THE COLLEGE WELCOME

NNCC is Nevada's first community college. Since its beginning, fifteen years ago, the college has established a tradition of identifying special needs and making every effort to serve those needs. NNCC was the first college in the state to start a special learning center for adults. It established the first systematic program of liberal arts and sciences education in rural Nevada. The college has the distinction of starting the only certificated Diesel technology program in the state. The college's nursing programs have been acclaimed for excellence, the farm and ranch curriculum has become a model for others, and the computing center's personnel and state-of-the-art equipment make it second to none among colleges of NNCC's size.

NNCC has distinguished itself in many ways in its short history, and a significant number of its graduates now contribute immeasurably to society as educators, scientists, lawyers, and as skilled technicians. You may be proud to be associated with NNCC.

NNCC registration starts next Wednesday

Registration begins next Wednesday, Aug. 26, for the fall semester at Northern Nevada Community College, according to Dean of Instruction Charles Greenhaw.

Students may register Wednesday, Aug. 26, from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. and registration will continue Aug. 27-28 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

There have been several recent improvements to the NNCC campus, he added.

Greenhaw said the vocational building at the college is being partially remodeled by Chisholm Construction to improve soundproofing.

Lights are being rewired by workers from Northern Electric, Inc. so plexiglass panels may be installed above the room dividers.

Wall carpeting will be installed in the rooms containing business machines to help cut down the noise, according to Donald Chisholm of Chisholm Construction.

Overhead color banners will hang from the beams, also as an aid in soundproofing the building.

Greenhaw reports a new diesel shop is being built by Jim Wright Construction east of the vocational building. The shop is expected to be ready for fall classes, which include basic diesel engines, diesel electricity, heavy equipment power transmission and heavy duty chassis units taught by instructor Bill (Doc) Howard.

Registration Wednesday at NNCC

Registration for the fall semester at Northern Nevada Community College will begin Wednesday, reminds Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction.

Students may register between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m. Wednesday, and from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Thursday and Friday.

Information pamphlets may be picked up at the student services office, and registration will take place in the college library, according to Greenhaw.

Classes will begin at NNCC the week of Aug. 31.

Fees for fall classes are generally $16 per credit hour.

Students who have not previously enrolled at NNCC must pay a $5 application fee, he added.

The college bookstore is now open, and students are required to pay for textbooks at the time of purchase, he concluded.

NNCC registers 400 students on first day

Registration for the fall semester was off to a fast opening-day start at Northern Nevada Community College, according to Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction, who reported 400 students signed up at the college yesterday.

Greenhaw said that figure compares with only 327 processed on the first day of registration for fall semester one year ago; and 401 enrolled on the first day of registration for the past spring semester. He pointed out spring semester typically has boasted a larger enrollment than the fall session at the Elko college.

He reported the improved registration at NNCC included a "surge" of recent high school graduates, most of whom yesterday enrolled in university transfer courses. He said popular classes included business, computers and mathematics, and he noted there was a strong percentage of full-time students among those who registered on opening day.

Regular registration will continue at the Elko college for the rest of this week, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and late registration is scheduled next week during the same hours.

Yesterday's registrants came from Elko, Wells, Ely, Battle Mountain, Beowawe, Eureka and Douglas County, Greenhaw reported. He noted there also were several high school seniors who signed up for freshman-level college classes, to be taken as part of their curriculum while attending Elko High School.

He pointed out a few openings remain in a special diesel mechanic course being offered at the college.

Greenhaw said housing for the increased number of students at the college remains a problem, and he asked that any local residents who have available rental units — especially accommodations which could be shared by two or more students — contact the college office.

The opening day registration of 400 students at Elko compares with a total full-time-equivalent enrollment one year ago of 411 in the five counties served by the college, Greenhaw said. In all, he explained, 1,398 individuals participated in the various classes and courses offered by the college in those five counties during the fall semester of 1980. The full-time-equivalent figure is based on a "full-time" class load of 15 credit hours (and is calculated, for example, on the basis that five students enrolled for only a three-credit course would equal one full-time equivalent).

Community College registration Sept. 3

Ely Times
Aug 28, 81

Twenty-three courses for college credit will be offered by the Ely Center of the Northern Nevada Community College during the fall semester.

Final registration for fall will be held in the Conference Room of the White Pine County Library on Thursday, Sept. 3 from 2 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Representatives from the college will be on hand to counsel students on curriculum, major fields of study, benefits and grants available. Class work will begin Sept. 8.

Following is a brief description of several of the courses to be offered:

INTRODUCTION TO DATA PROCESSING will present information concerning the functions and equipment of automated data processing systems. Students will learn computer programming skills and write programs using the BASIC language.

Introduction to Data Processing will be taught by JoAnn Hansen who arrived in Ely in April of this year. She received a B.S. Degree in computer science from the University of Oregon in 1980 and has worked as a computer consultant for a small mining company in Helena, Montana.

INTRODUCTION TO PHILOSOPHY will address how one regards his or her own being, thinking and reality, itself. An Introduction to Philosophy will examine these and similar questions through the eyes of philosophers like Plato, Aristotle, as well as modern thinkers.

Some topics covered will be: the philosophy of history; reality, existence and consciousness; philosophy and religion; Logic; and political philosophy. Students will be encouraged to introduce others.

INTRODUCTION TO LOGIC will introduce students to what constitutes clear thinking in argumentation and will meet questions involving "reasonableness," "validity," and "truth." Some topics covered will be: syllogistic logic, elementary quantification theory, comparative logic systems, and dialectical logic.

The Philosophy and Logic courses will be instructed by Jeremy Horne.

MARRIAGE AND THE FAMILY will consist of the study and discussion of courting, mate selection, marital adjustment and interpersonal relationships within the family.

Instructing Marriage and the Family will be George W. Doherty who arrived in Ely in June, 1980, and is currently employed as a psychologist for the Community Counseling Center.

PRE-SCHOOL CURRICULUM DEVELOPMENT is a course designed to prepare the student to plan and arrange an effective and efficient learning environment. Special emphasis will be given in the area of children's literature and art.

This course will be instructed by Pat Bourn who has her B.S. in Education from Indiana University and her M.S. in Education Supervision from LaMar University.

Thursday is registration for NNCC

Final registration for 23 college courses sponsored by the Northern Nevada Community College will take place in the White Pine County Library on Thursday from 2:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

Representatives from the Elko-based community college will be at the library to assist students in planning course programs and college careers.

Among some of the classes offered will be data processing, philosophy, Spanish, marriage and the family, art, and logic. All classes will be held in Ely.

Persons 62 or older may register either for credit or as auditors in any course without charge except in community service courses. For community service courses one-half the registration fee will be required. Financial assistance information will be available at registration. College coordinators are reminding veterans to take advantage of their college financial aid benefits.

NNCC is a part of the Nevada university system and sponsors classes in most northeastern Nevada towns. Part-time off-campus coordinators help in scheduling classes in Ely, Winnemucca, Battle Mountain, Owyhee, Eureka, McDermitt, and Wells.

Most credits earned in class are transferable to other colleges and universities since the courses satisfy the lower division requirements of many majors.

More information may be obtained from Sharon Fraser at 289-3589.

NNCC Hopes for Great Mid-Year Registration

Hoping the number "13" will be lucky, Northern Nevada Community College will start registration for spring semester classes on Thursday, Jan. 13 — and registration will last for 13 hours that day.

Registration will be held from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday and from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday, according to college president Dr. Bill Berg.

Dean of Instruction Charles Greenhaw noted there are 225 classes being offered in the fall semester, and they cover the spectrum of academic and community service interests.

Several new classes are being offered this semester at Northern Nevada Community College.

Tryouts for the NNCC Little Theatre Co. production of "Incident at Gravelly Ford" will be held at 5 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 19 and 20.

Director Vicki Rossolo said the play, an episode of the Reed-Donner emigrant party in Northeastern Nevada, will be held in April.

Another new offering is Journalism 101, an introduction of journalism, taught by former Elko Daily Free Press city editor Dick Snyder. The survey class offers an introduction to news writing and radio and TV journalism.

Greenhaw noted it may be used to satisfy part of the requirement for English and communications in the one-year certificate programs and the two-year associate in applied science degree.

NNCC is fully accredited, which means students planning to transfer to four-year colleges and universities may satisfy their lower-division requirements at the Elko college, said Greenhaw.

In addition to the traditional day and evening classes, NNCC is also offering "Twilight College" from 5:30 to 6:45 p.m., and "Weekend College" with classes from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturdays.

"We've tried to plan classes which will attract as many students as possible, and tried to make those classes as convenient as possible," said Greenhaw.

Financial aid counselors will be available during the registration process, he added.

There is a charge of $17 per credit hour and a $5 fee for new students. Some classes have lab fees in addition. Students over the age of 62 are not charged tuition except for community service classes.

The registration process starts at the student services office in Lundberg Hall. Students then proceed to the student lounge and the library located in McMullen Hall.

Tickets will be available in the library for the March 11 performance of "As You Like It" by the National Shakespeare Co. The performance is sponsored by NNCC and will be held at the Elko Civic Auditorium.

Greenhaw said the National Shakespeare Co. is the oldest and most popular professional touring company.

Spring semester classes start during the week of Jan. 17.

NNCC registration held tonight through Friday

Elko Free Press 1/13/83

Registration for spring semester classes at Northern Nevada Community College started this morning and continues through 9 tonight.

Registration will also be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. tomorrow and Friday. Classes start the week of Jan. 18.

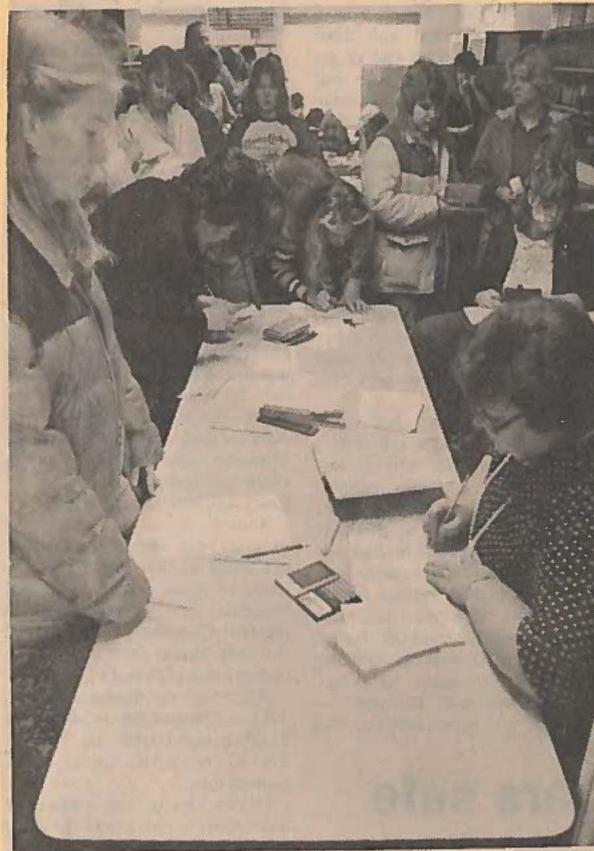

NNCC Dean of Instruction Charles Greenhaw said there is a wide variety of classes offered this year: everything from "Handwriting Analysis" to "Elements of Calculus."

One of the new courses offered this spring is entitled "Twentieth Century American West" — a course that will trace the historical background of western American attitudes. Greenhaw said the class would especially be beneficial to federal workers stationed here.

The physical fitness-recreation department is offering downhill and cross-country skiing courses this semester which include weekend tours to nearby ski resorts.

A winter survival class is also being offered in which students will actually build a snow shelter and spend a cold-free night in it, according to the NNCC program.

FULL HOUSE — The Winnemucca College Center was jammed Wednesday afternoon as area residents lined up to register for Northern Nevada Community College's spring term. Over 140 people registered for classes Wednesday, the college office reported. Registration continues through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., in the center at 395 West Minon Street. (staff photo by Rex Bovee)

Spring semester registration began yesterday in the library at Northern Nevada Community College. Students examined class schedules and met with instructors and counselors before registering and paying for classes.

Registration at NNCC continues in library

Northern Nevada Community College registration continues today and tomorrow from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the college library, according to dean of student services Bill Davies.

He added registration will be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. all next week in the college's student services office, and that registration will also be conducted from 6 to 9 p.m. next Wednesday.

Registration is running a little ahead of last year, Davies said.

A total of 425 students signed up for classes yesterday, compared to 347 on the first day last year.

Those figures, he noted, were only the number of people who actually registered on the first day and do not represent full-time equivalent students, the basis used for state aid.

Full-time equivalent students are determined by dividing the total number of units taken by 15, the average full-time class load.

"Four or five" classes were filled yesterday, but most still have space available, he added.

Dedication on Sunday; registration next week

Dedication ceremonies to name two of Northern Nevada Community College's buildings will be at 1 p.m. Sunday and the public is invited.

Two Elko businessmen, both of whom were among the founders of the college, will be honored when the buildings are dedicated in their memory: Melvin Lundberg Hall and Hugh McMullen Hall.

Speakers and guests will include NNCC President William J. Berg, regent chairman Robert Cashell of Reno, Elko regent Dorothy Gallagher, Gov. Robert List's wife Kathy, college advisory chairman Carl Shuck and University of Nevada

Chancellor Robert Bersi.

A reception will follow the dedication ceremony.

Registration for spring semester classes at the college continues next week, reminds college dean of students services Bill Davies.

He said preliminary indications are that more people are registering than did last year, but added exact figures are not yet available.

This week's registration effort ends at 5 p.m. today.

Registration will be held next week in the student services office, he added.

NNCC registration set Tuesday

Final registration for the spring semester of local classes taught through the Northern Nevada Community College is scheduled for Tuesday from 2:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the White Pine County Library.

Representatives from NNCC will be present to counsel students on curriculum, benefits and grants available. Actual course work is set to begin the week of Jan. 24.

A minimum enrollment of 10 students is required to offer a course in a classroom setting. The following courses still have openings:

AG 101: An introductory course which will cover plant biology, the principles of plant production, soils' physical and chemical properties, the soil classification system, soil fertility, the hydrologic cycle, ground water, irrigation practices, water quality and other related topics.

GEO 101: A general geology course which will consider rock and mineral identification and classification, geologic processes, petroleum geology, geothermal energy exploration and analysis techniques as well as the geology of ore deposits of several metals including gold, silver, barite, beryllium, manganese, platinum, mercury, tungsten and others.

The instructor for the geology course is John Breitrack, a local geologist who majored in soil science and geology at the University of Nevada-Reno. Breitrack has eight years of professional experience including three years as a soil scientist with the Soil Conservation Service and the Bureau of Land Management, and three years as a reclamation engineer with uranium companies in New Mexico and Wyoming. He is currently exploring and evaluating mineral properties in Nevada and western Utah.

HT 107B: This is an introductory course on the principles of land surveying. Emphasis is placed on basic skills and knowledge necessary for beginning employment in a survey office or on a survey crew. Additionally, lectures will cover many different topics necessary for a good understanding of land surveying such as the legal aspects, history, mapping and calculations there in. The instructor will be Ken Haskew of Haskew Engineering, Inc.

DFT 102B: An introduction to the fundamentals of drafting. Emphasis will be placed on the proper techniques and use of equipment. Work will be done in the areas of lettering and current modes of drafting. Media used will be pencil and ink on vellum and mylar. The instructor will be Joyce Haskew of Haskew Engineering, Inc.

Registration For Local NNCC Classes Is Open

Extended registration for several college courses offered by the Northern Nevada Community College has been extended.

Among the classes still open for registration are beginning and intermediate oil painting (7-10 p.m. Wednesdays), prospecting, fly tying, and several business courses.

Gary Mieyr, the business teacher for Wells High School, will offer several one credit classes in calculators, a three-hour typing class, and an independent accounting class. Mieyr said the accounting class will be geared to the student's needs, either in beginning or advanced accounting.

Registration for these classes will be held at Wells High School next Tuesday from 7-9 p.m. in room nine.

For more information on the business offerings, students may contact Mieyr or Steve Ranson, the acting NNCC coordinator, at 752-3477.

ART 101: A basic course designed to offer a disciplined foundation in drawing concepts based on visual observation. The teacher will be Kay Wall, art instructor at White Pine High School.

TI 103C: This course is designed for the woman who knows little about her automobile. The topics to be covered will include making minor repairs, preventative maintenance, maintenance schedules, lubrication, tire care and other basic information. Also, consumer awareness in purchasing parts and soliciting service for an automobile will be stressed. Instructing the course will be Gunnard Topholm, auto mechanic and instructor at the local high school.

ENV 105B: This course is designed to provide information on methods to cut building heating and cooling costs. Consumer awareness in selecting energy-saving measures will be emphasized. Solar technology will also be explained and application examples given. A tour of a local home converted to solar space heating for less than $1,000 will be included in the course. The instructor will be Carolene Lowman of Lowman and Sun.

TOLE PAINTING: Tole is a method of painting using a step-by-step process learning simple strokes and how to blend and shade. Anything can be painted on—wood, tin, pottery, glass, etc., and everyone can do it. Sherry Fillman will be the instructor.

There are additional courses being offered with openings still available. Those courses include: Office Administration, Office Accounting, Calligraphy, Cake Decorating and Middle Eastern Dancing.

NNCC registration hits all-time high

Registration at the Elko campus of Northern Nevada Community College has reached an all-time high, according to college president Dr. Bill Berg.

He said registration last week and on Monday totaled 775 students, or a full-time equivalent of 237.94.

That compares with 681 registered in the fall of this year (and an FTE of 199.67) and 739 registered last spring (and an FTE of 220.67).

FTE is determined by dividing the total number of units taken by 15, the average class load. It is used to determine the amount of state aid.

The figures do not include registration for any of the outlying communities.

He explained enrollment has always been higher in the spring semester for each of the eight years he has been president.

He speculated fall enrollment is usually lower because the weather is nicer than "and people are thinking of other activities than attending school."

Spring semester enrollment, he added, is usually in the middle of a winter storm.

He added that some students who leave town for another school in the fall end up enrolling at the community college in the second semester.

He said he anticipates more students enrolling next year after completion of on-campus housing for students.

"When we go to the outlying areas, it will really help us to be able to say that housing is available. I think we'd get a lot of students who go elsewhere because of housing."

He added that late enrollment is continuing through this week in the student services office at the college.

Registration continues at NNCC

Northern Nevada Community College enrolled a record number of students last week for the fall semester, according to Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction.

A total of 676 full and part-time students signed up for classes during the three-day registration period. Last year, 647 students enrolled during the same three-day period.

Greenhaw reminded that students may still enroll for classes during late registration to be held throughout this week from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A special evening registration period will be held Wednesday night from 6 to 9 p.m. for those who cannot register during daytime hours, he noted.

Several interesting classes still have openings available, and Greenhaw urged potential students to register before Friday's deadline.

During fall registration held last week, 676 students signed up for classes at Northern Nevada Community College. Students may still register throughout this week for a variety of classes.

Forensic Workshop At NNCC This Thursday

Elko Independent

A forensic science seminar will be put on at the Community College, on Thursday, May 27th.

The seminar is being coordinated by Bill Webb the Elko County Deputy Coroner, and will include guest speakers Vernon McCarty, Washoe County Coroner; Enrico Tognieri, the Supervising Criminologist at the Washoe County Sheriff's Department; and Dr.

John Bradley, a clinical psychologist at the Nevada State Rural Health Clinic.

Topics covered in the all-day workshop will include suicide investigation, psychological crisis management, gunshot wounds, and rape and trace evidence gathering.

An introduction will be given by Dr. George Manilla, forensic pathology specialist at the Elko Clinic.

The Elko Clinic will also furnish complimentary coffee and donuts.

The workshop will begin at 8:30 a.m. in rooms 6 and 7 of the Lundberg Building, and will end about 5 p.m.

Enrollment at college hits record

Spring semester enrollment at Northern Nevada Community College has reached an all-time high, according to Dean Charles Greenhaw.

The count from the Elko campus and all off-campus centers stood at 2,001 students at the end of spring enrollment, and Greenhaw noted about half the enrollment is at the Elko campus.

The count includes students enrolled in academic, vocational, and community service classes. It does not include adult education students in basic skills or English as a second language.

Greenhaw provided these other statistics:

★ Average age of NNCC students is 31½.

★ Women comprise 55 percent of the student body.

★ Classes showing the biggest increase in size were computer science and business classes.

NNCC dog obedience course

Northern Nevada Community College will offer a basic dog obedience class this summer.

The class will be taught by Pat Warren, who has taught obedience courses in Elko and Reno.

Owners will learn to teach their dogs to heel, sit, stay, lay down and come. The dogs will also be taught to be quiet and under control around groups of people and strange dogs.

The course will be held on Wednesday evenings at 7 in the NNCC parking lot from June 9 through July 7. Cost of the class will be $10 and a choke chain collar and six foot leather leash are required.

NNCC fall alternate class registration Oct. 7 and 8

Registration will be held Thursday and Friday for Northern Nevada Community College's fall alternate semester, according to Dr. Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction.

Specialty classes lasting only one session or for a limited time are being offered on a variety of subjects.

Those registering should report to the Student Services office in Lundberg Hall. Registration will last from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Thursday, and from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday.

A complete listing of fall alternate classes appears on page 3 of today's Elko Daily Free Press. Greenhaw provided information on some of the special course offerings:

● China Painting — Phyllis Hammer-Huber, a 1964 graduate of Elko High School, will instruct students in making an assortment of porcelain art items.

Ms. Hammer-Huber has studied with porcelain artists in the United States and South America. She said students in her class will create one glazed porcelain plate decorated with flowers, along with several small Christmas gift items.

The evening class begins Tuesday, Oct. 12, and concludes Dec. 6. A follow-up class will be offered in the Spring semester to deal with the brushstrokes necessary to learn the finer points of the art, she said.

A fee of $34 will be required to register for the class.

● Christmas ornaments — Instructor Bill Chreste will guide students in making Christmas ornaments with antique and reproduced cards, gold foil, and jewels.

Examples of the multi-layered tree ornaments are on display in the NNCC library.

The class will be held from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. on Dec. 7, at a cost of $6.

● Rancher's Guide to Herd Health — Veterinarian Boyd Spratling of Starr Valley will instruct a five-week class geared for local ranchers to provide an update on common causes and remedies for diseases in beef production.

The class begins Tuesday, Oct. 12, at 7 p.m. and concludes on Nov. 9. Registration fee is $17.

For more information on this class, contact Louis Horton at NNCC by calling 738-8493.

● Making a Christmas Tree from Jewelry — Laura Groff will demonstrate using broken and discarded jewelry to make a decorative Christmas tree. Materials needed and methods of construction will be covered in the class, which will be held Oct. 20 at 7 p.m. at a cost of $3.

More information may be obtained by calling Sarah Campsey at NNCC.

Community college increases offerings

The new location for the Northern Nevada Community College has many new materials and classes available and is open for self-paced instruction during the day and evenings.

The larger building at 355 W. Minor St., above the Railroad Subdivision, has enabled the college to expand its program to meet the needs of many more students.

There are now three video machines for self-paced work classes in Biology, English, Math, and others.

Two new computers are in frequent use for a Computer Programming class, and there are several new Business programs.

Three new study viewing stations help the student with business classes.

The community college is open from the hours of 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and 4 to 7 p.m., Mondays to Thursdays, and Fridays from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Instructors are available to help students with their self-study classes.

Many students are also taking advantage of the GED, Adult High School Completion classes also offered at the college.

People interested in teaching for the community college who have training or proficiency in a subject area should contact the center for more information.

The spring class schedule will be out in a few weeks and students are urged to plan now.

Registration for the next semester classes will begin soon after the first of the year.

NNCC plans GED aid

Northern Nevada Community College will assist five to seven rural communities in northern Nevada in setting up and staffing mini-learning centers where adults can study basic skills with the ultimate goal of completing the GED test, according to a college news release.

The GED is recognized nationwide as proof of high school equivalency.

The experimental outreach basic skills project will be funded by a $20,000 grant from the Nevada Department of Education.

The project will be coordinated by Cyd Holthoff and staffed by volunteer tutors from each community with aid from NNCC's Adult Basic Education Department.

NNCC will provide the tutors with highly structured training, basic skills materials and a telephone hotline so students can receive immediate assistance with questions and problems.

Information about the program is available from NNCC in Elko.

Community college lists its offerings

Schedules for the Northern Nevada Community College are available now at the college.

Registration for classes begins Jan. 13 with classes beginning Jan. 18.

Jim Hadwick, financial director will be available at the Winnemucca Center Sat., Jan. 16 from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. for counseling.

Registration fees are $16 per credit and an extra $5 fee for new students.

