools such as Winnemucca and Ely.

Also planned is an auditorium and events center complex that will be used to bring special events to the college setting, according to Carl Diekhans, dean of college services. Design work is under way while the Foundation, again under the leadership of Jeanne Blach, continues to raise the rest of the $2 million needed.

Its theater could be used for events such as film festivals, guest lectures, music events, plays, and cowboy poetry. Space also will be

The 1992 Fall Dinner Dance, celebrating NNCC's 25th Anniversary, will be held on Saturday October 3rd, at the Elko Convention Center. The fundraising and social event, funds on-going scholarship programs and other student projects.

NNCC's past, present and future, will be featured with some of the Founding Fathers present to Reminisce Events 25 years ago. A book signed by each guest will be preserved in NNCC's time capsule, to be used again at the 50th anniversary; in keeping with the theme "Celebrating Silver- Going for the Gold". As part of the fundraising event, mining claims can be purchased at the dinner dance, for a variety of prizes.

Guests will be served a piece of the 25th anniversary cake, made by Pat Dumke.

No host cocktails will begin at 6:30 with Dinner seating at 7:30. Dinner music will be provided by Mike Polise. A few words will be said by Foundation Chairperson, Jeanne Blach and College President, Ron Remington.

Dancing to the Joe Muscalino Quartet, from Salt Lake City, will begin about 8:30.

Tickets can be purchased by calling the NNCC Foundation Office at 753-2237. The tickets are $35 per person and must be purchased in advance. Table reservations can be made for 8 to 10 guests. Get your tickets soon. Don't miss NNCC's 25th Anniversary Celebration.

Plans have been completed for the first annual Jazz Festival scheduled for June 13, 1993, from 3 to 7 on the Fred Harris Quad at Northern Nevada Community College.

Local jazz quartets under the direction of Michael Chodosh and George Rosenberg will perform jazz selections ranging from contemporary fusion style to the more traditional sounds.

Chodosh, a local musician and teacher, and Jerry D'Orazio of IGA Foods have organized the event which is being sponsored by the NNCC Foundation. Proceeds from the Festival will assist in the construction of the second phase of the College Community Center.

Chodosh, as producer, organized the bands and D'Orazio has been responsible for food concessions and setup.

Band members, in addition to Rosenberg and Chodosh, include Emile Matys and Jason Polise on saxophone, Don Tauffer and George Cothrun on drums, Mike Polise on piano, and Chuck Locuson, Jr., on trumpet. Rosenberg will play piano and Chodosh guitar.

Chodosh, who will be relocating to Las Vegas after the Festival, said he was especially interested in this project as a way to thank Elko.

NNCC's Father's Day vocal show on Sunday

Northern Nevada Community College plans to offer a musical performance called Father's Day Delights on Sunday. The show starts at 3 p.m. at Berg Hall, and admission is free.

The show is being staged by the NNCC Vocal Performance Workshop.

The first half of the performance will feature special selections from the opera "Carmen." Composed in 1875 by Georges Bizet, "Carmen" is one of the most frequently performed operas in the world.

The story of love, jealousy, and death has been rewritten into a family show by the NNCC cast. The music order has been changed and the namesake's demise has been omitted.

The second part of Sunday's performance will feature individual songs including music from "Beauty and the Beast," "Sad Lisa" by Cat Stevens and "Both Sides Now" by Joni Mitchell. Other songs are "Allegheny Moon," "Granada," "Catch a Falling Star," "It's Impossible," "Tomorrow" and "Young at Heart."

The NNCC Vocal Performance Workshop was started by four students who began their solo experiences at NNCC with a class in vocal instruction. They were all encouraged and challenged to expand their abilities by using classical vocal music and artistic interpretation with staging.

NNCC honors HARRISES, Chiltons at graduation

During its 25th annual commencement exercises this month, Northern Nevada Community College bestowed honorary degrees on its founding father, the late Fred Harris; his wife, Helen; and Mark and Kathy Chilton.