Senior citizens are charged no fees except community service classes where they are charged half-price.

New classes include beginning calligraphy, photo color printing and music appreciation, home economics and child development, clothing construction, vitamins and you, and child abuse and neglect.

Most of the business classes offered in the fall semester are being repeated along with the office administration and math topics.

In the math-science department, animal biology, wilderness survival, physical geology and geography were offered along with an introduction to solar tech.

Dancerize was offered again along with body contouring and conditioning, conditioning-karate and cross country skiing.

Community service courses added this semester were dancing for exercise, slimastics, ballroom dancing and quilting with the repeater, decorative acrylic tole painting.

NNCC's Fall Alternate Semester

The following course descriptions will assist interested community members in selecting classes from the wide variety of subjects offered during Fall Alternate Semester.

EDUC 206B - Tutoring Process - 1 credit — Carol Fox, certified tutor trainer for the National Affiliation for Literacy Advance, will conduct this 15-hour program designed to teach participants how to teach students to read and write and, when students are foreigners, to speak English. The program is based on the highly developed techniques of the famed Laubach Literacy Volunteers, and participants will learn to use Laubach teaching aids. The class is aimed primarily at adult education personnel, but the Laubach techniques are readily adaptable for parents and teachers. Scheduled for Oct. 22, 23 and 24 at the NNCC Adult Center.

HUM 231B - Archaeology of Ancient Egypt And the Holy Land - 2 credits — This course will present some of the most important and exciting excavations which have added to our knowledge of ancient Egypt and its civilization, plus the people and religious development of Palestine. Instructor Shelley Hanna, traveled widely in the Near East and participated in several excavations in the region. The course will feature special slide presentations and recordings made by the instructor in this fascinating and often troubled area of the world.

SP 140C - 3-in-1 Investment Forum - $10 Fee — Edgar Phillips, MD, president of the American Numismatic Association will begin this three-part forum on Oct. 8 with a presentation on rare U.S. coins as investments. Antiques analyst Almon Copley will conduct the Oct. 15 session, and focus on things to look for and beware of in collecting antiques. Copley will emphasize antique furniture, china, lead soldiers, and art deco (1918-40). The series will conclude Oct. 22 when gemologist Bill Beem will help you become aware of both genuine and substitute diamonds and colorstones on the market. He will discuss values of genuine stones and analyze what to look for in mountings. Enrollment is open for the series on Oct. 8 only.

DP 141B - RPG Programming - 3 credits — RPG (Report Program Generator) programming is a high level business language designed primarily for ease of preparing printed reports. Recent enhancements have made RPG II especially useful in maintenance of files, also in updating and processing files. Students should have working knowledge of a language such as BASIC, FORTRAN, or COBOL. Meets Thursdays for lecture with computer time to be arranged.

Diesel Technology — Because the completion of the new diesel facility was delayed this week, NNCC will postpone registration for the program during the Alternate Semester. You still have time to complete this two-semester certified program that can lead to a satisfying career. If you have questions about this program, call Stan Alazzi, 738-6493.

ENV 109B - Winter Survival - 2 credits — Park Ranger Mark Kimbrough from the Wildhorse State Recreation Area will conduct this five-part series on surviving outdoors in the winter. Topics will include clothing and equipment for winter environment, prevention of hypothermia and frostbite, avalanche precautions and rescue, firecraft and shelters. Students will be required to build a snow

PED 169 - Fundamentals of Meditation - 2 credits — Veteran instructor of meditation Harley Confer will help individuals explore systems of meditation through direct experience so that an individual may select a form of meditation that will produce a sense of well being. Techniques to be examined include the Relaxation Response, Transcendental Meditation, Self-Hypnosis, Creative Visualization, and various forms of Yoga. Class begins Oct. 14 and meets in the Fairgrounds exhibit hall.

Airbrush and One-Stroke Ceramics - $28 each class — Several special seminars in airbrush and one-stroke ceramics techniques will be given by LaVerne Russell, visiting artist from Ledger, Mont. Mrs. Russell has 27 years' ceramic teaching experience and is certified as a judge and teacher by the National Ceramic Association. She is listed in Ceramic Scope as a traveling teacher specializing in airbrush techniques.

In each of the one-stroke seminars and the airbrush seminar the students will complete six pieces of greenware to be furnished by the students. These pieces may be pre-poured greenware or original clay pieces. A list of supplies need is at Student Services at NNCC.

The 9 a.m.-4 p.m. workshops in one-stroke techniques will be Oct. 15-16 or Oct. 17-18. The airbrush seminar will be held Oct. 20 from 1-4 p.m., 7-10 p.m., and Oct. 21 from 9:4 p.m. A free airbrush demonstration will be held Oct. 19 from 7-10 p.m.

Holiday Candy, Christmas Ornaments and Tole Painting — Several community education classes are being offered with the holiday season in mind. On Nov. 3, 10, and 17 Joyce Moyneaux will be offering a course in candy making. This nine-hour class will cover caramels, fondant, dipped chocolates, peanut brittle and other holiday sweets.

On Dec. 1 students in Christmas Ornament classes will make their own antique ornaments under the supervision of Bill Chreste. Supplies for this class are furnished. In the advanced Christmas Ornaments class, Mr. Chreste will assist students in developing their own creations for the Christmas season.

Beginning on Oct. 13, Margo Oberhansli will be instructing a two credit class in Tole Painting. The emphasis of this class will be folk motifs painted primarily on wood.

Music for Autumn Afternoons — In the remaining two programs of the fall series, Jim Shaw has arranged for the Schubert Chamber Ensemble to perform Saturday, Oct. 24, 3 p.m. and an Elko group, Musica Antiqua, to play Sunday, Nov. 29, 3 p.m. The latter features Renaissance and Baroque chamber and dance music, the former group, based in Carson City, performs selections from Schubert. The NNCC Library is the site.

"A Cowhand's Song: Crisis on the Range" — Scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 4, 7:30 p.m. in the NNCC library, this 30-minute film is a documentary of the family ranch. The film was shot at Cedarville, CA, and in Northwestern Nevada over a two-year period. A panel, composed of local historians, cattlemen, and government officials will discuss issues raised in the film. Funded by the California Humanities Committee, the Nevada Humanities Committee, "Cattle Kate Productions," the filmmakers, also received financial backing from the Nevada Cattlemen's Association. Free.

COMMUNIQUE FOR COORDINATORS

VOL. 1

The Student Services staff in Elko is looking forward to working together with you to improve our services to you and your students in the off-campus centers. This is the first of new schedule of semester letters, the purpose of which is to be in closer communication with you on a regular basis. We will be writing about what is of current concern to us. We hope that, in return, you will write or call us (738-8493) with any concerns, suggestions, or questions you have.

IMPORTANT MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS

Auditing a Class

Students must indicate during the first week if they desire to audit the class that they have registered for. When students audit, they are not obligated to take tests or prepare assignments. But they should participate in class activities. Students also don't get a reduced fee as an auditor. If they decide to change from audit status to credit status, they must complete an add-drop form before the end of the registration period. They do the same when they switch from credit to audit.

Challenging a Class

Credit may be obtained by examination given by college instructors. A fee of $10.00 per course is charged. Students wishing to challenge must have the approval of the instructor offering the course and must register for challenge examination during the regular semester registration.

Financial Aid and Veteran's

Questions concerning financial aid and Veteran's should be directed to Jim Hadwick, Director of Financial Aids, 738-8493 (ext. 200).

Class Rosters Spring Semester

Class rosters for off-campus centers should be arriving soon. Please have instructors check these rosters for accuracy; are the students registered in the correct class, audits, credit status, and are the students properly registered. Coordinators should also check class rosters to insure that the name of the instructor conducting the class is accurate.

Input/Suggestions

Please notify us if you have any items you would like to add to this newsletter in the future.

Northern Nevada Community College sent "the largest group ever" to a leadership workshop and conference sponsored by the Nevada near Wadsworth, Nev.

"It was a really exciting workshop and we all learned a lot," said Pam Bottari, the student body president of NNCC.

For the first time, NNCC now has two students elected as officers of NSACC.

Ken Wiley has been ele as president, and Steve Skrabo will serve as secretary to the statewide organization. Steve Miller, also a student at NNCC, will act as an alternate representative.

Sarah Campsey, head of the Art Department at NNCC, who accompanied the students to the leadership conference and addressed the organization on creative problem solving, has been selected as one of this year's State Faculty Advisors. There are only two State Advisors chosen by the organization each year.

Members of the student body officers and others who attended the leadership workshop emphasized that the skills they acquired would be put to use at NNCC in developing leadership in student activities throughout the year.

Elko Independent Wed Jan 5, 1983. NNCC Forecasts Bumper Student Body

Northern Nevada Community College began the 1983 new year with a bumper enrollment for Spring Semester.

Preliminary figures released by Dr. Charles Greenhaw, dean of the faculty at NNCC, show that 735 people enrolled in regular classes for the Spring Semester, and 83 more were enrolled in Community Service classes.

"These figures are only on the Elko campus, and do not include Winnemucca, Battle Mountain, Ely, Wells, or Wendover," Dr. Greenhaw said.

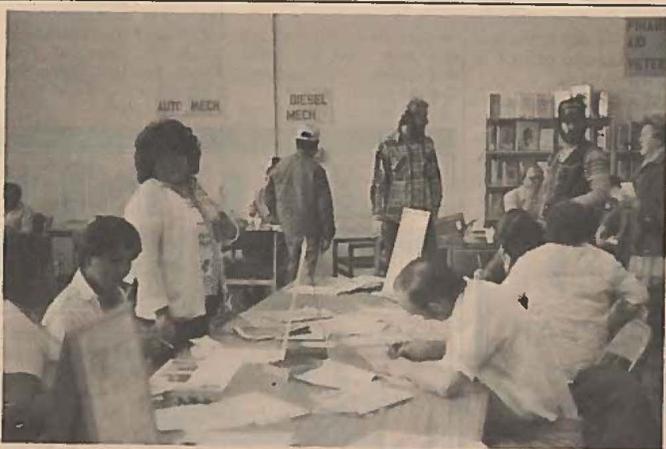

On the Elko campus, a total of 4058 credit hours were signed up for, with at least 150 more credit hours coming in from other NNCC locations.

Popular subjects this semester appear to topics that have "a practical application," according to Greenhaw, such as financial management courses, computer education, basic core requirement courses for degree programs, and physical fitness classes.

"We seem to be holding onto our adult members of the student body while attracting a larger proportion of younger students," Greenhaw said.

All the student and credit hours totals which have been recently compiled are related to the two official days of registration. This is the first

Humboldt Sun
 Reno — An agreement to facilitate the transfer of student credits from community colleges to universities within the state and to strengthen present requirements in English, reading and mathematics was approved Friday by the University of Nevada Board of Regents.

The agreement, the result of an extensive study by campus representatives and the office of Chancellor Robert M. Bersi, is also designed to improve relationships among all state campuses.

To receive a degree, the agreement requires that students on all campuses complete a common core of courses that will transfer automatically to any other campus. At the same time, a committee answerable to the Regents will see that existing requirements in English, reading and mathematics are strengthened.

The agreement also provides for easier transfer of credits taken toward a degree at any campus. All such courses will transfer, at the very least, as general elective credit.

And for the first time in Nevada, Regents will review proposals for specialized four-year degree programs based on two years of training at a community college and two years of more general education at one of the universities, leading to specialized bachelor's degrees. These "capstone" programs better prepare students for employment and increase use of campus resources.

March 9, 1982
 Additionally, each campus will establish an "Office of University (or Community College) Relations" to provide information and help with problems in transferring credits.

A master course file and transfer guide will also be published annually to show which courses have been judged by the universities and community colleges as degree level courses. Included will be a guide to assist students in selecting courses for the first two years of study.

Students, schools feeling pinch of budget tightening

By Associated Press
From kindergarten through college, students and schools are feeling the pinch of last year's federal budget tightening and worrying about the pain of this year's anticipated cuts.

Some school milk programs have been eliminated. Eligibility levels for free and reduced-price meals have been lowered and prices have been raised. Remedial programs have shrunk. Grants and loans for college students are scarcer.

In many areas, actual federal outlays during fiscal 1982 — the year that began last Oct. 1 — will be higher than they were in fiscal 1981. That is because spending is determined, in part, by authorizations from previous years. The budget authority for fiscal 1982, however — the key to Congress' intentions for the future — is lower than it was in 1981.

Direct federal outlays for education in fiscal 1982 are estimated at $15.4 billion, up slightly from the $15.1 billion in fiscal 1981. But the budget authority for education this year is only $13 billion — down from $14.9 billion a year earlier. For fiscal 1983, President Reagan has proposed outlays of $13.1 billion and a budget authority of $10.3 billion.

The overall figures, of course, do not reflect ups and downs of individual programs. Outlays for impact aid — money which goes to communities with large federal installations — will drop this year to an estimated $580 million, down from $697 million a year earlier. Spending on education for the disadvantaged also will decline.

The figures also do not reflect some indirect aid to education, like the funding for child nutrition programs. Outlays for the school lunch, school breakfast, summer food service and child care food programs will drop from $3.4 billion in fiscal 1981 to an estimated $2.7 billion this year.

Robert Mandeville, budget chief for Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson, said the state expects $30.6 million less from the federal government for education this year than it got last year. That includes a loss of almost $18 million in the school lunch program.

Illinois authorities estimated that because of rules changes which made students ineligible or higher prices which parents could not afford, 250,000 fewer lunches were being served each day as of last November, a drop of 25 percent.

Agriculture Secretary John Block told a congressional committee recently that participation in the school lunch program dropped from 26.7 million children in 1980 to 23.2 million last year, a decline of 13 percent.

The changes in the school lunch program took several forms:

— Eligibility for free meals was set at a flat 130 percent of the poverty level instead of the old limit of 125 percent of the poverty level plus a standard deduction. Under the old rules, a family of four with an annual income of $11,520 would have qualified; under the new rules, income is limited to $10,990.

— Eligibility for reduced-price meals was set at 195 percent of the poverty level instead of 185 percent. The maximum allowable income for a family of four is $15,630 a year, down from $17,440.

— Subsidies for reduced-price and fully-paid meals were reduced by up to a quarter. The maximum allowable charge to students for reduced-price meals was doubled from 20 cents to 40 cents. To make up for the reduced subsidies, schools also raised prices for students who pay for their lunches.

— Participation in the Special Milk Program was limited to institutions which do not participate in any other federally subsidized food program.

Some school districts like Norton, Vt., have canceled lunch programs completely, saying that if they raised prices enough to cover their costs, participation would drop so much that it would not be worth serving meals at all.

"We would have had to go over $1 (double last year's price) to break even. We felt participation would drop and the price would have to go up again," said Norton spokesman W. Scott Blanchard.

Other schools have added alternatives to the basic hot lunch required under the federal program. Middlebury (Vt.) Union High School, for example, contracted with an outside firm to provide an a-la-carte menu that includes french fries, hamburgers, milk shakes and ice cream cones.

Robert Becker, head of the program said the lunch program used to serve 160 students a day; now it serves 600. "This must be the right way to go."

There have been reductions in other educational programs as well.

A cut of about 5 percent in federal aid for educating the disadvantaged forced the Des Moines, Iowa, district to trim the number of teachers' aides, psychologists and reading specialists assisting remedial reading and math teachers.

Ted Sanders, a spokesman for the Nevada Department of Education, said remedial reading and math instruction for 1,500 students already has been reduced or eliminated because of a $1 million cut in funds for the disadvantaged.

College students are worrying about how to pay the bills. Outlays for Pell Grants — basic grants for needy students — are being reduced. Eligibility requirements for student loans have been tightened. A 5 percent origination fee has been charged on all student loans granted since last Aug. 23.

Congress also voted to phase out the payment of Social Security benefits to students 18 to 21 in a move that will save an estimated $10 billion over the next five years.

The elimination of the program begins in May. Students who are not attending college full-time by May 1 will not qualify for any benefits. Students who already are in college will not get benefit checks for May, June, July or August; their checks will be reduced by 25 percent each September for the next three years.

Lamoille doings

By Sue Ford Mollison
Pam Bottari, next year's NNCC student body president, will be working as a forestry technician on the Humboldt National Forest (she's been promoted from aide) this summer, stationed primarily in Lamoille Canyon.

Among area NNCC graduates are Jean Dingman, registered nurse of Pleasant Valley and Claire Algerio, business mid-management of Spring Creek, valedictorian.

Visiting Lamoille with daughter Colleen was Sherry Bradshaw of San Jose, Calif. Daughter Pam graduated as a registered nurse from NNCC May 17 while her proud mom looked on. Colleen is a NNCC licensed practical nursing student and aide at Elko General Hospital. On their Lamoille visit both Colleen and her mom assisted with ranch veterinary activity and morning chores, pitching in with vim and vigor.

NNCC Aggie Club on way to 'Fat City'

The Northern Nevada Community College Aggie Club is on its way to "Fat City," according to the club's newly elected officers.

The recently organized club's major project this fall (besides electing officers) is to travel to northern California to investigate career opportunities in production agriculture.

While on the trip, club members will attend the Senior Grand National Livestock Exposition at the Cow Palace in San Francisco, and will visit a large commercial feed lot called "Fat City."

The club's new officers are:

- Judy Buffington, president, a graduate of Eureka High School, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arron Buffington.

- Donna Jordan, vice president, Smith

Valley High School, Smith Valley, Nev., and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Bilbao.

- Mike Robinson, secretary, also a graduate of Eureka High School where he lived with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Robinson.

- Treena Trimble, treasurer, an Elko High School graduate, she daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reid Trimble.

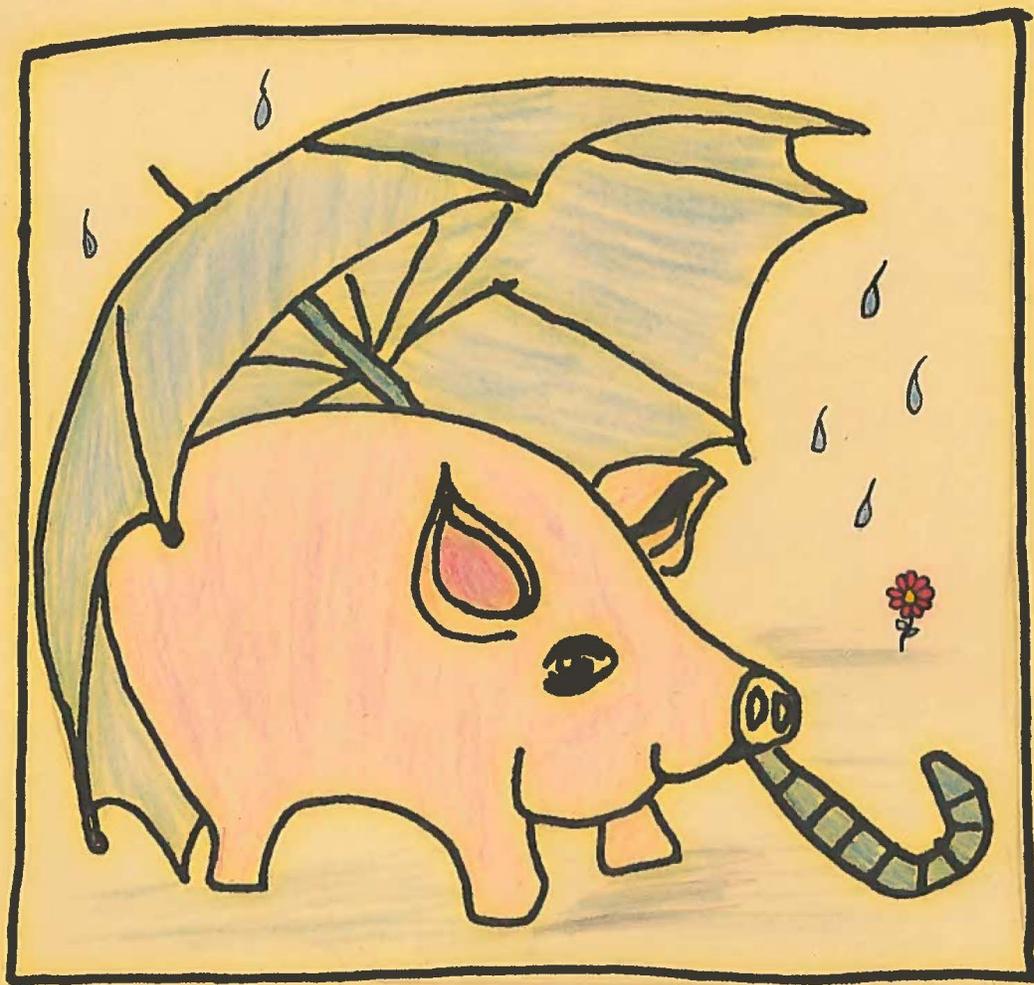

- Pam Bottari, reporter, Elko High School graduate and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duilio Bottari of Lamolle.

- Bobbi Burns, sergeant-at-arms, a graduate of Clark High School in Dubois, Idaho, she's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Burns.

- Brent Allen, senate representative, is a graduate of Gonzales High School in Gonzales, Calif., and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gale Allen.

The club's advisor is NNCC instructor Louis Horton.

'Cowhand's Song', ranching documentary, set Wednesday

"There's a range war on these lands," says the narrator of a ranching documentary to be shown Wednesday night at Northern Nevada Community College.

"It's a 20th Century range war, where the weapons are words, not guns, and the battle is being fought in courts and conference rooms all over the country, rather than on the range itself."

The narration accompanies a documentary film called "A Cowhand's Song: Crisis on the Range".

The film is an attempt, explain Nancy Kelly and Gwendolyn Clancy, to depict the rugged life of the late 20th century family rancher by dispelling some of the myths and romantic images of the early American cowboy created by movies and television.

The film was previewed at the Northern Nevada Community College last week and will be shown to the public in Elko at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the NNCC library.

"We'd really like to get some of the local ranchers in here to see the film," Miss Kelly said. "We need to know what they think of it."

The film addresses the crisis in public land use — the ranchers' need to use public lands for grazing, and the demands being placed on the range by special interest groups such as ecologists, developers, government agencies and by the new-found ideal of the urban American to "get away from it all," by heading out to the wide-open spaces.

Writes Deane Swickard of the Bureau of Land Management, in a brochure describing the film, "Raising cattle on western rangelands has had tough times since the beginning. There have been droughts, bad winters, range wars, need for government regulation, need for government deregulation, more droughts, too many wild horses and, most recently, growing multiple use demands. So, ranchers have always been in a crisis or headed for one. They've side stepped some, but one crisis reappears with increasing intensity — justifying their dominance over the use of public rangelands.

"It really is a crisis for these people," said Kelly. "They're afraid they are going to lose their lands, their homes and their way of life."

She explains in the brochure, "It used to be nobody wanted these lands. Now the desert has great appeal for those who want to hunt, hike, camp or develop it. "I hate to say they're doomed. There will be some families who will survive. They're tough in every way, but their vulnerability is in dealing with the large world and bureaucrats."

Kelly, 28, and Clancy, 30, are graduates of the University of Massachusetts, but they didn't shoot the film in a studio or gather their information at a college library. They both lived and worked on ranches in Modoc County, Calif., for more than two years while obtaining the necessary money to finish the piece.

They traded hard work and long days for room and board and for the chance to get a real education, ranchhand style.

"If we were going to understand them, we had to live on the ranches," said Kelly.

"Initially, they were not interested in our filming them. It took a year and a half to get them comfortable in front of the camera," she said.

The more than $50,000 for the 28-minute color documentary came primarily in the form of grants from California Council for the Humanities Committee, Nevada Humanities Committee, National Endowment for the Humanities Youthgrants, and a donation from the Nevada Cattlemen's Association.

Both Kelly and Clancy also obtained personal loans to complete the filming, editing and production work.

"For most of the last year we worked on editing the film," said Kelly.

It took nearly four years to complete the project, and now the two producers spend much of their time traveling the Western United States showing and discussing the movie.

NNCC Shows Ranching Film

Elko Indep. 10/28/81

The documentary film "A Cowhand's Song: Crisis on the Range" will be shown in Elko at the Community College Library on Wednesday, Nov. 4, at 7:30 p.m.

Produced in the ranching areas of Modoc County, Calif., and Washoe County, Nev., the film documents the daily life of family cattle ranchers who run their cattle on the public lands.

The film shows the way the ranchers' traditional use of those lands has been challenged by ecologists, recreationists, developers and government agencies. "A Cowhand's Song" examines these conflicting viewpoints.

Nevada Gov. Robert List responded to the film by saying: "The use of public lands is an issue that touches the lives of all Nevadans. I recommend 'A Cowhand's Song' as a personal portrayal of family ranchers meeting the challenges of a harsh and arid land."

Following the showing at the Community College Library, filmmakers Gwendolyn Clancy and Nancy Kelly will be present to answer questions. This program is sponsored by the Friends of the Washoe County Library and funded by the Nevada Humanities Committee.

The public is invited. Admission is free.

"If you ever see a cowman on television, it's a darn poor image. He wheels up to a gambler's casino in a Cadillac and gets out wearing a hundred dollar hat and a silver buckle you could hide behind. You don't see any of those old horsebackers out there a goin' from daylight 'til dark." [words of a rancher in the film]

Lynn Smith runs for FFA president

Lynn Smith of Elko is a candidate for national president of the Future Farmers of America.

Selection of the president and other national officers will be made during the FFA national convention which starts tomorrow and runs through Saturday in Kansas City, Mo.

Louis Horton, agriculture instructor at Northern Nevada Community College, explains there are 33 candidates for six national offices — president and vice president, which are elected at large, and four vice presidents elected regionally.

The seven-member national nominating committee quizzes each candidate extensively and presents a slate of officers for the organization.

A committee was formed to promote his candidacy, and Smith has been kept busy meeting with chapters around the state. He was also recipient of the American Farmer Degree, the highest national degree for FFA members.

He received that for FFA projects including electrification, communications, and the raising of wheat and sheep. His sheep for the first project were earned as pay for his electrical endeavors at his father's and grandfather's electrical business in Elko.

His communications work has included service as a public relations representative for a ranch in northern Nevada and host for a weekly radio show.

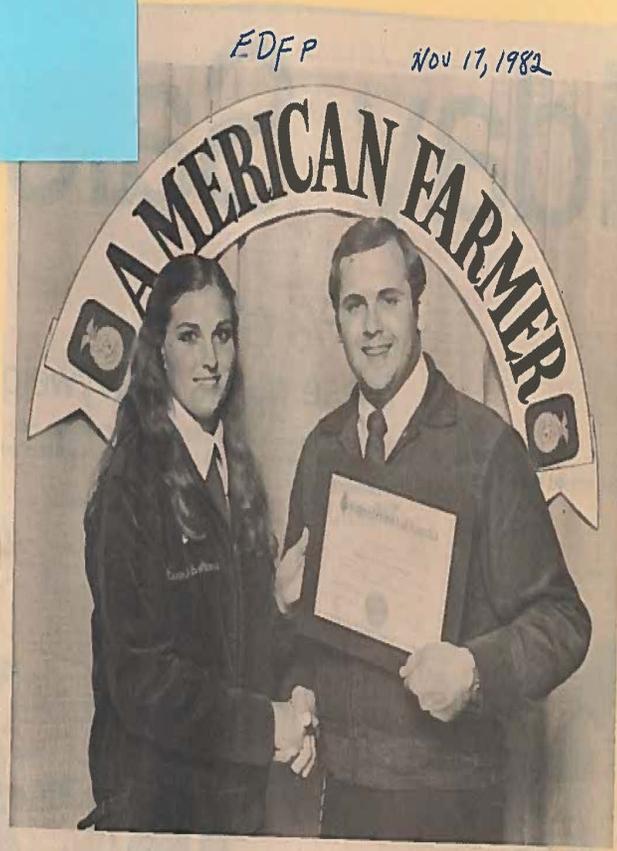

Smith's candidacy started when he was officially recognized as Nevada's candidate at the state FFA convention in April.

He has held several local and state FFA offices, including state president in 1978-79.

He is the son of Jan and Leonard Smith, formerly of Elko, and is a 1979 graduate of Elko High School.

Marie Damele winner at first Ag Olympics

Elko Free Press 11/5/81

The Northern Nevada Community College held the first Future Farmers of America "Ag Olympics" at the college yesterday and Marie Damele, a 17-year-old senior from Elko High School came away the overall winner.

The event was sponsored by the NNCC Aggie Club, according to advisor Louis Horton.

Competition tested skills in livestock production, crop production, agricultural mechanics, hay stacking and construction. There was also a written test on the FFA and/or 4-H.

Horton said he hoped to make the Ag Olympics an annual event adding that about 60 high school students participated

Miss Damele placed in the top three in two of her events (she had the high score in the crop production competition) and placed high enough in the others to take the overall win.

The results follow:
Senior overall FFA: (1) Marie Damele, (2) Steve Howard, Duck Valley; (3) Luke LeBaron, Wells.

Junior overall FFA: (1) Vince Mendive, Duck Valley; (2) David Taylor, Wells; (3) Dan Sorenson, Wells.

Senior construction relay: (1) Steve Howard, Duck Valley; (2) Joe Wines, Ruby Mountain; (3) Jace Agee, Ruby Mountain.

Junior construction relay: (1) Carl McNurlin, Ruby Mountain; (2) David Senior hay stacking: (1) Sim Mallotte, Duck Valley; (2) Brian Johnson, Duck Valley; (3) Jace Agee, Ruby Mountain.

Junior hay stacking: (1) Vince Mendive, Duck Valley; (2) Dan Burton, Elko; (3) Darren Windous, Duck Valley.

Senior crops: (1) Marie Damele, Elko; (2) Luke LeBaron, Wells; (3) Sim Mallotte, Duck Valley.

Junior crops: (1) Dawn Duval, Ruby Mountain; (2) Lisa Byers, Ruby Mountain; (3) Danny Burton, Ruby Mountain.

Senior FFA quiz: (1) Joe Wines, Ruby Mountain; (2) Luke LeBaron, Wells; (3) Todd Schwardt, Ruby Mountain.

Junior FFA quiz: (1) David Garcia, Wells; (2) Neil McQueary, Ruby Mountain; (3) Vivian Brown and Luana

NNCC's Ag Olympics Results Talled

Three Future Farmers of America (FFA) chapters from Northeast Nevada competed in various events during the NNCC Ag. Olympics, held Thursday, Oct. 28, on the NNCC campus.

The three FFA chapters participating in the Ag Olympics included 25 members from the Ruby Mountain chapter in Elko, 32 members from the Duck Valley chapter in Owyhee, and 10 members from the Reese River chapter in Battle Mountain.

The overall winners in the day's events were, in the Senior Division: 1st, Stephanie Gibson, Duck Valley; 2nd, Glenn Baker, Battle Mountain; 3rd, Lonnie Scott, Ruby Mtn.-Elko.

Overall winners in the Junior Division were: 1st, Dawn Duval, Ruby Mtn.; 2nd, Teresa Snyder, Reese River; 3rd, Ken Thompson, Ruby Mtn.

Ag Olympics FFA Test

The Senior FFA test winners were: 1st, Karen Wright, Ruby Mtn. chapter; 2nd, Glenn Bakker, Reese River, and Lonnie Scott, Ruby Mtn.; 3rd, Steve Howard, Marina Mendive, and Darin Windows, all from Duck Valley.

The Junior FFA test winners were: 1st, Bruce McKinney, Duck Valley; 2nd, Vince Mendive, Duck Valley; 3rd, Merlin Gonzales, Duck Valley; Stephanie Shields, Duck Valley, Robert Rhoden, Duck Valley; Ralph Jim, Duck Valley; Teresa Snyder, Reese River.

Written Tests

In the Junior category (freshmen and sophomores) the winners of Soil, Water,

Range contest were:

1st, Dawn Duval, Ruby Mtn.; 2nd, tie between three contestants Teresa Snyder from Reese River, Joe Payne from Ruby Mtn., and Vince Mendive from Duck Valley; 3rd, Clinton Oppenheim from Duck Valley.

Jr. Animal Science Test

1st, Dawn Duval, Ruby Mtn.; 2nd, tie between Teresa Snyder from Reese River and Joe Payne from Ruby Mtn.; 3rd, Shane Thacker, Duck Valley.

In the Senior Divisions, The second place winners were Connie Phillips, Ruby Range Contest were 1st, Valley; Colleen Dingman, Karen Wright, Ruby Mtn.; 2nd, Lisa Byers, Ruby Mtn.; 3rd, tie between Beau Carlsen from Ruby Mtn. and Marina Mendive, Duck Valley.

The third place winners were Susie Dorsa, Ruby Valley; Syndie Kane, Ruby Valley; Steve Terry, Ruby Valley; Carrie Windows, Duck Valley; Diane Vicenti, Duck Valley; and Stephanie Shields, Duck Valley.

The haystacking contest

The winners in the Jr. FFA division were 1st, Turn Winder, Ruby Mtn.; Dawn Duval, 2nd, Ruby Mtn.; 3rd, Steve Terry, Ruby Mtn.

Sr. FFA division winners were 1st, Kenneth Harney, Duck Valley; 2nd, Todd Espin, Reese River; 3rd, Patrick Jim, Duck Valley.

Sr. Tractor Driving

The top three contestants were: 1st, Glenn Bakker, Reese River; 2nd, Stephanie Gibson, Duck Valley; and 3rd, Steve Howard, Duck Valley.

Jr. Tractor Driving

The first place winners were Mike Roes, Ruby Valley, and Raviene Smith, Duck Valley.

Impressions of Mary Cassatt at NNCC

A one woman musical, "Impressions of Mary Cassatt," about the famed artist Mary Cassatt will be performed at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 8, at the Learning Resource Center, Nevada Northern Community College. This program has been made possible in part, through a grant from the Nevada State Council on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts, a federal agency, which was awarded to the composer and performer of "Impressions of Mary Cassatt," Katie Ketchum.

The life of Mary Cassatt, one of the greatest artists of the 19th century will be portrayed through song, dramatization, costumes, dance slides and paintings.

Mary Cassatt was a dynamic woman who fought Victorian convention by traveling to Europe, joining the Impressionist painters-forerunners of modern art — and becoming a highly successful professional artist. At the age of 24 her paintings were accepted at the prestigious Salon gallery in Paris. Not only was she admired by the critics but her fellow artists as well, including Renoir, Degas and Gauguin, with whom she exhibited her paintings until 1886.

Cassatt captured the everyday life of the Victorian woman and priceless expressions of children through the mediums of pastel, oil and aquatint. In the medium of aquatint she developed new techniques and her resulting exquisite works have been unequalled.

It was while Ketchum was in Beverly Wilke's pastel class at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, that she was introduced to Mary Cassatt. "I wanted to tell people about this great American artist," Ketchum commented. "Most musicals are written about someone exciting and interesting and the more I read I found out Cassatt was quite a character. George Biddle (an American artist) said: 'She is the most brave, vivid and magnetic personality I have yet known.'"

NENHA's new officers listed

Stan Aiazzi will serve as president of Northeastern Nevada Horsemen's Association for 1982. Ted Burner, Delbert Reese and David Abel will serve as vice presidents. Donna Domingo is the new secretary/treasurer.

The club's primary goals are to interest and educate families and young people in showing horses. It will provide an enjoyable place to show young, inexperienced horses and encourage novice adults to participate.

Five horse shows have been planned for 1982. Points will be awarded to winning horses and 10 sterling silver custom-made belt buckles will be awarded at the end of the summer season. All five shows will be held at the Spring Creek Horse Palace.

Aiazzi also announced some changes in year-end awards: Gymkhana horses will be awarded separate buckles for gymkhana divisions. This, he hopes, will encourage youngsters in the area interested in rodeo events to vie for the $225 buckles.

Aiazzi is the associate dean at the Northern Nevada Community College. He and his wife Joyce, who also shows, have two daughters who will be participating this year. Pam, 11, and Deena, 9.

Burner is a social studies teacher at Elko High School. He and his wife Cheryl have two daughters who will show. Pam, 15, and Christy, 10.

Reese is the manager of Maggie Creek Ranch and he and his wife Karen have three children interested in horses. Dan, 16, Tom, 13, and Janet, 10.

Abel is a field representative for Tri-State Livestock Credit Corp., and he and his wife Sue have two daughters showing horses. Gloria, 10, and Sarah, Miss Domingo has shown horses for 11 years and is a computer operator at Pacific Western Systems.

Anyone who is interested in joining the NENHA is asked to contact any of the officers or members and to attend the next meeting of the NENHA which will be Feb. 11, at 7 p.m. at Stockmen's Motor Hotel in Elko.

Practical experience offered NNCC farm program students

By Charles Greenhaw

A big green tractor, purchased with a Fleischmann Fund donation, dunes in the pasture of the practical experience farm at Northern Nevada Community College.

Suffolk sheep huddle together in the December cold and Hereford cattle munch on newly strewn hay. In the distance, the snow mantle on the Ruby Mountains lowers.

It's a winter pastoral scene that seems to promise a life of clean work, worthy products, and a closeness to the gifts of nature.

The promise of NNCC's practical experience farm beckoned Judy Bufington, from Grass Valley to enroll at NNCC in late August.

The same promise enticed her classmates — Pam Bottari, Lamolle; Mike Robinson, Eureka; Bobbi Burns, Dubois, Idaho; Brent Allen, Gonzales, California; Trina Trimble, Ely, and Donna Jordan, Smith Valley.

All have some background in farming or ranching, and most have offices and honors in farm organizations. They're trying to stay in the increasingly competitive farm and ranch business by combining practical work experience with business principles in operating a farm.

The brainchild of Louis Horton, who is NNCC's only instructor in agriculture, the farm is a kid of "micro-economy" characterized by a "free enterprise spirit."

Students make decisions at the first of the college year about what they intend to produce. They then create a budget for raising livestock — swine, beef cattle, and sheep.

And the budget is no mere simulation of real life. To finance their enterprises students must actually borrow money from the Production Credit Association or the Federal Land Bank.

They go through the routine followed by anyone in agri-business. They complete applications and appear before a loan committee to hear the decision.

Of course, since all of them are under 21, they must get a co-signer. And, naturally in this instance, the co-signer is Louis Horton.

The budgets they prepare must include all anticipated expenses — feeding and medical care for the animals, also interest on loans. After completing budgets and obtaining loans, they select and purchase animals at livestock sales or from area ranchers.

Thereafter, until marketing time, they buy and mix feed, carefully chart the development of their animals, and care for them daily.

"This year," Horton said, "students are attempting to make more profit by smoking pork products." The basic aspect of life on the farm is self-sufficiency.

"Nobody backs these students. If a dog kills a sheep or if a steer gets sick and dies, a student loses his investment. If all goes as planned, he pockets the profit. So far nobody has lost."

But there have been some close calls. "Over the Christmas recess last year one of the steers got sick," Horton recalls.

"When students returned to college in January, they immediately noticed a weight loss. They were quite concerned since they had $700, including feed, tied up in the animal."

So they sought their mentor — Horton — to learn what to do. The animal was saved.

"This was a meaningful experience," says Horton. "It's the kind of experience that was lacking in my own preparation."

Supporters of the farm say the economy designed demonstrates the way ranch and farm life works and teaches students how to succeed in the economy of the real world.

"The basic thing is to make the farm an economic unit. The number of cows depend upon the forage produced."

The students have developed 15 acres on the NNCC campus, site of the old Ruby View Golf course. This portion of the farm makes up the swine and sheep unit.

To the east of Elko on 500 acres of state land of the Nevada Youth Training Center, NNCC students are clearing sagebrush. They will plant crested wheat to increase carrying capacity. They also build fences, plant alfalfa, and irrigate.

Each student must devote five hours a week, in addition to personal projects, to the upkeep and development of the farm.

Since cow-calf operations dominate in the Elko area, they often travel elsewhere to analyze other sides of agriculture. They recently returned from a tour of California feedlots, and they will soon visit a sheep experiment station in DuBois, Idaho.

Funds for these trips were raised by the students through the college's "Day of the Knights" fund drive.

All of them have scholarships with most of the money coming from Elko-area ranchers and businessmen. But they also make expenses by working.

Bobbi Burns, a freshman from DuBois, works on a nearby Lamolle ranch for room and board. She also works part-time in Elko.

According to Horton, Bobbi is up at 5 a.m. and she is still working at 9 p.m. Pam Bottari from Lamolle lives on the family ranch and she works before and after classes and on weekends to help pay for college.

Some area ranchers, who are finding these college students offer excellent managerial help, are beginning to schedule ranch work around the class schedules.

Horton would like to increase the enrollment by the fall 1982 semester to 20 full-time students. Eventually he wants to add a two-year beef management program that would include meat processing and supervised internships on area ranches.

For the present he will be seeking more scholarship money, and he will be recruiting more students statewide.

He will be telling them about the fun the competition in Ag Olympics, of the action in making a farm produce, of the thrill of watching animals grow.

He will stress that students enrolling in NNCC's agriculture program "won't automatically grow up to be cowboys and cowgirls, but they will get a good dose of free enterprise farm economics."

Sheep class set on March 20, 27 on NNCC campus

A Sheep Management Class, with three sheep experts serving as instructors, will be offered at Northern Nevada Community College on Saturday, March 20 and Saturday, March 27.

The class will run from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the two days with a registration fee of $16. Persons can register at the first class in Rooms 6 and 7 in Lundberg Hall.

Instructors will be Deloyd Satterthwaite, a commercial sheepman for 20 years; Dr. Earl Drake, Nevada State Veterinarian; and Dr. Bill Vaught, sheep expert from the University of Nevada-Reno.

The class is designed for the farm-flock operation that wants to increase production and increase profit, according to an NNCC spokesman, and will include hands-on experience.

Among the items to be included in the class are:

Getting started right in the sheep business; sheep shearing; how to care for wool to receive the highest price; wool grading; ewe selection; semen collection and examination for fertility; methods of pregnancy testing ewes; parasite control; care of new lambs.

Anyone wanting further information should contact Louie Horton at the college, 738-8493.

College hosts zone judging for FFA contest Thursday

Zone judging for contests sponsored by the Future Farmers of America will be held at Northern Nevada Community College on Thursday, according to Louis Horton.

Horton, agriculture instructor at NNCC, said 175 contestants from throughout northeastern Nevada will be at the college for the competition which starts at 8:30 a.m. and continues throughout the day.

Students will come from as far away as McDermitt and Lund, he said.

Elimination contests — which see the top two contestants advance to state competition — will be held in parliamentary procedure, star greenhand for freshmen students, prepared public speaking, and extemporaneous public speaking.

Practice contests for state competition will take place in agricultural mechanics, record keeping, meat identification, ornamental horticulture, and range and soils.

Horton said the high school students will be hosted to a lunch at the college, and presentation of awards should start around 5:15 p.m.

He said the public is invited to watch the contests.

NNCC sets sheep sale for May 15

Northern Nevada Community College will hold its first annual Invitational Sheep Project Sale on Saturday, May 15, announces Louie Horton of the college's department of agriculture.

He explained the purpose of the sale is to provide high quality sheep for members of 4-H and Future Farmers of America.

The sale will start at 4 p.m. on May 15, the same day the college will celebrate its 15th anniversary, Horton noted. Buyer inspection will be held from noon to 4 p.m.

Sale committee chairman Deloyd Satterthwaite "is gathering a variety of different sheep what would make excellent student projects," said Horton. The variety includes registered and grade, ewes with lambs, single ewes and Wether lambs.

More information about the sale is available by calling Satterthwaite at 738-7846 or Horton at the college, 738-8493.

The sale, beginning at 4 p.m. on May 15th, will also be coinciding with NNCC's 15th anniversary. From noon to 4 p.m. a buyer inspection will be held.

The sheep sale is designed to provide high quality sheep for members of 4-H and the Future Farmers of America.

A large variety of sheep useful to 4-H and FFA members is now being gathered. The variety will include registered and grade, ewes with lambs, Wether lambs, and single ewes.

The sale committee is chaired by Deloyd Satterthwaite.

Wells Progress May 14, 1982 NNCC Sheep Sale Begins At 3 p.m.

Time of the sheep sale at Northern Nevada Community College Saturday has been changed to 3 p.m., Louie Horton of the college's ag department announced today.

Horton said this first annual Invitational Sheep Project Sale, to be held as part of Saturday's NNCC 15th anniversary celebration, will be on the college campus and buyers and spectators can use their noses and ears to find the exact location.

Deloyd Satterthwaite is sale committee chairman and Horton said he has gathered a variety of different sheep that "will make excellent student projects."

Horton explained the purpose of the sale is to provide high quality sheep for projects of 4-H and Future Farmers of America.

The sale will feature 19 animals to be sold in 14 lots, Horton said today. These lots include: three registered yearling ewes, each in a separate lot; one registered ewe with a ram lamb; one registered ewe with twins; one grade ewe with twins; and three wether lambs, two registered ewe lambs, and three grade ewe lambs, each in a separate lot.

Chairman of the sifting committee will be A.Z. Joy, university extension agent from White Pine Count, and Jake Reed of Elko will be auctioneer.

Saturday's birthday celebration at the college is planned as a day-long event starting at 9 a.m. and concluding with a reception at which birthday cake will be served in the student lounge at 8:30 p.m.

Birthday events include opening of an invitational art show in the NNCC library which will feature the work of 19 area artists, Joymayne the Juggler, pet parade, games in the Child Life Center, softball, scholarship and awards ceremony and a performance by Reno Opera Company's soprano, Susan Frank, and tenor, John Pay.

E.D.F.P. May 18, 1982 NNCC honors Fred Harris

Fred B. Harris was honored as a college founder at NNCC commencement exercises last night.

"Fred Harris was the man with the idea," said Bill Wunderlich of the college advisory board who made last night's presentation. "Fred thought Elko should have a junior college. He was working on this when he heard from a friend about a community college in Ontario, Ore. He got together a group that went to Ontario to look over Treasure Valley Community College and brought back enthusiasm for the idea."

Returning to Elko from Ontario, the Elko group organized a fund drive that collected $48,000 within six weeks and Elko Community College, as it was first called, was on its way.

Wunderlich explained that the first classes were held in grade and high school classrooms during the evenings and much of the instruction was volunteer.

While working on the junior college idea, Harris, along with Mark Chilton, gave land north of Elko to the University of Nevada regents in hopes this could be used for the college. This was later traded for land on the old golf course where the college is now located.

Harris lifted the first shovel of dirt at ground breaking at the NNCC campus.

Harris is a native of Brigham City, Utah, and was one of the first range management graduates of Utah State Agriculture College at Logan.

He worked on the first Bureau of Land Management range survey crew in the Wells and Currie areas and then was in charge of compiling the data from this survey at an office at the University of Nevada in Reno. This was the work that established the "animal unit month" (AUM) now used by the BLM in determining lease numbers.

Harris came to Elko with his wife, Helen, in 1941 as an agent of the University Extension Service and worked in the local office with Chet Brennan. From that position he went into ranch management, in 1948 moved to Colorado for five years, then returned to Elko where he established Nevada Ranch Service in 1954. Shortly after opening his business he obtained his real estate license and has been involved in the sales of many of the big ranches in the county.

The Harris have two daughters, Nancy McLelland of Mendocino, Calif., and Ann Witdoeck of Orinda, Calif.

NNCC Notes

Elko Independent 9/3/81
By Bill Opperman, President
The student government is in full swing this semester with an all new senate and a long list of student and community activities.
The results of the senate elections held last week brought Brent Allen, Dan Beeler, Tony Locke, Greg Molyneaux and Sherry Roydon into the senate. They will be the hub of many of the projects and activities held this semester. We wish them the best in their endeavors.
Planned for this semester are the monthly children's films, a Halloween party and a Christmas party. The first children's film will be shown Sept. 27 at 12:30 and 2:30.
The student government is working in conjunction with the administration to bring three classical concerts to Elko this semester; the first will be on Oct. 4 in the college library.
The college's fall picnic will be held in October and will have to be worked around the Flea Market on the 17th of Oct. and the Leadership Workshop at the S-Bar-5 Ranch in Wadsworth on the weekend of the 10th.

NNCC's big yard sale scheduled tomorrow

The Northern Nevada Community College's Great Northern Nevada Flea Market, Auction, Swap Meet and Yard Sale may be held tomorrow — weather permitting, according to dean of instruction Charles Greenhaw.

If it rains, the event will be postponed until Saturday, Oct. 2, said Greenhaw. (The weatherman predicts a 50 percent chance of rain tomorrow).

Meanwhile, NNCC students, staff and friends of NNCC are preparing for the sale, which is being held to help fund construction of a proposed student center. Greenhaw said the college so far has raised about $10,000 for the center through last fall's sale and from donations made by local businesses, ranches and mining companies. Greenhaw noted that last year's sale attracted about 1,500 customers.

The proposed student center will be a multi-use building with recreational and physical fitness facilities, said Greenhaw.

The practical nursing students will operate a beverage booth which will sell coffee and hot chocolate early in the day and hot dogs and soft drinks later; the Elko Special Olympics athletes and friends will sell popcorn, Special Olympics frisbees, peanuts, and Kenny Rogers T-shirts.