Before Ron Remington presented degrees to the 108 graduates, he talked about the founding of NNCC — Nevada's first community college. He said Harris "realized almost as soon as he came to the county in 1841

Bill Schroeder in Ontario, Ore., Fred saw that town's community college. He immediately arranged a trip for six of his Elko friends to Ontario to see the campus and visit with the college's president, Mrs. Harris later explained.

In 1862, the HARRISES and Chiltons together donated a 100-acre parcel of land on which to build a college. That land was traded for the property where the college is now situated — on the former Elko Municipi-at Utah State University in Logan. In 1939, he took a job in Reno on the range survey team that developed the AUM (animal unit months) system of measuring forage consumption by livestock in the state's first range survey. He moved to Elko and took a job as manager of the 71 Ranch at Deeth and later opened a real estate business.

Chilton was a member of the original NNCC Advisory Board and is now an active member of the NNCC side for public inspection at the offices of the Commission, 727 Farview Drive, Carson City, Nevada 89710 and the Dawson Building 4045 South Spencer Street, Suite A-44, Las Vegas, Nevada 89158.

Shame on Elko for poor treatment of grads

To the Editor:

We are 1993 graduates from NNCC Winnemucca branch. On May 17, we traveled to Elko to attend the graduation ceremony at the convention center. We were told that the Winnemucca students would be seated together and recognized as a group. We were not recognized and we were totally disgusted with the conduct of the ceremony. The Winnemucca branch was not recognized even though we had a graduation class of 21.

As we sat through the ceremony we listened to the president congratulate the students and applaud the Elko faculty. No mention of the Winnemucca faculty was ever made. In fact the Winnemucca faculty was not invited to the ceremony. The only faculty from Winnemucca who was invited to attend was Barbara Tenney, and this only because she is the Winnemucca director. However, even she was treated with uncalled-for disrespect. Instead of being recognized and being seated on the stage with the other deans and branch directors, she was seated in back of the graduating class with some of the Elko faculty.

Although part of the graduating class, we felt like the illegitimate children. There was never any recognition for the hard work and dedication that is put into the community college here in Winnemucca. None of the students from Winnemucca were recognized as coming from here. If we had known that Elko wanted to take the credit for us graduation, we would have refused to go to that ceremony. We felt rejected and we found out exactly how the Elko college felt about our faculty here. If truth be told, we have a better faculty with far more dedicated teachers, who care about their students and put far more effort into their teaching. We are not putting down the Elko teaching faculty; however, these people teach in a college environment from 9 - 5. The faculty in Winnemucca hold down jobs during the day and at night teach three-hour classes. They cannot just be doing it for the money. The love of teaching and caring for the students is what keeps these people teaching.

We feel that for their efforts and dedication they should be recognized. If we had had our way, we would have held our own ceremony here, surrounded by the faculty of the Winnemucca branch and run by the lady who held our hands and helped us wind our way towards graduation, Barbara Tenney.

Shame on you, Elko NNCC, for the unprofessional and rude attitude with which you treated us. It is our money that helps support you and it's our efforts which give you a good name. Bravo to Winnemucca NNCC for the late nights spent teaching classes to people who have to attend at night. Bravo for the caring, personal approach that every student receives. Bravo for the extra time spent in helping us to learn and the open doors and telephone lines for all of the faculty, for whenever a student has a problem. Bravo for the efforts that the faculty is putting forth to build another building, without the help of Elko NNCC.

108 graduate from NNCC

NNCC graduated 108 students during commencement exercises Monday. Dr. Robert Maxson, President of the University of Nevada Las Vegas presented the commencement address.

Known as a dynamic, inspirational, and sometimes controversial leader in the University and Community College System of Nevada, Dr. Maxson presented, "Becoming Your True Self."

Along with the featured speaker, 1993 graduates heard an inspirational message from NNCC's Louie Horton and music by the Elko High School Chorallers and the Elko High School Band.

Honorary degrees were presented to Mark and Kathy Chilton, Fred Harris (deceased Founding Father of NNCC), and Helen Harris. According to Lynn Mahlberg, Director of Admissions and Records, "We are very proud of our 108 graduates." This year's graduating class is the largest in NNCC history and includes twenty-one students from the education center in Winnemucca.