Fresh, hot scones will be sold by registered nursing students; the associated students of NNCC will offer hot tamales and taco salad.

The event will also include a children's book exchange. Greenhaw said a variety of gift baskets filled with treasures will be available inside the children's playground.

The NNCC Aggie Club will hold a baking contest. Pies must be delivered and entered by 8 a.m. tomorrow morning at Room 1-B at Lundberg Hall on the college campus. Judging will take place between 8 and 9 a.m., and will be closed to the public, says the club. The entry fee is $5 per pie. Cash prizes will be awarded to the tastiest pies.

Besides all this, the college has a room full of donated items to sell, swap and auction, said Greenhaw.

NNCC To Hold Yard Sale Tomorrow

Elko Daily Free Press 10/16/81
The Great Yard Sale will be held Saturday at Northern Nevada Community College from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. to raise money for the college's development fund.

NNCC Dean Charles Greenhaw said the sale will consist of many donated items, including stoves, refrigerators, a dryer, ham radio equipment, clothing, antiques, farm equipment, video tape recorders, wooden clock, bric-a-brac, books, a camper shell, (very) used cars, and junk.

To be held along with the yard sale are a flea market with booths set up in the college parking lot, an auction in the college parking lot, and a performance of "A Cents of Value" and workshops conducted by the Covenant Players.

Baked goods and chili will be sold by the NNCC Aggie Club. "There will absolutely be no sales before 9 a.m.," said Greenhaw.

He added that in case of bad weather, the events will be moved inside the college.

NNCC seeks donation of items, equipment

The need for donations of used items as well as cash at Northern Nevada Community College has been expressed by John Pryor, director of business at the college.

"People often feel current donations involve only cash," he noted.

Though cash is one of the most pressing needs, Pryor added many non-cash items such as various types of used equipment are also needed.

Some items have been donated in the past, including used office furniture and machines, vehicles for the diesel mechanics program, and farm stock.

Pryor said about any type of item such as working typewriters, calculators, copy machines, and computers could be used in some way by the college.

Major items such as farms, houses, and automobiles may contribute to the funding of specific or general projects, he added.

Many generous cash contributions have been received since the college began, including $300,000 in grants from the Fleischmann Foundation and $125,000 from the Howard Hughes Foundation. The grants have been used to purchase equipment for instruction.

He noted all contributions, regardless of their value, are fully tax deductible.

NNCC Students Place Heifers in Reno Show

Pam Bottari, Judy Buffington, Louie Horton, and Donna Jordan curry three heifers for the Reno Livestock Show.

Pam Bottari, Judy Buffington and Donna Jordan, three NNCC Aggie students, loaded heifers to take to Reno to show them in the Nevada Junior Hereford Show. This will be a first for the college. The students select a heifer from the college herd and fit her and then show her. Reese Marshall of Diamond Valley, an expert on fitting cattle, has been helping the students.

This will be a great experience for both the students and the cattle.

Some of the students want to become High School Vocational Agriculture Teachers, and this will help prepare them for their careers. This will also help students who plan to return to the ranch and show their own cattle or when buying fitted cattle.

All of this work and attention shown to the heifers will make them easier for students to work around in the future. The students made their own vests to show in.

The student government of NNCC presented the Aggie students with a check to help them with expenses on their trip.

NNCC elects Ballew as foundation chairman

By Dick Snyder

Charles Ballew was elected chairman of the Northern Nevada Community College Foundation during a meeting held last Saturday at the Stockmen's Motor Hotel.

Ballew is manager and senior vice president of Security Bank of Nevada in Elko. He succeeds Byron "Bill" Bilyeu, Elko attorney and assemblyman-elect. Bilyeu served as the first chairman of the foundation.

Other officers were re-elected Saturday. They are vice chairman Rob McBride of Elko, treasurer Burgess Harmer of Jackpot, and secretary Bill Berg of Elko.

Serving as committee chairmen for the foundation are Max Blackman of McGill, nominating committee; Warren Scott of

Elko County members of the foundation are W.L. Bellinger, Ted Blohm, Mark Chilton, Eugene Eckert, Marguerite Evans, Dorothy Gallagher, Charles Knight, Michael Marfisi, Sam McMullen, Ted McPhee, Connie Satterthwaite, Robert Vaughan and Orville Wilson, all of Elko; Frederick C. Pullman and Barbara Read of Lamoille; L.W. Eklund of Carlin; Al Huber of Jackpot; Ruth Post of Spring Creek; Carol Turney of North Fork; and Jim Wright of Tuscarora.

Foundation members from outside Elko County are E.E. Eyre Jr. and James Ithralde of Eureka, Lyle Taylor of Ely, Tom Marvel of Battle Mountain, Mike Laine of Winnemucca, and Al Copley of Reno.

NNCC considers housing facilities

File Press Oct 5/81

Housing facilities for 50 students may be available at Northern Nevada Community College by next fall, according to Dr. Bill Berg, president of NNCC.

The University of Nevada Board of Regents has signed a lease with Thomas Eck, a Carson City attorney who wants to build the housing.

The lease designates approximately two acres of land between College Parkway and Interstate 80 which will be available for development providing Eck begins construction within the next six months, and has at least 50 units ready for occupancy by next fall, according to Berg.

Upon the suggestion of Elko City Attorney Jim Copenhaver, the college has filed a request to rezone the two acres from public/quasi-public to residential. Copenhaver suggested the zoning change so the units may be rented by non-students, in the event they are not filled immediately by students.

The Elko Planning Commission will consider the request at a public hearing in city hall at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Berg said he feels the housing is necessary to attract students from the five surrounding counties served by the college.

Though the college could not guarantee all of the units could be filled by students at first, it is planned that students will eventually occupy the entire development.

No funding assistance is available from the state level, according to Berg, but some of the cost will be deferred because the land is being donated by the college.

He said the college has been interested in building student housing for a number of years, and has been attempting to find someone from the private sector to build on college land north of the present buildings.

The entire project calls for a total of 100 units, half of which Berg said must be ready for college students by next fall.

If the rezoning request is approved, the developer will submit plans to the college advisory board and board of regents for approval, showing exactly what type of housing will be built.

Reno developer plans NNCC student housing

A Reno firm is planning to construct student housing units at Northern Nevada Community College with the intent of completing the project by next fall, according to Darrell Gilliland of High Desert Realty.

Dr. William Berg, president of NNCC, reported a lease with High Desert Realty involving two acres of NNCC land has been approved by the Nevada Board of Regents. The proposed site is located on College Parkway, between Interstate 80 and the main campus.

Student housing has been sought by college administrators for several years, and extensive design work was conducted last year under an arrangement with Carson City lawyer Thomas Eck and contractor Nevada Homes Inc. of Sparks. However, those plans were dropped when the developer was unable to finance construction. Gilliland said that should not be a problem for High Desert Realty, because financing has been "pretty much secured" for the development. The company plans to begin construction next April 1 on housing units for approximately 50 students, according to Gilliland. Enough space would be left on the two-acre site for building of additional units when there is enough demand for them, he added.

"I think the community college needs it," said Gilliland. "They can't expand unless there is housing."

Gilliland said his company has a "long-term" lease on the two acres of NNCC land, and High Desert Realty will retain ownership of the housing units.

"Students will have the first right of refusal," he said. Any remaining apartments not taken by students may be rented to non-students.

Design work is still in the preliminary stages and there are no cost estimates yet for the project.

"It will probably be a two-story building," Gilliland reported.

Once designs have been approved by the college, Gilliland said the company will present plans to the City of Elko for building permits.

The Citizen's Committee for the School Bond urges all eligible voters to register to vote and to support the passage of the school bond.

"It's a Matter of Pride"

The Elko County Commission will hear an appeal by the KRL Corp. at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the district courtroom of the Elko County Courthouse, according to County Manager George Boucher.

The appeal deals with the denial by the county planning commission of a change in zoning from open space to agricultural-residential on land encompassed by Spring Creek tract 201.

"He (Robert Womack, owner of KRL) was going for a mobile home park the first time around," Boucher said.

Boucher said the August denial was because the planning commission and residents of Spring Creek believed there was a lack of water in the area and that the area should remain a greenbelt zone.

NNCC to focus on raising money for new building

By Dick Snyder

Northern Nevada Community College Foundation trustees voted on Saturday to concentrate their fund raising activities on building a multi-purpose building for the Elko campus.

Their vote followed a presentation by Elko architect J.D. Long, who volunteered his services to design the building.

Long said the building would contain a total of 7,423 square feet including a mezzanine. Long estimated the building's cost at $379,000.

A proposed second phase would add 5,358 square feet at a cost of $334,000.

Landscaping would bring the total of both phases to $722,000. Long noted the cost figures do not include equipment and furniture for the building.

NNCC President Bill Berg explained the college is attracting more and more younger students who are entering NNCC after graduating from high school.

The college is becoming "a home" for these students, and facilities are needed for them, said Berg.

The college has three immediate building needs: additional classrooms, student housing, and the multi-purpose building which would contain a student center, Berg added.

He explained the University of Nevada Regents have already taken action to provide student housing by making some of the college's land available to a private contractor.

Regent Dorothy Gallagher of Elko, who was at the meeting, said the regents are committed to building more classrooms for the Elko facility. She said the present facility was at capacity.

But she said there is no money available through the state for the student center.

Berg said the foundation would be the only likely source of funds for the building.

He explained the Elko campus is unique among the community colleges in Nevada. It serves the largest area of any of the colleges: Elko, White Pine, Eureka, Lander, and Humboldt Counties.

Following the presentation, trustees voted unanimously to accept the building as the primary target for fund raising.

The vote followed an assurance from Berg that the building would be available -- as all NNCC facilities have been -- to the community.

"Community is part of our name," said Berg. "We have always believed in providing service to the community."

Foundation funds have been raised through NNCC yard sales held with the cooperation of faculty, staff, and students. In addition, a performance by Jack Hull in "An Evening With Mark Twain" last weekend aided the fund raising effort.

The foundation will also continue to provide scholarships for NNCC students. Some donations to the foundation have been earmarked for scholarships and other specific purposes, such as support of the nursing program.

Trustees said they would also explore obtaining funds from other private sources, including foundations.

NCAA, Clemson officials said to be meeting today

ANDERSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson officials were to meet again with the NCAA's Infractions Committee at a suburban Chicago resort, according to a published report.

In a copyright story in today's editions, the Anderson Independent-Mail quoted unnamed sources at the scene as saying Clemson and National Collegiate Athletic Association officials held a marathon 12-hour session at Indian Lakes Resort at Bloomingdale, Ill., Thursday.

The substance of Thursday's meeting was not revealed, said the newspaper.

Clemson has been under investigation for the last 19 months for alleged football recruiting violations.

The newspaper quoted an unidentified source as saying a session was scheduled today, and that the Clemson party included President Bill Atchley, Coach Danny Ford and Athletic Director Bill McLellan.

The source said 10 to 12 people were in the Clemson party. However, the newspaper said it was not known whether all were officially representing the university.

McLellan, when contacted at his Indian Lakes room by the Independent-Mail, said, "I have no comment."

NCAA officials could not be reached for comment either in Chicago or Shawnee Mission, Kan., Thursday.

Meanwhile, Clemson quarterback Homer Jordan's attorney, John Hagins, was scheduled to fly to Chicago this morning, a secretary in Hagins' law office told the newspaper. He was not expected to return to the office until Monday.

The NCAA has been investigating the financing of Jordan's purchase of a late-model car. Jordan, a senior, led the Clemson Tigers to an Orange Bowl victory over Nebraska and the national championship last season.

NCAA to ask for ruling stay

By Associated Press

The NCAA will ask a federal judge in New Mexico to put off enforcement of his ruling invalidating its football television contracts until the organization can appeal the case to the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver.

The NCAA said Thursday it was prepared to ask U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga to stay his ruling which invalidated the NCAA's contracts with CBS, ABC and the Turner Broadcasting Co. The judge's decision, filed in Oklahoma City Wednesday, had ruled that the NCAA's contracts with the networks were in violation of federal antitrust laws. It held that only individual schools had the right to sell their games to television.

It is questionable whether the judge will stay his own ruling.

Burciaga, who is in Albuquerque, N.M., had said in his decision that "it would be unseemly for the court, having found an overt violation of the antitrust laws, to allow the violations to continue for even a single day, let alone the rest of the season."

The three television networks have said this weekend's schedule of games would be observed. Beyond that, there was little agreement on the ultimate consequences of the ruling. The original suit was filed by the football powers at the University of Oklahoma and the University of Georgia.

While the NCAA battled to have the ruling invalidated, college and conference administrators blasted the judge's decision.

"It a dark day for college football," said George King, Purdue's athletic director and the president of the NCAA's Athletic Director's Association. "The decision of the court to eliminate TV control and eliminate the network contracts creates a chaotic state."

Miles Hallock, the chairman of the NCAA's television committee, said the decision was a victory for a few of the NCAA's superpowers.

NNCC course

Northern Nevada Community College will offer an "around the house" welding course designed for the novice welder this spring.

NNCC automotive technology instructor Gary Hertel (in top photo with auto repair equipment) said the course will be taught by local welder Louie Urriola (in photo at right), owner of Louie's Repair and the Magic Wand.

Hertel said the five-week course will emphasize individual instruction. The course will be held in the college's alternate semester beginning in early March.

Hertel said this is part of NNCC's "completely revamped" welding program. He said the major change in the welding department is that students in the regular welding classes are now being taught on a competency basis, "which means they must be able to understand what they're doing as well as be able to fix it," he said. The college offers both beginning and advanced welding in the one-year certificate program.

Hertel said the welding program fulfills requirements for all NNCC skilled vocational programs.

He said the program has been boosted by donations of training aids from local automobile dealers and shops.

Construction of a Student Center — which could be used also by other members of the community — is a major goal of the Northern Nevada Community College Foundation, according to foundation chairman Bill Bilyeu.

The building would contain much-needed space for recreational activities and special events. Many small meetings and theatrical and musical offerings could be held there, he added.

Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction at NNCC, said the proposed building would have many uses for the college and for the community.

He said that as the Elko campus continually attracts more and more students from neighboring counties, the need for such a building continues to grow. He said a growing number of young students from surrounding counties are considering NNCC as "home" during the first two years of their college education, and the multi-purpose building would help provide recreational activities for them.

Construction of the building would help allow the college to offer a wider range of courses, he added.

The foundation has been raising funds for two years with the money earmarked for the possible construction of the building. Fund-raising efforts have included the college's annual yard sale and flea market, which sees the active participation of students, staff and faculty.

Another fund-raising event is scheduled for 7 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 20, when the foundation presents local attorney Jack Hull and "An Evening With Mark Twain" at the Stockmen's showroom.

Tickets, priced at $20 each, include hors d'oeuvres and dinner. A hosted hospitality hour will precede the dinner. Bilyeu said there is yet no cost estimate on the proposed building. A feasibility study will be performed before plans proceed for building.

If the foundations is successful in raising enough money, the building would be built entirely with private funds, added Bilyeu.

Another possibility is a combination of public and private funds, he added.

Tax deductible contributions for the NNCC Foundation are always accepted, said Greenhaw.

Contributions may be mailed to Paul Sawyer, chairman of the foundation development committee, NNCC, 901 Elm St., Elko, NV 89801.

NNCC announces contest to provide catalog photos

A photo contest to find pictures for use in the college catalog has been announced by Northern Nevada Community College.

NNCC dean Charles Greenhaw said the contest is co-sponsored by Fox Foto of Elko.

"We tried to come up with something innovative and something which will produce some top-quality pictures for use in the college course catalog," said Greenhaw.

He explained the college has previously paid professional photographers for photos used in the catalog, and added the contest will allow many more people to get involved in submitting photos. "We hope it will produce better pic-the cover picture for the 1982-84 NNCC catalog and must be in color. All other photos will be in black and white and must be prints eight inches by 10 inches.

Greenhaw said NNCC is offering two second prizes of $50 each; three third prizes of $30 each; three fourth prizes of $20 each; and 10 fifth prizes of $10 each.

Those submitting photos for the contest must be students or former students of NNCC. There is no limit to the number of entries from an individual, but no employees of the college nor of Fox Foto are eligible.

Photos may show any aspect of NNCC student life, said Greenhaw, including campus scenes, classes, student activities, and points of interest in Elko, Eureka, Lander, White Pine and Humboldt Counties.

Entries in Elko will be accepted at Fox Foto.

Community college branch growing

By Kim Thomas
Sun Staff Writer

Rae Edwards does not attribute the current growth of Nevada Community College's Winnemucca branch to the school's new home here. But she will point to the audio-visual terminals, videotape facilities for independent learning and space for added classes — including office administrative classes that could not be offered before — all of which now have plenty of room in the Winnemucca College Center, on Minor Street across from the Railroad Subdivision. Edwards is coordinator of the local branch and recalls that the former college office in the post office basement had no room for classes at all. They had to be held in borrowed rooms at the high school or elsewhere.

Although the college continues to rely on the high school and other rooms from the city and county, it is based now in a better atmosphere with the new building.

"The attitude is better with the new building," Edwards said.

"There have been about ten people come from McDermitt for classes," she said, adding that "lots of people" came from Battle Mountain, since the Winnemucca center offers more than that branch.

"With the added space, there is room for the AVTs and the cassette for the self-paced telecourses," Edwards said. "There are also independent study programs with teachers from Elko helping," Edwards said.

In the independent study program, classes such as business real estate and biology are offered. There are 12 classes offered as self-paced programs, where those involved never have to see a instructor.

With the AVTs, 50 more students have enrolled in business classes. And with the computer programming offered on the college's own three microcomputers, there are 25 more students enrolled.

Although Edwards does not attribute added enrollment to the new building, she said the enrollment has increased.

There were 600 enrolled in the 1979-80 school year, while in the 80-81 year over 500 enrolled: 250 in the fall and 274 in the spring.

This fall semester alone, 300 enrolled. Another 100 enrolled to learn English as a second language in a free class taught by Elsie Jimenez and Roger Casos.

About seventy classes are offered each semester, with ten students needed for any class to be held.

Adult classes for high school equivalency are taught in the college. Classes are taught by Kay Danley and students can earn either their GED or their high school diploma, which takes more classes than a GED.

Without the help of Wild West Enterprises, the college would still be working out of the post office basement, Edwards said.

Wild West has a two-year lease on the building and is donated it to the college for that period. Bob Cashell, chief operating officer of Boomtown, Inc. and Wild West, is chairman of the Board of Regents of The University of Nevada.

"He saw the need in Winnemucca for something more than we had," Edwards said.

"We expect to grow and to continue to grow. We're offering more with the new building," Edwards said.

Laubach workshop offered at NNCC

Training of tutors in the Laubach literacy method will take place during a workshop offered by Northern Nevada Community College on Jan. 23 and 30.

Course coordinator Cyd McMullen Holthoff notes class size is limited to 20 and suggests early registration.

The Laubach method was developed by Dr. Frank Laubach, who Mrs. Holthoff said was among the first to recognize the problem of illiteracy throughout the world.

His approach has been used to teach reading and writing to 80 million adults in more than 100 countries and 300 languages.

Mrs. Holthoff said the workshop focuses on the teaching of spoken English as well as reading and writing.

"While the method was designed for use with adults, it has proved to be effective with children, especially teenagers," she said.

"Anyone who reads well and wants to learn to share that skill is qualified to become a Laubach tutor."

The NNCC workshop will be given from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 23 and Jan. 30 at the NNCC adult learning center.

Instructor will be Mary Carroll Fox, a certified Laubach trainer and an English as a second language instructor for Lander County schools.

Tuition is $16, with an additional $5 registration fee for new students of NNCC. Other charges consist of $15 for materials and $6 for membership in the National Affiliation for Literacy Advance.

Participants are requested to bring a three-ring looseleaf binder. Food — consisting of coffee, orange juice, and doughnuts — will be provided.

To reserve a space, participants are asked to call Mrs. Holthoff at the college (738-9493 ext. 213) or at home (738-9531) by Jan. 1.

Lightless NNCC finals

Northern Nevada Community College students were hard at work on semester final examinations last night when — you guessed it — the lights went out.

Triggered by an overload on a north-west Elko circuit when an earlier short circuit was being corrected, the college lost its lights at about 8:30.

Following initial confusion, some students went for flashlights and at the library building a vehicle was brought to the north corridor entrance and headlights were beamed down the hallway for students who brought their tests out to the

NNCC links new computers with system in Reno, Vegas

EDFP

Dec. 6, 1982

By Dick Synder

Computer terminals at Northern Nevada Community College are now linked directly with three complex computers around the state, according to NNCC instructor Carl Diekhans.

The link provides students at NNCC with a wide variety of educational opportunities, he added. The new terminals are in addition to existing microcomputers used in the college's instructional courses.

The new equipment helps NNCC meet its goal of being the educational computing center for the community, he noted.

"NNCC now has the same computer power as any place in the University of Nevada system. We can do most anything here that can be done at the University of Nevada-Reno or Las Vegas," said Diekhans.

He explained the local terminals are tied by a direct phone line to the UNR computer center. From there the NNCC users can access the main computer at UNR or either of two computers at UNLV. Access is gained by using special passwords.

All major computer languages are available, including basic, fortran, cobol, pascal, and RPG.

Some computer-assisted instruction can now be offered in several subjects, and students don't need to be computer programmers, stressed Diekhans.

For example, a social science student may access the computer to obtain statistical analyses. The information may be read directly on the computer screen, or a written copy provided on a printer.

A UNR student might use the terminal in Elko, compile information, and have it printed at UNR for delivery to the instructor there, said Diekhans.

He noted there are several UNR students from Elko, and they would be able to work on projects while home during holiday breaks.

Easy-to-use manuals are available for students with no experience in computers.

Computer students may have their own file area in the main computers, with information filed on disk storage. Diekhans said that means they can prepare part of a program and return to it later without having to redo their original work.

"This is really a good system," said Diekhans. "It's endless what we can do."

"Nevada is up with or ahead of other states in computing. We have a really powerful computing system."

He said the Elko terminals are made available for all uses in education. There is no charge made for educational services.

The computing system is also made available to other agencies. Diekhans noted the Extension Service is one of its users.

There are presently four terminals at NNCC, and the college is responsible for their maintenance. The university system maintains the rest of the computing network.

NNCC has the capability for eight terminals with its present equipment.

Two buildings re-named during ceremony at NNCC

Two buildings at Northern Nevada Community College were re-named last Sunday in honor of long-time civic leaders and supporters of the college.

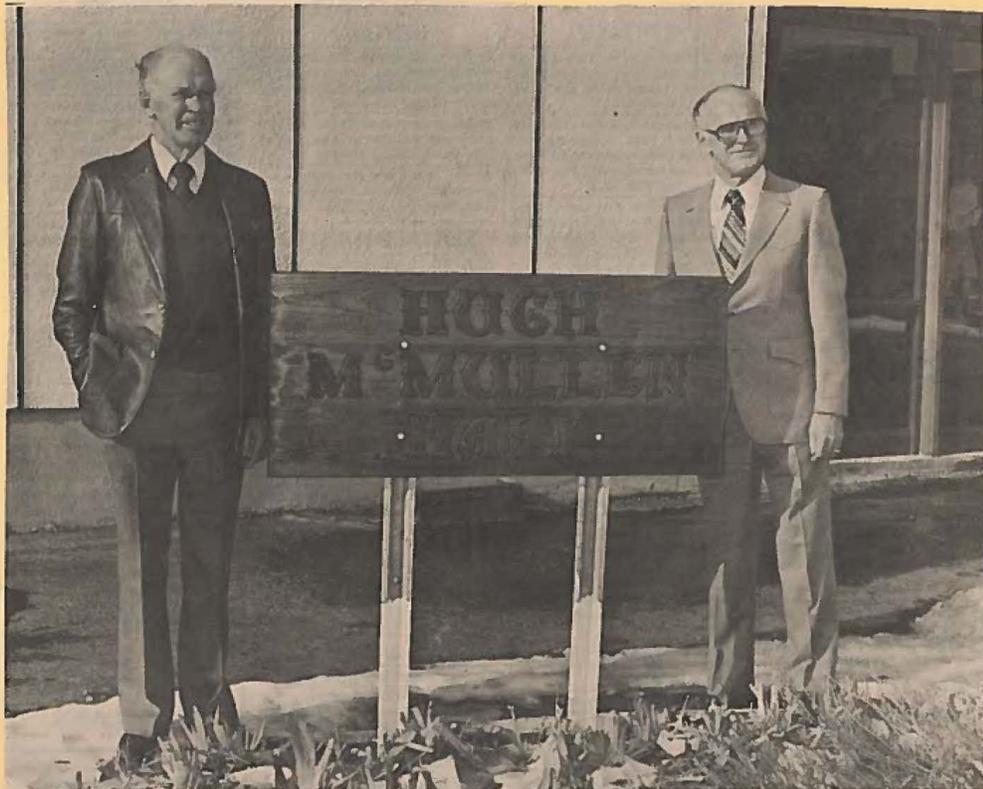

The vocational-technical building was re-named Mel Lundberg Hall, and the learning resources center was re-named in honor of Hugh McMullen.

Both men served as members of the college's advisory board. Lundberg served as manager of the local power company, and McMullen was in ranching and insurance. McMullen also served a term in the Nevada Assembly.

Approximately 150 Elkoans attended the ceremony.

Another 1½ months is the time left for contestants in the Northern Nevada Community College photo contest being held to obtain photos for the college's course catalog.

The photo contest is co-sponsored by Fox Foto.

Charles Greenhaw, NNCC dean, said photos are being sought which portray college life: campus pictures, classes, student activities, and points of interest in Elko, Lander, Eureka, White Pine or Humboldt Counties.

Photos are needed for the Elko campus and for the satellite campuses located in the five counties served by NNCC.

First prize, donated by Fox Foto, is choice of a Cosina CT-1 single lens reflex camera or Prinz 80-200 zoom lens.

Cash prizes, offered by NNCC, consist of two second prizes at $50 each; three third place at $30 each; three fourth place at $20 each; and 10 fifth place at $10 each.

All print entries must be eight by 10 inches in size. Those competing for first prize must submit an entry in color. All other entries must be black and white.

Greenhaw noted there is no limit to the number of entries, and all students or former students of NNCC are eligible to compete — except for employees of NNCC and Fox Foto.

Local entries will be accepted at Fox Foto, and entries at the off-campus sites can be given to local coordinators.

Deadline for entries is Feb. 15, and judging will be done Feb. 22.

Greenhaw encouraged anyone with photos of any aspect of NNCC life to submit those prints for possible use in the college catalog.

Carl Diekhans, chairman of the Mathematics and Computer Sciences Departments at N.N.C.C.

Computer Sciences is Expanded at N.N.C.C.

The Math and Computer Science departments at Northern Nevada Community College will be upgrading the Computer Trainee Certification program, effective spring semester.

Carl Diekhans, who heads both departments, announced that a computer trainee at N.N.C.C. will now be qualified with more math and more programming languages than were offered previously.

A computer trainee has, in the past, been required to take the BASIC programming language as well as some algebra and accounting. With the upgrading of the program, trainees will have the benefit of learning other languages, taking more advanced mathematics, and learning to run the two varieties of micro computers available at N.N.C.C.

The college currently owns six Apple II units, capable of producing excellent computer graphic design as well as many other functions, and four Radio Shack TRS-80s. Starting next semester, the TRS-80s will be travelling to field campuses of N.N.C.C., at Winnemucca, Ely, and McDermitt for computer instruction there.

Next semester, as well as BASIC programming, FORTRAN and RPG-II will be offered at the Elko campus.

The FORTRAN course will be taught by Jack Huntsman, a retired Boeing computer specialist, and John Luebben, systems analyst for Elko County, will teach RPG-II.

The RPG-II course will be open to people with previous programming experience, and will utilize the IBM System 32 at Nevada Home Health, and the IBM System 34 at Alexander Grant & Co.

The FORTRAN programmers will be using remote batch entry, with punched cards on-line through a terminal to the computer system at the University of Nevada-Reno.

Carl Diekhans pointed out that the key to computers, engineering, and all the technology fields is mathematics.

Consistent with this concept, N.N.C.C. is offering calculus, trigonometry, and elementary and intermediate algebra during evening hours and college algebra during the day next semester.

A self-paced class in intermediate algebra will also be available.

Starting next semester, a new three-hour math and computer lab will be optional weekly, for students who need individual help with assignments from their classes.

Carl Diekhans said that the calculus class, which is one of his favorites to teach, will be combining the best of both worlds, by using the computer for some problem-solving activities, although no previous knowledge of computers is required.

"I don't see any glut of programmers on the market in the future," Carl Diekhans said, so all those interested in a challenging and highly-paid field would do well to begin familiarizing themselves with the computer technology available at N.N.C.C. tax installment due

NNCC buildings re-named for Lundberg, McMullen

Elko Press Press 1/8/79

Approximately 150 people turned out yesterday for the re-naming of two buildings at Northern Nevada Community College.

The vocational building was re-named in honor of the late Mel Lundberg, and the learning resource center was re-named in honor of the late Hugh McMullen.

Both men were lauded yesterday as being instrumental in the creation of the college as well as active in the business and civic life of Elko.

Carl Shuck, chairman of the NNCC advisory board, memorialized Lundberg, who moved to Elko in 1940 to become assistant manager of the Elko-Lamoille Power Co. and worked for its successors as manager of the Elko district.

He was honored posthumously as a Distinguished Nevadan by the University of Nevada.

Lundberg's widow, Reva, attended yesterday's ceremony, as did her brother, Don Rowe, and his wife, Montez.

Dr. Les Moren spoke about McMullen, a native of Elko County who was active in cattle ranching and the insurance business. McMullen served one term in the Nevada Assembly.

Both Lundberg and McMullen served on the college's advisory board and both died in 1979.

Representing the McMullen family were children Russ McMullen and Cyd Holthoff, brothers Sam and Joe McMullen, and Kay Thompson, daughter of Sam. McMullen's wife Rae was unable to attend.

In addition to the two local speakers, Kathy List, wife of Nevada Gov. Robert List, spoke about the two men and the close friendship they enjoyed with the Lists.

Mrs. List called the men "two giants" who always stood for "what was right for their family, their state, and their community."

"Throughout their lifetime both Hugh and Mel were fiercely supportive of the community college system and in keeping it running in such a way as to meet the needs of the community and provide the services the people were asking for. They recognized the system as a state-wide resource but felt keenly that the campus here belonged to the people of Elko and rightfully so," she said.

University Chancellor Robert Bersi noted the community college had recently marked its 15th anniversary and predicted continuing growth and an outstanding future for NNCC.

Following the brief ceremony, a picture of Lundberg was hung in the vocational building and a picture of McMullen in the learning resources center.

Casino comes to aid of college

WINNEMUCCA — The Winnemucca branch of Northern Nevada Community College has finally moved into its own building, thanks to Wild West Enterprises.

The casino company has leased the former Kalaidescope building on West Minor Street from T.G. Sheppard for the college, according to Wild West chairman Bob Cashell.

College offices have been in the basement of the U.S. Post Office.

"As chairman of the university board of regents I saw the need here and I didn't think they could get the funds from the state to fulfill it," Cashell said.

College spokesman Charles

Greenhaw said the new facility will add more space for Winnemucca operations and remove some barriers for handicapped.

The college will continue to use Humboldt County school facilities for most classes, but will conduct some programs and classes at the new site.

Plans announced for NNCC student housing

Plans to erect 26 apartments to house Northern Nevada Community College students were discussed yesterday by the developers.

Rigg Rose, a spokesman for the development, explained the apartments would be totally heated by solar energy.

The southern wall of the apartments will be a green house which will collect solar energy. He explained the unit will produce enough energy to heat the apartments in winter, cool them in summer and provide hot water.

"There will be enough surplus energy, the college's agriculture department will be able to grow plants hydroponically all year long."

Each apartment will contain 550 square feet and will be totally self-contained, said Rose. The complex will also feature a central laundry facility, video game room, and food vending machines.

The apartment buildings will be two stories high.

The first phase of 26 apartments — each housing two students — is to be ready for occupancy by August. Construction should take between 120-140 days.

The units will rent for approximately $200 monthly per student. Rose added.

"We have a good design, one which will be pleasing to the community and to the college," said Rose.

He noted the contractor, Roland Vawter of Nevada Homes Inc., had constructed several solar-heated homes in the Reno area and has also built a solar-heated medical office in Reno.

NNCC President Bill Berg said today the developer of the property is Carson City attorney Thomas Eck.

He added that Vawter has told him he is moving his operation to Elko, where he has purchased property near the Elko golf course in addition to 14 lots in Spring Creek.

The student apartments are being built on college-owned land leased to Eck for 50 years.

The land is located south of Interstate 80 along College Parkway (which intersects with Elm Street and runs along the west side of the college property.)

Berg noted several efforts have been made over the past five years to get student housing built for the Elko campus. The housing, he said, should attract more students from outlying communities.

University of Nevada Board of Regents, following a recommendation from the college's advisory board, approved a 50-year lease with Eck for two acres of land. The rate is $1 per year.

Berg said the lease specifies that housing for at least 50 students must be available by August. If there are not enough students to fill the apartments, Eck will then be able to rent to non-students.

The apartments must be constructed to all local and state codes and must also be approved by the regents before they are rented.

"The regents wanted to make the land available and encourage private enterprise to construct the apartments," said Berg.

Architect's drawing of the student housing was shown yesterday during an NNCC staff development meeting held at the Holiday Inn.

Solar Powered Student Housing at Community College

Elko Independent
January 13, 1982

Northern Nevada Community College will be the first institution in Elko to build a totally solar-powered facility.

At the staff development seminar at the Holiday Inn on Thursday, Jan. 7th, it was announced that the new N.N.C.C. student housing will be built to depend on solar energy for all of its heating, cooling and hot water energy usage. (A backup conventional energy system is required by law.)

The student housing was designed by architect Roland Vawter, of Nevada Homes, Inc., a Reno-based architectural firm which will be opening an Elko office in the spring.

Nevada Homes Inc. has specialized in solar design and, besides several private residences, has built a medical office complex in Reno powered by the sun.

The solar student housing will use a passive solar design principle called Xen-wall, masterminded by Joseph Beard and Associates, "one of the foremost solar engineering firms in the country," according to Rigg Rose, spokesman for Nevada Homes.

The Xen-wall concept uses "concrete block walls grouted solid and insulated on the outside to provide thermal mass as well as structural support."

Fans will circulate the heated and cooling air within the walls.

On the south side of each unit a solarium will be built the entire length and height of the wall. In the student housing, these solariums will be approximately 9 x 38 feet and two stories tall.

As well as providing light and

heat collection, these solariums will be used as a recreation area and a solar greenhouse.

It was suggested that the agriculture department could use these greenhouses for hydroponic vegetable production. Each unit will contain eight apartments, each with about 550 square feet of floorspace.

The bedrooms will feature a moveable wall, which could be positioned for one larger bedroom for married students or two smaller bedrooms. Each apartment is planned to house two students, at a monthly rate of approximately $200 apiece.

The development will be on land behind the community college which has been leased to Carson City lawyer, Thomas Eck, at $1 per year for 50 years.

The first scheduled building, called Phase I, will meet the initial requirement of having housing for at least 50 students available by the fall semester of 1982. Phase I will provide housing for 52 students.

Additional enhancement in each eight-apartment unit will be laundry appliances, video games, a recreation area, and vending machines.

Each apartment unit will be completely furnished and carpeted so that "all the student will have to do is just move in," according to Rigg Rose.

Anticipating a construction period of 120-140 days, Rigg Rose said that "We plan to break ground as soon as the ground thaws so we can break it."

Other members of the community will have a chance of renting these solar units only if there are not enough students interested in filling them. It is hoped that, by providing student housing, more students will be attracted from outlying areas in the five counties served by N.N.C.C.

The idea of using the sun to bring monthly energy bills down to $5 or less per dwelling, will become increasingly attractive in this area, so ideally suited for solar systems. It is commendable that Northern Nevada Community College had the foresight to set an example for the rest of the community.

NNCC To Name Buildings
After Local Supporters

Northern Nevada Community College will name buildings Sunday in memory of two men - Mel Lundberg and Hugh McMullen - who were essential to the growth of the 15-year-old college, according to NNCC Dean of Instruction Charles Greenhaw.

The ceremony to dedicate the buildings will be held at 1 p.m. Sunday. The public is invited.

Speakers and guests scheduled to appear at the ceremony and the reception that will be held afterward include NNCC President William J. Berg, regent chairman Robert Cashell of Reno, regent Dorothy Gallagher of Elko, Gov. Robert List's wife Kathy, college advisory committee chairman Carl Shuck, and University of Nevada Chancellor Robert Bersi.

Greenhaw said the vocational building will be named Melvin Lundberg Hall. The college's learning center building will become Hugh McMullen Hall.

NNCC Professor Paul Hanna said the naming of the buildings will establish a precedent at the college.

"Instead of cold, impersonal buildings, we felt we should have a tradition to keep before the generations of students," he said.

Hanna, who proposed naming the buildings after Lundberg and McMullen, said their participation in the development of the college did not end with their membership on the advisory board.

"They came to every basketball game we played, even to the dances. They were deeply involved and were fundamental to the founding and progress of the college."

Elko attorney Bob Vaughan, who served with McMullen in the state assembly, described him as "integrity and honesty personified - personally and professionally."

McMullen, a life-long Elkoan, established McMullen Insurance Agency, and he operated the firm for many years assisted by his wife, Rae. He represented Elko County in the state assembly in 1955-57 and was chairman of the Elko County Republican Party. He also was a member of the city planning board and was active in the Rotary Club.

Of Mel Lundberg, Elko engineer Mark Chilton said it was entirely fitting that NNCC should name a building after Lundberg. He said Lundberg was "the kind of engineer that the community grows on."

Behind his name is an exhaustive list of credits and accomplishments. His latest title, as Distinguished Nevedan, was awarded posthumously last May by the University of Nevada.

Lundberg, an engineer, moved to Elko in 1940 with his wife, Reva, and became assistant manager of Elko-Lamoille Power Company. Besides his work with the community college, he was active in professional, political and charitable organizations including the Elko Chamber of Commerce, the Lions Club, and the Elks Club.

Elko Downtown Redevelopment — Is It

Worth the Money?

John Pryor

Northern Nevada Community College is hosting a seminar titled "Elko Downtown Redevelopments and Elko's Changing Markets" on Monday, March 29th, beginning at 9 a.m.

The all-day seminar is sponsored by the Nevada Real Estate Division and will serve as continuing education for licensed realtors.

According to John Pryor, who teaches real estate courses at NNCC and who is the coordinator of the day's events, the seminar should be of considerable interest to local members of the community, and business and professional people in Elko. During the morning session,

Alex Fittinghoff, an urban planner who has been employed in Sparks and Santa Rosa, and who is now an independent urban planner consultant, will discuss aspects of downtown planning and redevelopment.

Alex Fittinghoff will present a slide show on urban redevelopment, featuring ideas used in dealing with deteriorated downtown areas in such cities as Boston and Baltimore, as well as some of his own experiences in Sparks and Santa Rosa.

There will be time for questions and discussion following the morning session and a break for lunch.

will begin at 1 p.m., will focus primarily on Elko's redevelopment plan and will be centered around a panel discussion.

Members of the panel are Alex Fittinghoff, Barbara Errecart from the Project Lifesaver Steering Committee, Mark Chilton, Barry Lipparelli, John Moschetti, Max Wignall, Ray Lopez, and Charles Greenhaw.

The panel discussion will be moderated by John Pryor.

Mark Chilton will present ideas on the restoration of downtown property, Barry Lipparelli will discuss property valuations, John Moschetti will discuss taxation, Max Wignall will comment on traffic problems, Raymond Lopez will discuss promotion, particularly from the standpoint of the Convention Authority, and Charles Greenhaw will present a historical perspective.

John Pryor plans to introduce some of the more controversial topics connected with expensive downtown redevelopment, including marketing concepts and current attitudes that will ask the question if downtown redevelopment is a justifiable expense in Elko, when most commercial growth appears to be burgeoning along the eastern end of town and the freeway.

"This is the time to stir up discussion and get people involved before-the-fact," John Pryor said.

The panel discussion is scheduled to be finished at 4 p.m.

There is no charge for licensed realtors and a $5 registration fee for other members of the community who would like to attend.

The seminar will be held at the library at N.N.C.C.

Corridor's parking plans blasted at NNCC seminar

Plans to turn the railroad corridor in downtown Elko into a massive parking lot were criticized Monday during a seminar held to explore the effects of Project Lifesaver.

The seminar was held at Northern Nevada Community College and co-sponsored by the college and Nevada Real Estate Division.

Urban planner Alex Fittinghoff of Sparks said it would be a "serious mistake" to provide only parking in the corridor area which will be created when the railroad tracks are removed from the downtown area.

The Project Lifesaver advisory committee has recommended a plan which calls for paved parking lots between Third and Ninth Streets along the corridor.

Barbara Errecart, a member of the advisory committee, said the corridor land could be developed "to make downtown a real drawing card."

Instead, she said, the committee has recommended a plan which is "mostly an arrangement of parking spaces."

"We don't need to maximize parking at the expense of everything else," she added.

Fittinghoff said he agreed with Mrs. Errecart that the "appearance of the downtown area is critical."

He added that studies have shown parking does not attract customers.

"What I would do is sell or lease the prime land and make it productive. I would give first opportunity to expansion of existing businesses."

He said downtown business owners and their employees must be "educated" into parking somewhere other than right in front of their businesses. He suggested using an area along Silver Street, the south edge of the corridor.

Fittinghoff said making the corridor part of the public right-of-way and turning it into a parking area "would be a big threat to the future of downtown."

"Roads are the biggest threat. They have to be maintained, and they are not taxed."

He suggested use of tax increment districts which would center on one area of downtown at a time.

He explained the districts would require public entities to freeze their current tax rate in the improvement district. Future increases in valuation would result in additional tax, but that money would be earmarked for improvements within the targeted district.

The tax increment districts allow for a slow, well-planned program, said Fittinghoff.

Barry Lipparelli, one of the panel's speakers, said, "if small businesses don't get behind Project Lifesaver and downtown beautification, many of them will be out of business when the off-ramps are developed."

Fittinghoff agreed, saying "parking is not a 'draw.' Customers need things going on inside the buildings."

He noted people who travel to Elko "travel across a very harsh landscape. You need to create an oasis for them. That's a very key project."

He said cooperation of businessmen is needed. He lauded Mark Chilton, one of Monday's panelists, for work being done on the Pioneer Hotel.

Chilton said restoration of old buildings for business use has some disadvantages — but many advantages.

In addition to the "nostalgic value," the square-foot cost for renovation is less than new construction. There are also state and federal tax advantages, he added.

He said businessmen should set the example for downtown beautification "and not look for someone to do it."

He added the city should be asked to take action against loitering and vagrancy in the downtown area as part of the effort to improve the area.

Dorothy Gallagher, a member of the audience, said Elko enjoys a statewide reputation "for doing many impossible things. Everything Elko has done was born in controversy."

She cited the Babe Ruth ball field, swimming pool and convention center.

She said Project Lifesaver "offers one of the greatest potentials for Elko" and said everyone "with civic pride" should get involved with the beautification effort.

Seminar moderator John Pryor, a business instructor at NNCC, asked who should spearhead the effort to improve the downtown area.

Fittinghoff suggested the Realtors' board.

The seminar was sponsored by the state real estate division, and real estate licensees attending qualified for six hours of continuing education credit.

Other participants on the panel were John Moschetti, Max Wignall, Ray Lopez, and Charles Greenhaw.

Pryor said that because of the interest at Monday's session, the college may sponsor another such meeting. He arranged for Monday's event.

Pryor explained he believes it important the alternatives be discussed before the tracks are removed.

NNCC marks library week with contests

Northern Nevada Community College is celebrating National Library Week by sponsoring two contests, according to Maxine Palmer of the library staff.

One contest is Trivia Search, in which participants must use the college library's reference section. The other contest, Guess Who They Are, involves the identification of persons from plaster life masks.

Mrs. Palmer said the community is invited to participate, and prizes will be awarded. The contest begins today and concludes at 5 p.m. April 28.

An entry blank appears on Page 5. Entry blanks are also available at the NNCC library.

Prizes consist of a tape recorder and a travel alarm/clock radio.

More information is available by calling Mrs. Palmer at the NNCC library, 738-8493.

CPP test set Friday

The Career Planning Profile test will be given Friday at Northern Nevada Community College.

The test will be held in Mel Lundberg Hall commencing at 8:30 a.m. and ending about 11:30 a.m. There is a charge of $5 for this test.

The CPP is an admission requirement for the nursing and business programs and should be taken before or during a student's first semester with NNCC, according to Bill Davies, dean of student services.

Students in other programs are welcome to take the test to aid them in vocational placement, he added.

Anyone wishing more information can contact the student services office at the college.

College offers fitness class

Fitness for Kids, a program for children of ages six through nine, will be offered at Northern Nevada Community College from 10-11:30 on Saturdays starting March 6.

Janice Boucher will instruct the program, which is designed to develop awareness of physical development and health.

The program will include special attention to flexibility exercises, aerobics and rhythms for children, basic gymnastics, balance beam activities, and games with some attention to nutrition.

Fee for the eight-week program is $18. Registration is tomorrow and Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the college's student services office.

Trees donated by the Elko Kiwanis Club were dedicated last week for the NNCC arboretum. College to celebrate birthday on May 15

Northern Nevada Community College will celebrate its 15th birthday on Saturday, May 15, with a day of special events.

Dr. Bill Berg, college president, said events are designed to attract all ages and interests.

The community is invited to participate in any or all of the events, he added.

The schedule for May 15 includes the following:

★ 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.: Invitational art show featuring three works each from 19 area artists will be held in the college library. Coordinators are Linda McBride and Marguerite Evans.

★ 10 a.m.: The Cosmic Goose, Joymayne the Juggler, performs on campus. She'll also instruct juggling.

★ 10 a.m. until 1 p.m.: Animal Relief Foundation's annual pet parade. If weather is nice, the event will be held on the grass; and if it is bad, it will be held in the shop.

Cats, dogs, birds, and rodents will vie for awards. Entry fee is a can of cat or dog food.

Registration will be held from 9-10 a.m.

★ 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.: Dog Fest, with hot-dogs sold two for $1 by child life center personnel on the campus lawn. Profits will pay for improvements at the child center.

★ 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.: It's a Small World: games in the child life center, including find the bunny, pitch the penny; and instruction on how to juggle and how to be a clown.

Chances will also be sold on a rainbow quilt raffle.

★ 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.: Softball on the campus green. Faculty will take on students and ex-students, and famous Elko celebrities will umpire. Winners will get to throw pies at the losers.

★ 4 p.m.: Sheep auction conducted by the Aztec Club on the campus lawn.

★ 6:45 p.m.: Annual scholarships and awards ceremony in the library, with presentation of department achievement, outstanding student, and outstanding instructor awards.

Presentation will be made of several scholarships, and emeritus faculty will be recognized.

★ 7:30 p.m.: Soprano Susan Frank and tenor John Fay, both of the Reno Opera Co., will perform selections ranging from Broadway to Opera.

The concert will be held in the college library.

★ 8:30-9 p.m.: Reception with birthday cake served in the student lounge.

Also available for inspection during the day will be the college's arboretum, a project spearheaded by Mike Jordan of the Nevada Division of Forestry. The arboretum is part of the college's nature trail, for which construction began last summer.

Diesel, Welding, and Automotive Programs at N.N.C.C.

March 3, 1982

Northern Nevada Community College is proud to present greatly expanded Welding, Automotive Technology, and Diesel Mechanics programs this year.

In the Welding program, beginning and advanced classes are available.

Beginning welding is taught by Louie Urriola, an ex-military welder with 20 years' experience, who owns Louie's Repair. During the Spring Alternate Semester, which will begin on March 6th, Louie Urriola will be offering a welding course for homeowners. This five-week course will feature individualized instruction for novice welders. No equipment need be furnished by the students, with the exception of safety glasses and coveralls.

Charlie Damele is the instructor in advanced welding. He is a fully certified industrial welder, and the owner of CD Portable Welding and Repair in Lamolle.

Gary Hertel, chairman of the Welding program, noted that the Welding classes offered by the community college meet all welding requirements for the automotive, agricultural, and diesel certification programs. He explained that the Welding classes are "competency based," which requires the student to have an understanding of the theory and physics principals involved as well as demonstrate a skill in the technical performance.

In 1981, the Automotive Technology program received a $9,000 federal grant, which was used to upgrade the tools and equipment in the department. Partially as a result of the grant, N.N.C.C. will be offering specialized in-service training workshops, for many of the area mechanics and high school automotive teachers, in the latest technological advances.

During March, Herb Simms from Warren Ford will be teaching a course on Ford Microprocessor Control Units (MCUs) for advanced training and retraining of professional automotive technicians.

The Automotive Technology program now has the capability of teaching students about on-board automotive computers, computer-controlled fuel systems, and infra-red emissions testing, as well as modern alignment and balancing equipment.

N.N.C.C. offers three certified programs in Automotive Technology, a one-year certificate, an 18-month Master Mechanic Certificate, and a two-year Associate of Arts degree in Automotive Technology.

Gary Hertel reports that the department has greatly benefited from equipment which has been donated by Cooper Motors, Dewey Chevrolet/Olds, Warren Ford, Western Motors, Dale White Motors, and Wright Motors.

In order to ensure that teaching methods and practices remain current in a rapidly changing national automotive environment, the Automotive Technology department has recruited a Council for Curriculum, made up of a range of Elko County automotive specialists.

Gary Hertel pointed out that, despite a high degree of professionalism in the department, the cost of the Automotive Technology program is about one-fifth of what it would cost a student from one of the five counties served by N.N.C.C. to enroll in a comparable program out-of-state.

The diesel program is the brainchild of Stan Aiuzzi, the Dean of Education at N.N.C.C.

This year the diesel program, which began as a C.E.T.A. training program, moved into its own building.

Under the directorship of Bill Howard, the diesel department at N.N.C.C. is the only full-time program in the state of Nevada.

NNCC to celebrate its birthday next Saturday

Northern Nevada Community College will celebrate its 15th birthday next Saturday with a day full of events for all ages and interests, according to college president Dr. Bill Berg.

The public is invited to participate in any or all of the events, said Berg. The college serves residents of Elko, White Pine, Eureka, Lander, and Humboldt Counties.

Events start at 9 a.m. and continue through 8:30 p.m.

Starting at 9 a.m. and lasting all day will be the Invitational Art Show, featuring three works each from 19 area artists, in the college library.

The college's arboretum and nature walk will be available for inspection all day. The arboretum contains trees donated by service clubs and individuals, and each tree will have a plaque in front of it stating who donated the tree.

Other events planned for Saturday include:

■ Animal Relief Foundation pet parade from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on the campus green. Entry fee is a can of dog or cat food, which will be given to animals at the city pound.

Registration starts at 9 a.m. The event will be moved into the shop building if weather is foul.

■ The Cosmic Goose, Joymayne the Juggler, will perform on the campus green starting at 10 a.m. She also will give instructions on juggling.

■ Hotdogs will be sold - at two for $1 - by Child Life Center personnel starting at 10 a.m. Proceeds will fund improvements at the center.

■ It's A Small World - games and excitement in the Child Life Center and play yard. Games include find the bunny, pitch the penny. Instruction on how to juggle and clown will also be given.

■ Softball game on the campus green will start at 2 p.m., pitting faculty members against students. Umpires will be Elko Sheriff Jim Miller and attorney Bill

Bilyeu.

■ Computer games of "Planetoids," "Apple Panic," and "Falcons" may be played free in the computer lab between 2 and 4 p.m.

■ The Great Sheep Auction, conducted by the Agriculture Department, will start at 4 p.m. on the campus lawn.

■ The annual scholarship and awards ceremony will be held from 6:45 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. in the college library. Awards will include departmental achievement, outstanding student, and outstanding instructor.

Recognition will be given scholarship winners and emeritus faculty.

■ Soprano Susan Frank and tenor John Fay, both members of the Reno Opera Company, will perform selections ranging from Broadway to Opera in the college library from 7:30-8:30 p.m., immediately after the scholarship and awards ceremony.

■ Reception will begin at 8:30 p.m. in the student lounge, and birthday cake will be served.

The schedule for May 15 includes the following:

★ 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.: Invitational art show featuring three works each from 19 area artists will be held in the college library. Coordinators are Linda McBride and Marguerite Evans.

★ 10 a.m.: The Cosmic Goose, Joymayne the Juggler, performs on campus. She'll also instruct juggling.

★ 10 a.m. until 1 p.m.: Animal Relief Foundation's annual pet parade. If weather is nice, the event will be held on the grass; and if it is bad, it will be held in the shop.

Cats, dogs, birds, and rodents will vie for awards. Entry fee is a can of cat or dog food.

Registration will be held from 9-10 a.m.

★ 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.: Dog Fest, with hotdogs sold two for $1 by child life center personnel on the campus lawn. Profits will pay for improvements at the child center.

★ 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.: It's a Small World: games in the child life center, including find the bunny, pitch the penny; and instruction on how to juggle and how to be a clown.

Chances will also be sold on a rainbow quilt raffle.

★ 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.: Softball on the campus green. Faculty will take on students and ex-students, and famous Elko celebrities will umpire. Winners will get to throw pies at the losers.

★ 4 p.m.: Sheep auction conducted by the Aggie Club on the campus lawn.

★ 6:45 p.m.: Annual scholarships and awards ceremony in the library, with presentation of department achievement, outstanding student, and outstanding instructor awards.

Presentation will be made of several scholarships, and emeritus faculty will be recognized.

★ 7:30 p.m.: Soprano Susan Frank and tenor John Fay, both of the Reno Opera Co., will perform selections ranging from Broadway to Opera.

The concert will be held in the college library.

★ 8:30-9 p.m.: Reception with birthday cake served in the student lounge.

Also available for inspection during the day will be the college's arboretum, a project spearheaded by Mike Jordan of the Nevada Division of Forestry. The arboretum is part of the college's nature trail, for which construction began last summer.

15th Birthday

Elko Independent May 12, 82 Bash at NNCC

Northern Nevada Community College is planning an all day celebration for its 15th Birthday party, Saturday, May 15th.

Already 13 artists in the community are exhibiting their work in a special art show in the N.N.C.C. Library. This art show displays the talent of such local notables as Sarah Campsey, Ronda Fogo, Dennis Parks, and Gene Meeks Paul, as well as many others. All artists participating in the show are doing so by invitation only, in order to make this "a real quality show," according to John Pryor, art history instructor at N.N.C.C. Many of the pieces exhibited are for sale.

The art show will be open to the public from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. until May 18th.

The official birthday celebration will begin at 10 a.m. on Saturday morning, with the annual ARF Pet Parade. There will be trophies awarded in several categories and a large and colorful variety of favorite pets are expected to compete. Pets are allowed to participate in costume.

At the same time Joymayne the Juggler, also known as the Cosmic Goose, will perform outside the college and will teach bystanders who are interested on the techniques of juggling.

The NNCC Child Development Center will have a Dog Fest most of the day, beginning at 10 a.m. with hotdogs and cold drinks available.

The Child Center will be open to little visitors from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. showing off many activities and the outdoor play yard. Special games are planned and a beautiful hand-made "rainbow" children's quilt will be raffled off.

In what is being billed as the "bloody revenge game of the season," a softball game between faculty members and students will get underway about 2 p.m. The game is being played on campus and Sheriff Jim Miller and local attorney Bill Bilyeu will umpire.

For video game buffs, the NNCC Computer Lab will be open from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. with free games set up on NNCC's selection of minicomputers. Visitors may try their hand at Planetoids, Apple Panic or Falcons during the afternoon. The games can be played free of charge, although a time limit may be set to allow everyone a chance to pit their skills against the Apple computers.

The evening's birthday celebrations begin with the Annual Scholarship and Awards ceremony, during which the prestigious Outstanding Student and Outstanding Instructor, Departmental Achievement awards will be presented, as well as other presentations and recognitions of scholarship winners and Emeritus faculty members.

The awards ceremony will begin at 6:45 p.m. at the NNCC Library.

At 7:30 p.m., two of the most popular performers from this year's musical programs, Susan Frank and John Fay from the Reno Opera Company, will sing musical selections in a program that is billed "from Broadway to Opera."

The final event of the day will be the reception and birthday cake in the Student Lounge at 8:30 p.m.

The organizers and participants in Saturday's NNCC 15th Birthday are anxious to welcome everyone in the community to come and join them for this proud and joyful occasion.

At 3 p.m. the first Aggie Department Sheep Auction will begin, on the campus lawn.

The main purpose of this auction is to allow 4-H and FFA members to purchase lambs for projects or for improving their livestock. According to Louie Horton, director of the Aggie Department, all lambs being auctioned are Suffolks. Included in the auction will be 3 registered yearling ewes, 1 registered ewe with a ram lamb, 1 registered two-year-old ewe with twin lambs, 1 grade ewe with twin wether lambs, 3 wether lambs, 3 grade ewe lambs, and 2 registered ewe lambs. Anyone is welcome to come and bid in the auction.

A.Z. Joy, a sheep specialist from Ely, will grade and inspect all the animals prior to the auction.

It is also worth noting that on Monday, May 17th, NNCC will be holding its 1982 Commencement Exercises for the Class of 1982.

The commencement will be held at the Convention Center at 7 p.m.

The Class of 1982 will honor 63 graduating members with Associate degrees in Liberal Arts, Applied Sciences, General Studies, Certificates of Achievement in Diesel Mechanics and Accounting Technician, as well as Registered Nursing and Licensed Practical Nursing.

The LPN candidates will participate in the commencement exercises, although their program is not completed until late in the summer.

Robert Bersi, the Chancellor of the entire University of Nevada, will be the commencement speaker, and the Elko High School Choraliers and the Community Orchestra will provide musical selections in honor of the occasion.

The valedictorian and the salutatorian for the Class of 1982 will be presented, and awards will be given for Community Service and the first annual Founders Award.

"Grandpa" Friend Smith and teacher Marilee Harper Snyder display rainbow quilt which will be raffled off on Saturday. Little helpers are members of the Tues/Thurs afternoon session at the Child Life Center.

NNCC Dedicates Arboretum & Nature Trail

The Northern Nevada Community College marked Arbor Day last Friday with the dedication of their new arboretum.

The arboretum, part of a nature trail designed by Mike Jordan of the Nevada Division of Forestry, will showcase donated trees and shrubs. Individuals, businesses and clubs are invited to purchase trees for planting in the arboretum. A plaque will accompany each tree to explain who made the donation.

At Friday's opening dedication the first four donated trees were released. The donors included the NNCC Graduating Class of 1982: Lew Caple, McDonalds, and the Elko Kiwanis Club.

Several other trees, priced between $25 and $50, have been purchased and other trees are available.

More housing sought for NNCC students

Affordable housing is being sought for full-time students who are in the process of enrolling for the fall semester at Northern Nevada Community College, according to financial aids director Jim Hadwick.

Finding enough living space for students this year will be exceptionally difficult because of higher enrollment. Hadwick said the nation's economy has been one factor contributing to increased enrollment in NNCC's relatively low tuition programs.

However, the economy has also prevented a private developer from building on-campus student housing which was targeted for completion by this fall.

A student housing project approved by the board of regents would have provided space for approximately 50 students this fall. However, Hadwick said with high interest rates and the slump in the housing industry it has not been economical for the developer to build.

With 50 to 100 students needing places to live in the next few months, residents with moderately-priced rentals are being sought. Available rentals may be filed with the financial aid department. Hadwick said there is no charge for placing rental ads on NNCC's off-campus student housing list.

Housing is critical for the growth of the college, according to Hadwick, and it has become a problem for many students who want to come to NNCC but can't find affordable housing.

"People will be looking all summer," he said.

Houses as well as apartments and rooms are needed for the variety of students and their families who plan to move to Elko this summer.

"Students are looking for apartments that will be available in late July or the month of August," said Hadwick.

Some ranching students are looking for a place to live during the week, and Hadwick said sleeping rooms would accommodate many students.

Renters who desire to support the college and the community are asked to contact Paula Ryan between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. in the financial aids office at NNCC for a free listing.

Listings may be phoned in by calling 738-8493 ext. 202.

NNCC in Winnemucca gets its own building

The Winnemucca branch of Northern Nevada Community College has finally moved into its own building, thanks to Wild West Enterprises.

The former Kaleidoscope building on West Minor Street has been leased by Wild West from T. G. Sheppard for the use of the college, according to Wild West chairman Bob Cashell.

The college offices were formerly located in the basement of the U.S. Post Office.

"As chairman of the university board of regents I saw the need here and I didn't think they could get the funds from the state to fulfill it," Cashell said. "I thought it would be a fine gesture on the part of my company."

According to NNCC spokesman Dr. Charles Greenhaw, the new facility will add more space for Winnemucca operations and also remove some barriers for handicapped people that existed at the former site.

The college will continue to use Humboldt County school facilities for most of the classes, but will conduct telestudies and audio-visual tutorial and other self-paced classes at the new site.

College building new diesel shop building

A new diesel mechanics shop is being built at Northern Nevada Community College, according to Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction.

The steel framework for the shop has been constructed and workers from Jim Wright Construction have been pouring concrete floors for the facility which will be used for the diesel mechanics program taught by Bill "Doc" Howard.

Classes that will be taught in the new building are basic diesel engines, diesel electricity, heavy equipment power transmission, and heavy duty chassis.

Equipment which is now located in the automotive mechanics shop will be moved to the new building upon completion as early as next week, according to Howard.

He said the program will provide a full course in electronics and hydraulics, all types of diesel engines and drive transmissions including "tricks of the trade".

In previous semesters students have built heavy equipment such as trucks and bulldozers as part of the class, according to Howard.

The class has a limit of fifteen students.

Registration for all NNCC classes will be held from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Wednesday and from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Thursday and Friday.

Jim Hadwick, the new director of financial aid and veterans' benefits at N.N.C.C. Jim Hadwick recently moved to Elko from Bemidji, Minnesota.

N.N.C.C.'s New Housing Plans

With the beginning of a new year at Northern Nevada Community College, another scramble for rooms and apartments to house out-of-town students is in the works. This year, there is finally a little hope in sight for the student housing crunch, which has even caused students to be unable to attend the Elko campus.

The Regents of the University of Nevada have offered to lease two acres of land on the campus area, to be developed into student-oriented housing.

Plans are not yet available, but surveyors from the developer, based in the Reno area, are due to stake out the parcel this week so that construction can proceed as rapidly as possible.

Northern Nevada Community

College appears to have its largest Fall enrollment in recent years, reports Dr. Charles Greenhaw.

Although the final headcount on Fall registration will not be completed until the end of the week, over 680 people had registered during the first three days, at the Elko campus, as compared to about 540, at the same time in 1980.

A larger number of area young people have been enrolling in the Community College this year, and Dr. Greenhaw speculated that the increase in tuition and living expenses elsewhere might have resulted in more young people remaining in their home communities.

There has been a slight delay in the opening of the new Diesel Mechanics shop, which is now scheduled for completion this weekend. Due to this delay, students wishing to enroll in the Diesel Mechanics program may do so until after October 9th this year.

The state legislature voted to fund the Diesel program, which had been financed with aid from a federal C.E.T.A. grant, now unavailable.

Dr. Greenhaw noted that with the decline in federal spending, and related cancellations of other sources of funding, the Community College is "in desperate need" of scholarship donations, in order to maintain the quality of educational opportunities available at N.N.C.C.

Anyone interested in contributing any funds toward establishing scholarships is urged to contact Bill Davies or Jim Hadwick, the new director of financial aid and veterans' benefits.

A new effort is being launched through the cooperative efforts of N.N.C.C., the Elko County Library Regional Bookmobile, and the Nevada Department of Education. Operating under the motto that "education succeeds through community involvement," N.N.C.C. will train and support a volunteer tutor from each of several selected rural areas, in a "highly structured tutoring program."

These tutors will return to the rural areas and set up "mini learning centers," to assist residents in obtaining their high school diploma equivalency by passing the General Education Development test (G.E.D.).

Each of the communities selected must be able to provide a volunteer tutor and an alternate, a location for the learning center, and community involvement and support in locating potential students and encouraging them to take advantage of the opportunity.

The project is experimental and only funded for this year. The project co-ordinator is Cyd McMullen Holthoff.

This year N.N.C.C. added a word processing department, with a related set of courses, to its curriculum. Other new programs available at the college include self-paced "ele-studies" in Biology.

Spring semester is historically larger in enrollment than the Fall, so the 1981-1982 year promises to be another achievement for higher education in Elko County.

LEARNING RESOURCES

Northern Nevada Community College dedicated its two classroom buildings, formerly known as the Learning Resources Center and the Vocational Education Building to two former members of the Elko community who symbolized the dedication and hard work which many have given to establish a college with a high reputation in northeast Nevada.

The Learning Resources Center has been named the Hugh McMullen Building and the Vocational Education Building has been named the Mel Lundberg Building.

The ceremony formally naming the buildings and memorializing Hugh McMullen and Mel Lundberg, who both died in 1979, took place in the Community College Library on Sunday, Jan. 17th.

Robert Bersi, the Chancellor of the University of Nevada systems, Dorothy Gallagher, an Elko resident and member of the Board of Regents for the University of Nevada, and Kathy List, standing in for Gov. Robert List, attended the ceremony and made speeches.

Gov. List could not attend, as he was attempting to mediate in a dispute between the Las Vegas city and the Clark County authorities.

Kathy List, who she said was a personal friend of both Hugh and Rae McMullen and Mel and Reva Lundberg, said that "throughout their lifetimes, both Hugh and Mel were fiercely supportive of the Linda Lester with her pet parrot, Ulysses, after the 1981 Animal Relief Foundation Pet Parade.

Saturday, May 15, will be the date of the annual Animal Relief Foundation Pet Parade.

The Pet Parade will take place at NNCC, to participate in celebrating the 15th year birthday of NNCC.

Northern Nevada Community College is located at 582 W. Elm St.

The Pet Parade is being sponsored by the Elko County Farm Supply and Capriola's.

Our judges will be Nancy Hanley, E. Taylor and Dr. A.A. Cuthbertson.

Registration is from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m., and the parade starts at 10 a.m.

ARF members* will have raffle tickets on sale at $1 each or six for $5, which will be used to help us keep our Spay Program going. After the parade we'll have the drawing of which we'll be giving away: First prize — 100 gallons of gasoline, second prize — one spay for one dog or one cat (females only), third prize — dinner for two at Nevada Dinner House.

For those who haven't entered a pet in other pet parades in recent years, pets may be entered in the following categories:

Obedience (trainers 12 years old and under), Obedience (trainers 13 years old and over), Best Groomed (Pure-breds), Best Groomed (Mix Breeds), Best of Tricks (Train-ers 12 years and under).

Best of Tricks (trainers 13 years and over), Kittens (6 months and under), Puppies (6 months and under), Best All Around Color, Best of Small Pets.

Best of Large Pets, Most Unusual Pet, Best of Pure-breds, Best of Dogs (mix breeds), Best of Cats.

Best of Show to be judged from all Superior and Best of Breed winners at end of show.

All children 12 years and under entering a pet must be accompanied by a parent or an adult.

For spaying of female dogs or cats get your applications at veterinarians, Dr. A.A. Cuthbertson, Dr. Bergin in Elko and Dr. S.J. Romeo in Pleasant Valley on Lamoille Highway. ARF pays half the cost and the participant pays half the cost.

ARF is a non-profit organization and all donations will be appreciated. If you cannot come to NNCC to buy raffle tickets or attend our Pet Parade, send donations to Animal Relief Foundation, P.O. Box 1333, Elko, NV 89801.

NNCC birthday party to feature pet parade

E.D.F.P.

Animal Relief Foundation's annual Pet Parade will be held at Northern Nevada Community College Saturday, May 15, as part of the college's day-long 15th-year birthday celebration.

Registration for the parade will be from 9 until 10 a.m., when the parade will start. Nancy Hanley, E. Taylor and Dr. A.A. Cuthbertson will be judges.

Pet Parade categories will include obedience (trainers 12 years old and under), obedience (trainers 13 years old and over), best-groomed purebreds, best-groomed mixed breed, best of tricks with two age categories for trainers, kittens, puppies, best all-around color, best of small pets, best of large pets, most unusual pet, best of purebreds, best mixed-breed dog, best of cats, and best of show, to be judged from all superior and best of breed winners at end of show.

Children 12 years old and under must be accompanied by an adult to enter.

The parade is being sponsored by Elko

County Farm Supply and Capriola's.

To support the group's spay program a give-away will be held, tickets for which will be on sale Saturday at $1 each or six for $5. Prizes include 100 gallons of gasoline, one spay for a dog and one for a cat and a dinner for two (people).

Mrs. Gray points out that ARF is a non-profit organization and all donations to the spay program are appreciated. She suggests those unable to attend the Saturday parade to buy give-away tickets might send donations to ARF, P.O. Box 1333, Elko 89001.

College celebrates birthday tomorrow

E.D.F.P.

Northern Nevada Community College, marking the period of time it has existed in Elko, will hold a 15th anniversary celebration on the campus tomorrow.

Birthday events start with the opening of an invitational art show by local artists in the college library at 9 a.m. Nineteen area artists are represented.

Events at 10 a.m. include "The Cosmic Goose, Joymayne the Juggler" performing on the campus green and giving instruction in juggling; Animal Relief Foundation's Pet Parade (registration is at 9); and the opening of the "Dog Fest," a hot dog stand that will serve party-goers throughout the day.

From 11 until 2 p.m., games and tours in the Child Life Center and play yard; and starting at 2 p.m. softball on the campus green as faculty members meet students and ex-students in a match billed as "bloody revenge." Elko County Sheriff Jim Miller and attorney Bill Bilyeu will umpire.

The "Great Sheep Auction" will start at 3, a project of the Ag Department. Louie Horton advises the sale will be on the college campus and those interested can use their noses and ears to determine the exact location.

Scheduled from 6:45 to 7:30 p.m. is the annual scholarship and awards ceremony in the library. Departmental achievement will be recognized, the outstanding student and instructor honored, and scholarships awarded. Emeritus faculty will be recognized.

Susan Frank, soprano, and John Fay, tenor, both with the Reno Opera Company, will perform in the library from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Ending the day-long celebration will be a reception at 8:30 in the student lounge. Birthday cake will be served.

All events are free and open to the public. College personnel and students have invited the community to participate in all the events.

Theresa Maxwell Wins NNCC Trivia Contest

Two contests sponsored by the Northern Nevada Community College learning resource center have officially ended, and Theresa Maxwell of Wells has been named the winner of the trivia contest, according to Juanita Karr, director of the resource center.

The trivia contest and a "name the face" contest both ended last Friday, but there was no winner in the "name the face" contest, said Karr.

Miss Maxwell, a freshman, was awarded a cassette tape recorder purchased through Fox Foto.

Karr said five entries in the trivia contest answered all of eight questions correctly, but Miss Maxwell was awarded the prize because her paper was dated earlier than the others.

The trivia quiz was unique, explained Mrs. Karr, because it required those who entered to list the reference source if which answers to the question were found.

The "name the face" contest consisted of identifying NNCC art students who made plaster cast masks of their own faces, which were on display at the NNCC library. Mrs. Karr said no one was able to identify all of the students and no prize was awarded.

The contests were open to everyone in the community except resource center staff members, and Mrs. Karr reminded that books and other resource materials at NNCC are also available to the public.

Weekend events slated for Western Festival

5/31/82

A full schedule of races, sales, food booths, and other attractions is slated for this year's Western Festival, which will be held this Friday, Saturday and Sunday at various locations in Elko.

Festival activities begin with a cowpoke breakfast in the main city park from 7 to 10 Friday morning, according to a schedule provided by the Elko Chamber of Commerce.

Sidewalk sales will be held at downtown stores, Skaggs, Elko Shopping Plaza and Rancho Plaza.

Friday's events conclude with a show-down and shootout on Fifth Street by the "Hole in the Mountain Gang." A portion of the street will be closed Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. for the shootout and other festival events.

Saturday festivities also begin with a cowpoke breakfast in the park. Hot air balloon races will begin at 7:30 a.m. at the airport. Balloons are scheduled to land at the fairgrounds, where a parachute jump will also be held. Hot air balloon races continue Saturday night at 7, and again Sunday morning at 7:30.

The high school rodeo begins at 10 a.m. at the Spring Creek Horse Palace, and the final rodeo performance starts at 10 a.m.

Sunday.

Other events scheduled for Saturday include:

10 a.m. — Northern Nevada Community College Jog-a-Thon in the city park; sidewalk sales begin downtown, at Skaggs, and the Elko Shopping Plaza; Western Jamboree including pony rides at Safeway and Skaggs.

11 a.m. — Western Festival parade begins downtown. The parade route begins at Sixth and Commercial Streets, proceeds west to Third Street, north on Third to Idaho Street and continues east on Idaho Street to the Elko Shopping Plaza. Food booths will be set up at the plaza from 11 until 4 p.m.

Noon — Smokey the Bear visits the shopping plaza until 2 p.m.

12:30 p.m. — Indian dancers perform at the shopping plaza. Fifth Street show-down and shootout begins downtown. Shootouts are also scheduled for 2:30 and 4:30 p.m.

1 p.m. — Dog show and fly casting demonstration at the plaza. Free buggy rides will be given at the plaza until 4 p.m. Wheelbarrow race begins downtown.

Elko Chamber of Commerce executive director Nick Halton said those interested in various races and contests may sign up just before the time the contest is held. Prizes will be donated by local merchants, he added.

1:30 p.m. — Cup and saucer race on Fifth Street.

2 p.m. — Lawn mower race on Fifth Street. Watermelon eating contest begins at the shopping plaza, and lasts until 3 p.m.

3 p.m. — Frog jumping contest on Fifth Street. Kids races begin at the shopping plaza.

4 p.m. — Steak dinner barbecue at the city park, lasts until dance begins at 8 p.m. Halton said tickets for the cook-out will be available Saturday at both the plaza and downtown locations.

6:30 p.m. — Cowbelles Chili Feed at the horse palace.

8 p.m. — Outdoor dance at city park. Halton said there is no admission charge for the dance, and music will be performed by A.C.R.B. The dance will close promptly at 11 p.m.

Further information is available at the chamber office, according to Halton.

Elko Daily Free Press Career test at NNCC Thursday

Northern Nevada Community College has scheduled a testing date for the "Career Planning Profile" test, an aid in determining vocational placement.

The test will be held Thursday, July 22, at the Voc-Tech building at NNCC. Testing will begin at 8:30 a.m. and last until about 11:30 a.m.

There is a $5 charge for this test. The profile test is an admission requirement for nursing and business students and should be taken before or during a student's first semester at NNCC. Students in other programs are also welcome to take the test.

Further information about the test is available at the Student Services office.

Maxine Palmer, audio-visual specialist at Northern Nevada Community College, demonstrates equipment used for video-taped classes.

College announces video programs now being offered

Many new video-tape programs have been added at Northern Nevada Community College, announces Juanita Karr, director of the Learning Resources Center.

The video-tape classes are three credit-hour programs designed so students can sign up for time slots and proceed with instruction at their own speed.

Instructors help students work individually on the courses which consist of video-tape programming and supplemental text and guide books.

Mrs. Karr noted some of the programs are produced locally at the college, including half-hour math programs and English courses.

A new biology program produced by Coast Community College in California has been added. New programs in psychology and introduction to business have also been added this year.

Many of the programs appear on national television, including the Cosmos and Ascent of Man series shown by the Public Broadcasting Service.

These are 13 hour programs which can be viewed on the three video-tape machines at the college, but are not compatible with most home video equipment according to Mrs. Karr.

She added the classes provide an excellent opportunity for students to set up their own schedule.

Registration for fall NNCC classes will be held until 5 p.m. today.

N.N.C.C.'s Focus on Achievements

Northern Nevada Community College was in the spotlight on May 15th, during their 15th Birthday celebrations, and again with the graduation of the Class of 1982 at the Convention Center on Monday evening, May 17th.

The 15th Birthday party included a faculty-student "bloody revenge" softball game on Saturday afternoon. The faculty was victorious with a winning score of 18-10. A rematch is currently being planned.

During the evening's more serious events, several awards were presented for outstanding achievement.

Laura Pilotte was named Outstanding Female Student of 1982. She was also awarded an Outstanding Student award in her chosen field, Early Child Development.

Bill Opperman, who served as president of the student body during 1982, was named Outstanding Male Student of 1982. During the Commencement Exercises, Bill Opperman was also given the Hugh McMullen Scholarship for an NNCC student who is going on for a bachelor's degree.

The first CP Telephone Scholarship, which was set up to fund full tuition and books for a graduating senior in the CP Phone service area who plans to attend NNCC was awarded to Kelly Landenberger, a senior at Elko High School.

Other students at NNCC who received awards included: Dan Beeler and Torri Winn;

The Jessie Dewar Art Scholarship.

Outstanding Students Award in Art: Debble Menghini and Donna Murphy.

Outstanding Student in Pioneer Arts and Crafts: Beth Carpel.

Outstanding Students in Auto Mechanics: Paul King and Ken Rizzi.

Outstanding Students in Business Administration: Claire Algerio and Don Paulson.

Outstanding Students in English: Sheila Jansson and Brad Sheltrown.

Outstanding Student in Office Administration: Terri Hand.

Outstanding Student in Science: Phyllis Cash.

During Monday's Commencement Exercises, Claire Algerio was also named the Valedictorian of the Class of 1982. Patti Elletf was named Salutatorian.

This year marked the first presentation of the Founders Award, presented by Bill Wunderlich, a member of the NNCC Advisory Board, to Fred Harris, one of the early pioneers gathering financial aid and community support to found NNCC. "I'm honored to be known for something beyond the old boy that rides Dear Old Girl," Fred Harris said in his acceptance speech. Agnes Norton, a teacher's aide for over a decade in the Developmental Education area, was awarded the Community Service Award, with special appreciation to the R.S.V.P. program for providing her position.

Over 65 students graduated in the Class of 1982, including three students from the Winnemucca branch campus of NNCC.

Robert Bersi, Chancellor of the University of Nevada was the Commencement speaker, and the Commencement Exercises were attended by four members of the Board of Regents, with Bob Cashell, the Chairman of the Board of Regents, presenting the diplomas.

Education in Rural Nevada

Do as the Australians do

Cyd McMullen Holthoff

of their group to a special workshop held at the N.N.C.C. campus in Elko from Oct. 22nd to October 24th.

The workshop is called The Tutoring Process. It will be a 15 hour workshop teaching a particular tutoring method, called the Laubach Literacy International method. After this workshop, all those participating will be certified Laubach instructors.

The Laubach Literacy method has been used all over the world, in 103 different countries, and many different languages.

It has been used to teach people who are totally illiterate, and can be used on adults or children.

The Laubach training method was designed to create tutors out of people in a community who had no previous teaching experience.

The volunteer tutors who will come in from the rural areas to be trained at N.N.C.C. this October need not have more than a high school education, and a willingness to help others in their area to add to their education and experience.

The selected tutors, whose gas and expenses will be paid through the program, will return to their own areas and set up a "mini" learning center in their community.

Teaching materials will be provided by the Community College, as well as a "hot line" phone system to relay questions and problems and ideas back to the center of the network, in Elko. Materials will be shipped by mail, or delivered by the Elko County Bookmobile.

N.N.C.C. will provide counseling, encouragement, and any assistance that is requested by the learning centers, but the direction of the program in each of the learning centers will be determined by the real needs in that particular community.

It is not necessary to have an education that even includes high school, and it is not necessary to speak fluent English in order to participate, providing the selected tutors can communicate with the students.

All that is really necessary is that one person in the area agrees to be trained as a tutor, and that the surrounding community supports the learning center by participating in the program, recruiting local people who might benefit from it, and helping out the tutor with his or her special needs.

The program emphasizes "process over product," according to the director, Cyd McMullen Holthoff, who is based at N.N.C.C. in Elko. It is not necessary to pass the G.E.D. within any set time limit, in order to gain from the rural program.

Cyd McMullen Holthoff was born and raised in Elko County, and feels that this has given her a better understanding of the people and the educational problems in the small rural areas.

She has taught high school junior high school, G.E.D. preparatory programs, an English as a Second Language, before accepting her current position.

She, as well as the other supporting staff at N.N.C.C. and the Nevada Department of Education, are all eager for this program to be successful. They feel that this would open the door to continuing education "at home" in the rural areas, with these mini learning centers some day being able to expand into college courses and other educational opportunities tailored to the special needs of the small communities they would be set up to serve.

The program is available to selected communities over the whole area served by N.N.C.C., which includes White Pine, Eureka, Lander, Humboldt and Elko counties.

In this experimental stage, it is hoped that areas with a range of different needs can be selected, so that it is not all small towns, or all ranching centers, and its success can be measured more accurately.

Administrators of the program would also like to point out that the October workshop, The Tutoring Process, will be of interest to many people in the community, not just the selected tutors, as it is a method which can be well applied to anyone who would like to learn more about teaching basic literacy and other skills. The workshop is open to all, will give one credit, and will charge tuition and materials for all those participating, except for the selected tutors coming in from the future learning centers.

Any individual or community interested in finding out more about this workshop or the educational outreach program is welcome to contact Cyd McMullen Holthoff at Northern Nevada Community College, and helping out the tutor

The winner of the quilt which was made by the ladies of the Elko Senior Citizens Center was Dr. William Berg, president of Northern Nevada Community College.

He remarked, "I've never won anything before in my life".

A drawing for the quilt made by the senior citizens was held in City Manager Barry L. Thompson's office last Tuesday.

Present at the drawing with Thompson were Assistant City Manager Terry Reynolds, senior citizens' representative Harry Fuller, and Sherry Smith, secretary, who drew the winning ticket.

What might Australia have in common with the northern Nevada area? Not kangaroos or koala bears.

One of the similarities that has been receiving special attention lately is that both areas have a widely scattered population with very few towns.

In order for an adult to continue his or her education from the "outback," it is necessary to commute long distances, and often find another place to live close to an education facility, which is often not possible to do, because, for one reason or another, an adult is usually needed at home.

The Nevada Department of Education has decided to import an education method from Australia, fund it on an experimental basis through our Northern Nevada Community College, and watch for a year or two to see if it would be useful here.

The goals of the project are to select five to seven areas which do not have any access to an adult high school equivalency program without long distance travel.

The main criterion for being chosen for the program is that there is an interest in that area, from the population 17 years old and older, in participating in an adult high school course, working towards taking the high school diploma equivalency exam, called the G.E.D. (General Educational Development) test, and passing it to become a high school graduate.

Each of the seven selected small communities or ranching areas would send one member elko Free Press 11/23/81 NNCC president speaks to Rotary

Northern Nevada Community College President William J. Berg Wednesday told the Elko Rotary Club of the college's progress in the last eight years and its goals for the future.

In his speech before the club, Berg cited statistics illustrating the college's growth: in the fall of 1973, 462 students were enrolled at NNCC; eight years later, in the spring of 1981, the enrollment was 1,474 students.

The junior college, Berg said, now also serves all communities (except Austin) in the five northeastern Nevada counties: Humboldt, Eureka, Lander, White Pine and Elko counties.

Berg said two major facilities have been added to the campus: an agricultural farm lab and a diesel instruction facility. He described college's diesel instruction program as being "unique."

NNCC is the only college in the state that offers formal diesel training. He added that the college also offers a nursing program.

Berg described some of the college's goals. One of them is to convince local high school graduates that NNCC is the place to go.

Berg pointed out many high school graduates are just not ready to go onto college or directly to the work-a-day world.

Their best bet, he feels, is attend their first years of college right here. He said attending a junior college is much less expensive and less academically crushing than four-year universities.

Berg also said the college is looking into providing on-campus housing for students. He said there is a good possibility it will have housing for about 50 students constructed on the campus by next fall.

Berg said a foundation will soon be organized for the college. The board of regents have already approved the plan to start the foundation, which will enable the college to solicit private funds. An organizational meeting on that matter is slated for Dec. 14 at the college.

Berg also thanked the Rotary Club for the $500 scholarship it provides each year for second-year NNCC students.

NNCC Foundation to promote college

Northern Nevada Community College Foundation was incorporated Monday to support and promote the local college.

According to the foundation's articles of incorporation, the organization will "receive, maintain and administer" donations.

The purpose of the foundation, according to NNCC Dean of Instruction Charles Greenhaw, is to raise money for development that is not received through state appropriations. These include scholarships, equipment renewal and funding for the student center, he said.

The foundation will also solicit and manage gifts, grants, bequests and devises given to the college. Plans also call for the financing of professorships, graduate fellowships, conferences and institutes.

Greenhaw said until recently, the Fleischmann Foundation had been generously donating funds to NNCC programs such as scholarships and the college library. But that foundation recently went out of business.

Greenhaw said this, along with the slowing down of formerly free-flowing federal funds, has resulted in what he called a "bull market in foundations" for community colleges throughout the country. He said all other University of Nevada colleges are now setting up foundations as a way to make up for the federal fund tightening.

NNCC executive committee members are: Byron Bilyeu, chairman; Robert McBride, vice chairman; William Berg, secretary and Burgess Harmer of Jackpot, treasurer.

The foundation's committee chairmans are: Max Blackham of McGill, nominating committee; Warren Scott of Winnemucca, finance committee; Paul Sawyer, development committee.

Greenhaw said that many of the foundation members were involved in establishing the college, which will celebrate its 15th birthday next month.

Northern Nevada Community College lost a great friend in the Fleischmann Foundation, which had provided generous endowments for its growth, as well as $5000 worth of scholarships annually for students going into occupational fields.

To replace the funds which were lost when the Fleischmann Foundation finally expired last year, the Regents of the University of Nevada proposed that the community colleges look into founding something similar of their own: a trust fund which would be suitable for donations and bequests to the college.

Monday, Dec. 14th, was the first meeting of the Board of Directors of the Northern Nevada Community College Foundation, and Dr. Robert Bersi, Chancellor of the University of Nevada systems, attended the day-long session.

The Board is made up of members who were invited to participate over the past several months, and who are thought to be representatives of the type of individuals and groups who would most likely act in an advisory capacity for financial directions and fund-raising for this new Foundation.

The group is made up of members of the five county area which N.N.C.C. serves.

This first meeting was primarily to educate the new Board about the functions, as well as the strengths and weaknesses of N.N.C.C., and to organize some directions toward "what is important, what we should be doing and how much we want to raise."

The group also heard discussions on the nature and legal aspects to the N.N.C.C. Foundation, and then organized committees and elected committee chairmen and officers.

Foundation chairman for this first year is Bill Bilyeu, and Elko attorney, Vice-chairman is Rob McBride; with Bill Berg, the president of N.N.C.C., as secretary; and Burgess Harmer appointed treasurer.

Bill Bilyeu is also chairman of the Executive Committee; Finance Committee chairman is Warren Scott, of Winnemucca; chairman of the Development Committee is Paul Sawyer; and Max Blackham, of McGill, was elected chairman of the Nominating Committee.

Following the election of committee chairman, members of the Board were asked to join a committee of their choice, or express a preference for the role they would like to play in serving the N.N.C.C. Foundation, and then the committees broke for brief organizational meetings.

The most pressing needs at N.N.C.C. at present included a Student Center, housing, and an increased number of scholarships.

The next meeting of the N.N.C.C. Foundation will be in the spring, although separate committees may be meeting in the interim if they see a need to.

Bill Berg commented that he was very satisfied with this initial meeting, and was honored by the enthusiasm expressed by the new Board.

"They act as though it was a privilege to be invited to serve. We feel that it is a privilege to have their support," he said.

Workers digging a trench for the foundation of the new addition to the Civic Auditorium recently discovered some human bones.

The bones were uncovered on the morning of November 20th and the Deputy Coroner, Bill Webb, was immediately notified.

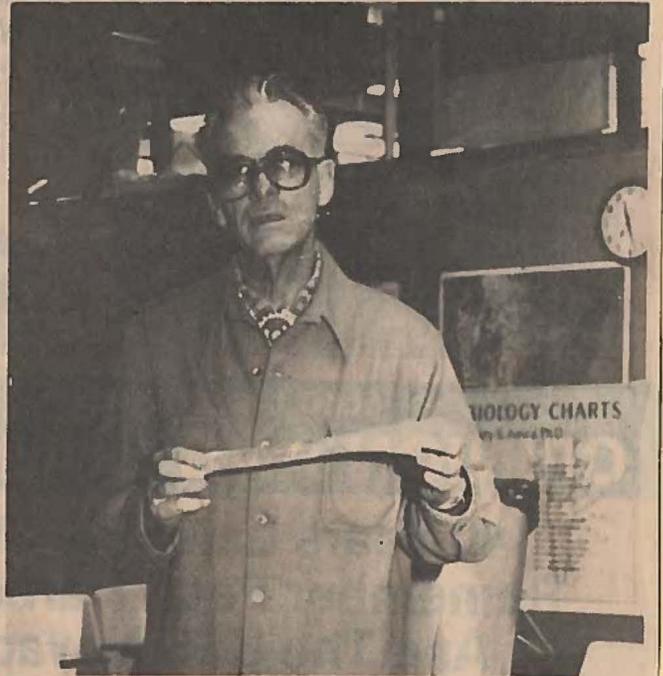

After Webb arrived at the scene, the bones were removed from the trench and Dr. Manilla, forensic medicine expert, was called into the investigation.

It was determined that the bones were quite old for this area, and they were taken to the Community College where Dr. Shelley Hanna, a professor of Anthropology, and Dr. Dave Emerson, professor of Anatomy, assembled the bones in the Biology Laboratory.

The bones appear to be the right side of a man, probably in his thirties, approximately 5ft. 8in. tall, and approximately 100 years dead.

Although the top of the skull was found, no teeth were found to aid in more positive dating, and most of the left side is missing.

The most interesting aspect of the bones was the evidence of charring on both the

NNNC holds session on future of region

Elko Free Press 1/17/82

The future of northeastern Nevada — and the community college's role in it — was discussed Thursday at a seminar sponsored by Northern Nevada Community College.

College dean Stan Aiuzzi explained the session was held during the break between the fall and spring semesters and was designed to help make college staff members more aware of the five counties they serve.

The Rev. LaVern Inzer of Carlin was the first speaker, and his topic was "Perceptions of Northeastern Nevada."

Inzer, a Nevada resident since 1959, said the Nevadans he has met in the northeastern part of the state are "fiercely independent. They may welcome you as a visitor, but they don't want you telling them how to run their business."

He said many involved in agriculture don't trust the federal government, especially the Bureau of Land Management. He said he has been told the BLM failed to honor written grazing agreements with the ranchers, and "I cannot defend my government in this thing."

Nevada's prospectors, he said, can be said to have as their motto a verse from the Bible: "It is better to put your confidence in God than to put your confidence in people."

Inzer said many of the Mexican people who have come to this area "are not illiterate people. They were educated in Spanish."

Inzer said much could be learned by college staff members "willing to listen" to the residents of northeastern Nevada.

The second part of the program was a review of the people and economy of northeastern Nevada as seen by chambers of commerce.

Several of the scheduled speakers were not able to attend because of the cold weather. Not attending were John Buchan of Humboldt County, Pat Landon of Eureka County, and Betty Whitehurst of White Pine County.

Following is a summary of remarks by Nick Halton of Elko, David Lindsey of Battle Mountain and Roy Smith of the Elko County School District.

Education for Teachers from N.N.C.C.

Teacher education continues in Elko this spring through University of Nevada-Reno classes.

A special project workshop in Curriculum and Instruction, "Motivational Activities for Language Arts and Reading" (CI 483/683 S915), is offered on Friday, Jan. 15, from 4 to 10 p.m., and Saturday, Jan. 16, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., at Elko Junior High School.

Professor Teddy Tower, director of the department of Curriculum and Instruction at UNR's College of Education, will instruct the one-credit course. Dr. Tower will focus on educational programs and practices in language arts and readings including developing library skills, conducting research work, "publishing," student work, connecting reading to writing, and discussing oral history projects.

"Twentieth Century American West" (HIST. 410/610 S915) is offered on Mondays, Jan. 18-May 10, at the Northern Nevada Community College at Elko; times will be announced.

This three-credit course will be instructed by Dr. Owen

Ulph, history professor at the university. The course will focus on political, economic, and social problems growing out of the 20th century west. Emphasis will be placed on the West's integration into the nation's industrial and urban life, and its interaction with the federal government.

A third class, "Children in Families in a Multi-Ethnic Society" (H. Ec. 438/638 S915), will study life styles, values, and needs of children and their families from diverse ethnic groups. This course satisfies Nevada's teacher recertification requirement for multi-ethnic studies.

Instructor Sally Kees, State Extension Specialist, will teach the one-credit course on Friday, Feb. 26, from 4 to 10 p.m., and Saturday, Feb. 27, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., at Elko Junior High School.

Each class costs $28 per credit. To register or for further information call Paul Billings, UNR's Elko Community Coordinator at 738-5196, or contact the Regional Programs Office at UNR's Division of Continuing Education, at 784-4633.

Sarah Campsey, head of the Art Department at Northern Nevada Community College, was injured in a fall on the ice in Reno on Jan. 9th.

She was initially hospitalized at St. Mary's Hospital in Reno with a severely fractured right leg and was operated on at Washoe Medical Center on Jan. 12th.

A steel plate was attached to her leg during surgery.

She is currently still hospitalized at Washoe Medical Center but hopes to be released shortly.

She has been ordered to stay off her leg for the next six weeks and hopes to continue to teach her classes using a wheelchair.

In the meantime, Elko artists Rhonda Fogo and Gene Meeks Paul are teaching her classes for her at N.N.C.C.

"I've been looking for an excuse to take things easy and relax. Now I guess I've found it," Sarah Campsey said.

She reports that she has been catching up on reading and doing some cartooning during her hospital stay and that she has been able to remain in generally good spirits despite quite a bit of pain.

We wish her a speedy recovery and a safe return home.

NNCC Professor Evaluates Snow College

Dr. James Bemis, the Executive Director of the Northwest Association of Schools and Colleges, announced that Professor Paul S. Hanna of NNCC has been selected as a member of an accreditation committee to visit Snow College, Ephraim, Utah.

The accreditation visit will take place April 12-15.

This is Dr. Hanna's second accreditation visit. In the past he has also visited Treasure Valley College in Oregon for the Northwest Association.

Jewell Hanna Recovers from Skiing Accident

Mrs. Jewell Hanna, a part-time Psychology instructor at Northern Nevada Community College, fractured her right leg in two places following a fall while skiing in Thomas Canyon on Saturday, March 13th.

"As I fell, I could hear something snap, and I knew that my leg was broken," she said.

Jewell Hanna was skiing with other members of NNCC's Cross-Country Skiing class, and so was fortunate to receive immediate attention.

Greg Lawrence, the class instructor, was able to alert the Ruby Mountain Helicopter, which air-lifted her down to an ambulance within a half hour of the accident. The Elko Ambulance Service volunteers transported Jewell Hanna from Lamoille Canyon to Elko General Hospital's Emergency Room, where it was discovered that she had fractured her femur above the knee and shattered the top of her tibia immediately below her right knee.

Local orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Charles Ellis, and a surgery team who volunteered to assist in the surgery on Sunday performed four hours of surgery on her right leg and were able, with the aid of steel plates and 20 screws, to avoid the lengthy procedure of traction and casts. "Under the circumstances, I feel really lucky that this accident happened here."

Arboretum dedication

An arboretum will be dedicated at 2 p.m. Friday at Northern Nevada Community College, according to Louis Horton.

The arboretum — where trees and shrubs are displayed — is part of a nature trail designed by Mike Jordan of the Nevada Division of Forestry, Horton added.

Three trees will be dedicated in Friday's ceremony, said Horton, who heads the college's agriculture department.

Individuals, clubs, or businesses may purchase a tree in the arboretum, said Horton. A plaque will be placed next to each tree, explaining who donated the tree.

Several trees — priced between $25 and $50 — have already been purchased, but more are available.

He said the public is invited to participate in Friday afternoon's ceremony.

Lundberg's moves art festival to convention center on April 24

The site of Lundberg's Spring Art Festival has been changed to the Elko Convention Center because of "unforeseen circumstances," according to Lundberg's manager Hank James.

The festival will be held from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, April 24.

It had originally been scheduled for the Stockmen's Motor Hotel, but circumstances caused the transfer to the convention center, said James.

He noted the new site is much larger than the original one and will be able to accommodate many more participants.

Five local artists will demonstrate in oils, acrylics, water colors, charcoal, and pastel pencils.

A $15 fee includes a buffet lunch and a choice of up to five one-hour demonstrations. Those registering will be given tickets for admission to the sessions they wish to attend.

James said he would mail tickets to those not able to pick them up at the store.

Artists from all age levels and all ability levels are encouraged to attend, said James.

James is encouraging pre-registration by this Thursday. An advertisement containing a registration form appears on Page 9 of today's Elko Daily Free Press.

Registration may also be completed by stopping by Lundberg's at 369 Fifth St. He added that Lundberg's hopes to make the Spring Art Festival an annual event.

Artists who will be demonstrating on April 24 are:

- Mildred Byers, who will demonstrate the "Oil B" classes.

- Jean Meeks Paul, who will demonstrate the "Oil A" classes.

- Medard Loboeki, who will demonstrate acrylic painting.

- Lowell Swendseid, who will demonstrate water color painting.

- Sarah Campsey, who will demonstrate pastel pencils and charcoal.

In addition to the art demonstrations, there will also be displays of a new line of art supplies, said James.

University vice chancellor tours NNCC, meets staff

Warren Fox, vice chancellor for academic affairs for the University of Nevada system, toured Northern Nevada Community College yesterday and met with faculty and staff.

Fox explained he was appointed vice chancellor in March and made the trip to Elko to acquaint himself with the campus and the personnel.

"I wanted to become more familiar with the programs and the people in the area we serve," he said.

As vice chancellor, he is responsible for supporting and helping to coordinate the university system's academic program.

The community college system is part of the university.

Fox said he also discussed a university system proposal to the federal government which would call for federal funds to help a transfer program for community college students getting technical or academic training.

He said a total of 2,000 proposals were originally submitted to the federal government, and the Nevada proposal is in the final 200 being considered.

The vice chancellor added he also met with Regent Dorothy Gallagher of Elko and with Bill Bilyeu, chairman of the community college's foundation.

Jim Hadwick, director of financial aid at NNCC, with Leah Hartung, Mike Keibler, Kelly Landenberger, Mike Smales, and Manuel Tjoa.

Northern Nevada Community College Scholarship and Awards Committee has announced their 1982-83 scholarships to be awarded to 1982 graduating seniors at Elko High School.

Leah Hartung, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hartung, will be the recipient of the Mel Lundberg Memorial Scholarship.

Michael Keibler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Martindale, has been named to receive the Elko Lions Club Scholarship.

Kelly Landenberger, daughter of James Landenberger and Mrs. Heather O'Connell Landenberger, has been selected to receive the CP National Scholarship.

Mike Smales, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.G. Smales, will be this year's Elko Rotary Club Scholarship recipient.

Manuel Tjoa, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eng Liang Tjoa, was selected to receive an NNCC Tuition Grant in Aid.

The students' scholarships are for study during 1982-83 academic year on the NNCC campus where they plan to enroll next year.

NNCC giant fund-raising event scheduled Sept. 25

Preparations are under way for Northern Nevada Community College's fall "Great Northern Nevada Flea Market, Auction, Swap Meet, and Yard Sale," reports dean of instruction Charles Greenhaw.

The giant sale will be held Saturday, Sept. 25, at the NNCC parking lot and Greenhaw said students, staff, and friends of NNCC are being asked to donate items for sale. Profits will be used to help fund construction of a proposed student center.

At last fall's giant sale, Greenhaw said more than 1,500 people purchased items from either NNCC or from vendors who rented spaces at the sale.

The proposed student center will be a multi-use building with recreational and physical fitness facilities. It will not be a gym, according to Greenhaw. He said NNCC has no facilities for athletic activities.

Greenhaw said the NNCC staff and administration believe the student center is essential to the further development of the college, as NNCC is attracting more and more young people from area high schools.

So far, the college has raised approximately $10,000 for the center through last fall's sale and from donations made by Elko area businesses, ranches, and mining companies. Greenhaw noted NNCC must develop the student center entirely with the use of private funds.

Donations will be accepted beginning Monday at the adult education room located in McMullen Hall, and NNCC staff will pick up large items on request. For pickup, call Alice Horton, 738-6493.

Persons wishing to rent spaces in the college parking lot at a cost of $10 may make reservations with Louis Horton by calling the same number.

The NNCC Aggie Club has scheduled a pie-baking contest to be held during the event. Pies must be entered by 8 a.m. in Room 1B in Lundberg Hall, and judging will take place between 8 and 9 a.m.

Practical nursing students will have a beverage booth at the sale, and coffee and hot chocolate will be served to shoppers who arrive early. Hot dogs and soft drinks will be served later in the day.

The Elko Special Olympics athletes and friends will sell popcorn, Special Olympics Frisbees, peanuts, and Kenny Rogers T-shirts. Proceeds will aid in the purchase of uniforms for the athletes, who participate in area games and national competitions.

Registered nursing students will sell fresh, hot scones.

Associated students of NNCC will offer hot tamales and taco salad.

A variety of gift baskets filled with treasures will be available inside the child center playground and a children's book exchange will be arranged, according to Greenhaw.

NNCC Yard Sale said successful despite rain

Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction at Northern Nevada Community College, reported Saturday's "Great Flea Market and Yard Sale" at the college was a great success, despite threatening weather.

Greenhaw estimated that more than 1,000 Elko area residents turned out for the event, and approximately $3,500 was raised for the NNCC Foundation. He pointed out the Foundation is working to collect money for a proposed NNCC student center and for scholarships at the institution.

He reported the threat of showers caused some hesitancy on the part of persons and groups intending to sell items from rented stall spaces at the college sale, and as a result there were only about 25 stalls instead of the anticipated 50. But the weather didn't seem to bother the many area residents who kept a steady stream of customers in attendance at the sale through most of the day, Greenhaw said.

He commented, "Everyone seemed to have a good time"; and he pledged to put the event on the college calendar for next fall.

Heavy rainfall here Friday evening and into the night caused some concern for promoters of the yard sale, and the decision to go ahead with the event was not made until about 8 o'clock Saturday morning. The weather turned out to be generally cooperative, with only a few sprinkles experienced during the day until late afternoon.

NNCC Sale Results

Saturday's yard sale and other events at Northern Nevada Community College raised between $3,500 and $4,000, according to NNCC Dean Charles Greenhaw.

Greenhaw said a final accounting is not yet complete because several IOUs must still be collected.

"It appears the total will be between $3,500 and $4,000," Greenhaw said this morning.

The yard sale consisted of items donated to the college, explained Greenhaw. Some larger items, including large kitchen appliances and antique farming implements, were auctioned by Bill Thacker of Owyhee, who donated his time.

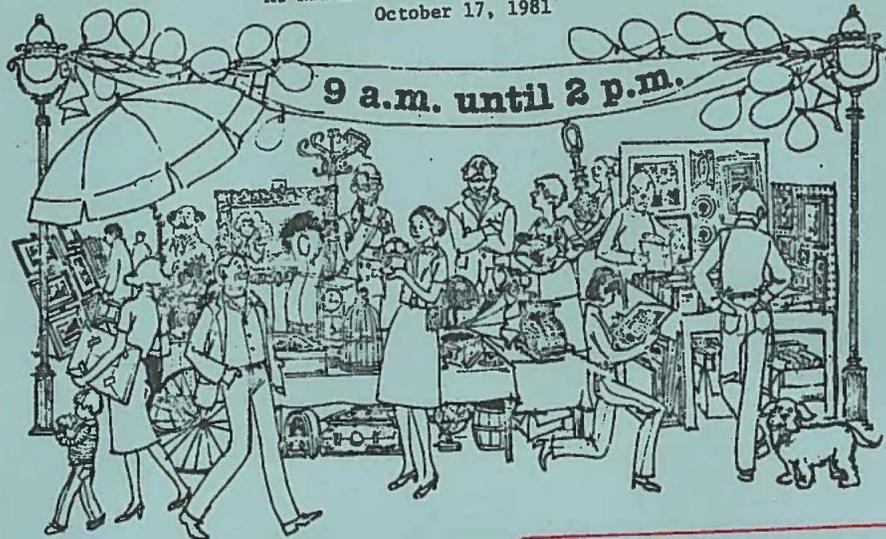

In addition, parking stalls were rented to those participating in a flea market.

The college's Aggie Club sold chili and baked goods.

Funds raised from Saturday's event will go to the development fund for special projects at the college, explained Greenhaw.

NNCC graduation honors accorded Algerio, Ellett

Claire Algerio was designated valedictorian of the 1982 graduating class during Northern Nevada Community College commencement exercises held last night at the civic auditorium.

Patricia Ellett, who was not present at the ceremony, was named salutatorian.

The Hugh McMullen scholarship award, for a student planning to continue his education, went to William Opperman Jr. Opperman plans to work toward a bachelor's degree at Oregon State University.

John Pryor of the college faculty presented funds collected by the college for the NNCC Foundation to Bill Bilyeu, foundation chairman, and Paul Sawyer of the development committee. NNCC Dean of Instruction Charles Greenhaw explains the purpose of the foundation is to raise and administer money for development that cannot come through state appropriations. Items included, he said, would be scholarships, equipment renewal and funding for the student center.

Agnes Glennon was honored with a Community Service Award presented by Greenhaw. She is sponsored by the Retired Seniors Volunteer Program and Greenhaw commented in presenting the award, "She is a volunteer who can be counted on day after day, month after month and year after year." She has worked helping in basic skills and life-coping skills with persons in the vocational training program, Greenhaw said.

Music for the ceremony was by the Elko Community Orchestra and the Elko High School Chorale. Following the graduation a reception for students and guests was held in the reception area of the convention center.

A truck donated by the county was rebuilt as part of the diesel mechanics program headed by Bill (Doc) Howard.

NNCC in need of various used items

Northern Nevada Community College accepts the donation of used items as well as cash donations, reminds John Pryor, director of business. Though cash is always one of the most pressing needs, many types of used equipment can be put to use by the college, he noted. Many previously donated items appear on this page. Used equipment such as working typewriters, calculators, copy machines, and computers are greatly needed at NNCC. Major items such as farms, houses, automobiles, livestock, can all be put to use in the various courses of instruction. He added cash donations are always welcome, and many items have been purchased through generous donations from individuals as well as private foundations. Major cash contributions received since the college was formed include $800,000 from the Fleischmann Foundation, $125,000 from the Hughes Foundation, and $10,000 from the Knights of Pythias. Pryor added all contributions, regardless of value, are fully tax deductible.

CP Phone Donates $1400 Scholarship for 1982 N.N.C.C. Student

Elko Independent 2/17/82

Northern Nevada Community College will be able to offer a brand new scholarship next fall for a first-year student, thanks to C-P National Telephone.

The new scholarship, donated by C-P Telephone, will be for a total of $1400, with $350 being awarded each semester for two years' attendance at the community college.

Applicants for this new scholarship are currently being sought, according to N.N.C.C.'s Financial Services Director Jim Hadwick.

Applicants must be living within the service area of C-P Telephone, which would include 1982 graduates of Elko, Wells, and Carlin high schools, as well as members of the communities served by the phone company, who would be entering N.N.C.C. in the fall of 1982 as a freshman.

The applicants will be chosen on the basis of financial need.

The financial advisors at N.N.C.C. will review the applications, and refer the top few applicants to a special committee made up of Ken Holt, the director of the Elko service area for C-P Telephone; Cindy Rider, the District Administrator for C-P Telephone; two members of the staff of N.N.C.C.; and one member of the community.

The deadline for filing for the new scholarship is April 10th, and the decision on this year's scholarship winner will be announced some time prior to the N.N.C.C. spring graduation, according to Jim Hadwick.

Anyone who feels they might like to apply for this scholarship or who is interested in more information is welcome to contact Jim Hadwick at Northern Nevada Community College. 738-8493.

NNCC tree donations

Three trees were donated last week to Northern Nevada Community College by the Elko Kiwanis Club and McDonald's of Elko.

Louis Horton, head of the college's agriculture department, said the arboretum will serve as an "educational tool" for people interested in learning about local trees and plants. He said the project came about because "school teachers wanted someone to show their students the native trees and plants."

The Kiwanis and McDonald's each donated a tree to the project last week. Another tree was donated by Lewis Caple, who is the Elko Kiwanis lieutenant governor.

Horton noted that the arboretum will be open to the public during NNCC's birthday celebration this Saturday.

C P Telephone offers NNCC scholarship ^{Feb. 22} 1982

Northern Nevada Community College will offer a new scholarship this fall sponsored by CP National Telephone Co., according to Jim Hadwick, director of financial aid at NNCC.

CP Telephone is offering a $1,400 scholarship to help support a local high school senior's pursuit of a higher education. The scholarship will provide $350 per semester over a two-year period, he explained.

The recipient must live within CP Telephone's service area, which covers most of Elko County with the exception of Jackpot, Owyhee, and Mountain City.

Cindy Rider of CP Telephone said "the scholarship is designed for the student who demonstrates a financial need through the application process."

Applications may be picked up at Elko, Wells, or Carlin High Schools, said Hadwick. They must be mailed to the financial aid office at NNCC by April 10, he added.

The recipient may enroll in any educational program at NNCC, and must maintain a 2.5 grade point average and remain a full-time student for the two-year period.

A committee composed of two CP Telephone representatives, two NNCC representatives, and a member of the community will conduct personal interviews of potential recipients after applications have been screened.

Hadwick said the scholarship will be awarded prior to spring graduation.

Questions about the scholarship should be directed to Hadwick at NNCC.

NNCC scholarship, award winners named Saturday

Kelly Landenberger of Elko won the $1,400 CP National scholarship awarded Saturday night during Northern Nevada Community College's 15th birthday celebration.

Jim Hadwick of NNCC's financial aid department explained the CP Scholarship was offered for the first time this year and will provide $350 per semester for four semesters to Landenberger.

The award required the recipient to be a graduating high school senior within the CP service area, which includes most of Elko County.

Hadwick said the scholarship was established after Ken Holt, Nevada manager of CP National, gained permission from CP's parent company in California. Hadwick also praised Cindy Rider, CP district administrator of public relations, who, he explained, worked closely with him to set up the program.

Mike Smales of Elko was named runner-up for the scholarship.

The Jessie Dewar Art Scholarship was given to NNCC students Torri Winn, an EHS graduate, and Dan Deeler of Sacramento. The two students will receive $600 per year each for two years.

Hadwick explained Dewar, a well known Elko County artist, left $40,000 to the University of Nevada regents with instructions that the interest be divided equally and given to the most deserving art students of NNCC and the University of Nevada Reno.

Bill Opperman and Laura Pilotte were named the outstanding students at NNCC during the 1981-1982 school year.

Pilotte graduated from NNCC with an applied science, associate degree in early childhood education; while Opperman graduated with an associate in arts degree.

Students awarded outstanding performance certificates from the various departments were: Art, Dawna Murphy, Debbie Meghini, Beth Carpel and Ken Rizzi; science, Phyllis Cash; English, Brad Sheltroun and Sheila Jansson; business administration, Don Paulson and Claire Algerio (also named 1982 Vaedictorian during graduation ceremonies Monday night); automotive, Paul King; early childhood development, Laura Pilotte; and office administration, Terri Hand.

Hadwick added that another feature of the college birthday party included a faculty-student softball game, which the faculty won 18-10.

He said Charles Greenhaw, NNCC dean of education, pitched a six-hitter and NNCC President Bill Berg "played a mean first base." He also offered to give the students a second chance when they recovered from the defeat.

Louie Horton of the college Ag Department reports a good response to the department's "Great Sheep Sale" Saturday afternoon with buyers from all over Elko County.

Buyers and the clubs they represent: Pam and Dina Aiazzi, Lissa Marion and Tomas Reese, all of Elko Valley 4-H; Christy Burner, Elko Big "E" 4-H; Bart and Pam Bottari, Lamolle 4-H; Jennifer DeVries, Halleck 4-H; and Alana Sharp, Ruby Valley 4-H.

Horton said his department will be looking to see how these sheep do at the Elko County Fair this fall. "The sales committee wishes them all the best of luck."

Karen Martin of the Child Life Center estimated about 500 persons visited activities in that area of the campus during the birthday celebration.

Child Life activities included the sale of hot dogs in the gazebo, movies, slide shows of classroom activities, game tables for children, easels set up outside for outdoor painting, and play with live bunnies.

The winning ticket on the rainbow quilt, made by Martin and Marilee Snyder as a fund-raiser for the center, was drawn by Nicole Nutting and won by Mrs. W.S. Junk of Lamolle, grandmother of one of the center students. Martin said the "Catch a Rainbow" project raised $550.

Elko Daily Free Press 9-4-82 Lotspeich, Squires win scholarships

By Dick Snyder

Virginia Lotspeich and Elizabeth Squires, both enrolled in the registered nursing program at Northern Nevada Community College, were each awarded a $600 nursing scholarship by the Elko General Hospital Board of Trustees during a special board meeting.

Five students applied for the scholarships by submitting essays on why they are choosing the nursing profession. Trustees selected the winners after reading the unidentified essays, noted administrator Bill Welch.

Trustees also reviewed the hospital's financial report for July, which shows an operating surplus of $44,852. Welch noted the collection rate for debts dropped during the month, due in part to the hospital's computer being down for two weeks.

Welch said the collections should start improving. Ted McPhee, a certified public accountant, reviewed the billing procedure at Welch's request and will submit his views and recommendations, said the administrator.

In addition, hospital staff members attended a workshop on collections, and a meeting is planned with the district attorney's office for increased enforcement of existing judgments, said Welch.

He added that collections from insurance companies have generally been current. He noted that room occupancy has been increasing recently.

In other business, the trustees:

— Approved staff privileges for Ronald H. Crouch, M.D., a urologist from Ely; and for Sebern J. Smith, M.D., a family practitioner from Wells.

— Agreed that the purpose of the tri-county (Elko, Humboldt and Lander) hospital association needs to be reviewed.

— Learned the hospital staff, including nurses, will be dressed in western apparel on Friday, the first day of the Elko County Fair.

— Learned Welch and others have been investigating CAT Scan units made by different manufacturers. The studies are being made for the possible purchase of the sophisticated X-Ray equipment by EGH.

EDFP NOV 15, 1982 Scholarships awarded to students at NNCC

Scholarships were awarded to several Northern Nevada Community College students last week — four students received accounting scholarships from the local chapter of the Nevada Society of Certified Public Accountants, and four other students received delayed scholarships from Lundberg's and the Knights of Pythias.

Financial aids director Jim Hadwick said several state grant-in-aid scholarships were also presented to NNCC students.

Recipients of $200 accounting and business scholarships provided by the Northeastern Nevada CPA chapter were sophomore Monica Pangborn of Elko, a business administration major; Catherine Collett, and accounting technician major in her first year at NNCC; Joel Sherbondy, a freshman business administration major from Wells; and Carol Gee, a freshman in accounting who graduated from high school in Galeton, Penn.

Hadwick explained the Lundberg's and Knights of Pythias scholarships were awarded earlier this year but the recipients did not enroll at NNCC, therefore new recipients were chosen last Wednesday by the NNCC scholarship committee.

Hadwick said $300 Lundberg's scholarships were awarded to Tom Turner Jr. and Everett Hamlin, both of Owyhee.

Scholarships of $250 provided by the local chapter of Knights of Pythias were awarded to Virginia Lotspeich, a sophomore in the nursing program and a 1979 graduate of Wells High School; and to Christopher Trease, a 1982 Elko High School graduate who is majoring in computer science.

Hadwick said the normal application period for scholarship eligibility is in the spring, and awards are made for the following fall semester. He said students should begin applying in March for next year's scholarship offerings.

Elko woman seeks education board seat

Elko — Carley Sullivan, a 28-year resident of Elko, announced this week she will file for the State Board of Education. District 3 seat being vacated by long-time board member William Orr of Pioche.

The seat represents Elko, Humboldt, Lander, Churchill, White Pine, Eureka, Nye, Mineral, Esmeralda, Lincoln and Pershing Counties and the northern tip of Washoe County-Gerlach and Wadsworth.

"I have decided to seek election to this position at the urging of friends and people with whom I have worked at the state and local level for many years — who know my priorities and interests as they concern education," she said.

Honorary chairmen for the campaign will be State Senator Norman Glaser,

Carley Sullivan

Northern Nevada Community College President Dr. Bill Berg, University of Nevada Regent from this district Dorothy Gallagher, Elko County and Nevada Historian and noted author Edna Patterson and former State Senator Warren L. "Snowy" Monroe — all of Elko.

Other education and community leaders from town in District 3 will be appointed and announced soon.

Sullivan is a 20-year civic and political leader at the local and state level with many organizations; was a 14-year board member and state president two years of the Nevada parent teacher association, Nevada's largest volunteer organization dedicated to the welfare of children and youth; has served on youth, health, safety, education, and juvenile concerns boards for three Nevada governors — Sawyer, Laxalt and O'Callaghan, and has represented Nevada at several national conferences concerned with these interest areas.

She served on the eight-state project, "Designing Education for the Future." and received a commendation for the work from the State Department of Education.

She is vice president of the American Lung Association of Nevada and the legislative chairman for the Nevada Federation of Business and Professional Women.

"Our four grown children have been the beneficiaries of Nevada's educational system, kindergarten through college. Three daughters are honor graduates of Elko High School and the University of Nevada in Reno and a son also is an Elko High School graduate and attended Northern Nevada Community College. All live and work in Nevada," she added.

"I want to see Nevada's lawmakers support laws maintaining at least current levels of funding for our school district and I support accountability and fiscal responsibility in our programs. Our economy demands that our education dollars utilized and expended in the most efficient and effective way possible." She is concerned over anticipated budget cuts at the national and state level as they concern education and feel her background and experience can be a strong voice in helping to maintain present equitable funding and programs at the elementary and secondary level.

New director of financial aid at NNCC

Jim Hadwick has been hired as the new director of financial aid at Northern Nevada Community College beginning Sept. 1, announces dean of instruction Charles Greenhaw.

Hadwick and his wife, Andy, moved to Elko from Bemidji, Minnesota, where he was the director of veteran programs at Bemidji State University.

Hadwick will also be handling veteran services at NNCC. He said his position at NNCC will cover a broader scope than his former position, as he would now be dealing with the entire student body in providing financial aid counseling.

He noted the veterans cost instruction program is receiving 50 percent of the funding provided last year, and he anticipates the program will be deleted entirely next year due to lack of funding.

Registration ends at the college today at 5 p.m., and late registration will begin next week from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Classes at NNCC are scheduled to begin August 31.

Bloodmobile in Elko Monday

By Dick Snyder

Several volunteer organizations are assisting with next week's Red Cross Bloodmobile visit, according to Mary Berg and Paula Horsley, co-chairman of volunteers.

The bloodmobile will be at Northern Nevada Community College from 3:15 to 8 p.m. on Monday and from 10:15 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Tuesday.

Volunteer blood donors are needed on those two days to help replenish blood supplies at the Red Cross Blood Center in Salt Lake City.

Dr. George Manilla, local blood bank coordinator, explains the Salt Lake City facility supplies blood for Elko General Hospital.

Berg and Horsley are both members of the EGH Auxiliary. They and other auxiliary members will be handling registration of the donors.

Manilla noted the entire donation process should take no more than one hour.

Nurses from EGH will be volunteering their time assisting the bloodmobile staff, said Berg. The nurses are being coordinated by Pauline Smith, assistant director of nursing at EGH.

Horsley noted that members of Beta Sigma Phi sorority will again be providing cookies and the Soroptimist Club will again provide juice for the donors. Manilla provides coffee.

The volunteer chairmen said that a door prize will be awarded by the auxiliary to one of the donors.

Manilla said anyone between the ages of 18 and 65 and in good health may donate blood.

He urged Elkoans to come to the college on Monday or Tuesday to donate a pint of blood.

"There is no substitute for blood," said Manilla. "It is a community resource and a community responsibility."

Students have until Nov. 2 to apply for remaining scholarship funds at Northern Nevada Community College, according to Jim Hadwick, director of financial aids.

Hadwick said approximately $4,500 is still available in the college's scholarship funds.

Among the variety of scholarships being offered is an award from the Nevada Society of Certified Public Accountants. Hadwick said $800 is available for business administration majors or for students in the process of earning a one-year accounting certificate.

Applications may be obtained at the financial aids office at NNCC, and they must be returned by Nov. 2.

Hadwick said the NNCC scholarship committee will meet Nov. 3 to disperse the remaining scholarship funds. Some scholarships that were awarded to students who decided later not to attend NNCC must be re-awarded, Hadwick noted.

Northern Nevada Community College held a scholarship dinner to match scholarship recipients with the donors. 52 students received tuition scholarships from 21 donors. Thompson-Dobson wed in May 15 Presbyterian rites Evva Lynn (Dolly) Thompson and Douglas Neil Dobson were married May 15 in a double-ring ceremony at the Presbyterian Church in Elko.

The 4 p.m. ceremony was performed by the Rev. Kirk Kestler in the church decorated with bouquets of apricot-colored gladioli and spider mums. Candelabra entwined with fern boughs and white spider mums decorated the altar.

The bride is the daughter of Margaret Barry Thompson and the late William S. Thompson of Elko. The bridegroom's parents are Mrs. Elizabeth Dobson of Verona, N.J., and the late Herbert A. Dobson.

Musical selections were played by Lajla Lyon preceding the ceremony and Russell McMullen sang "Beautiful" following the exchange of vows.

The bride was escorted down the aisle by her brother, William Thompson of Fayetteville, N.C., and given in marriage by her mother and brother.

The bride's gown of dacron organza had a Point D'esprit yoke and bodice accented with ruffled Cluny lace and silk Venetian motifs. A chapel train was attached above the waistline. A matching derby hat with silk Venetian motifs and a finger-tip veil completed her ensemble. She carried a bouquet of apricot-colored tiger lilies and white spider mums. She also carried an heirloom brooch belonging to her mother. The gold-encased cameo was a golden wedding anniversary gift to the bride's great-grandmother from her children and has been kept by the oldest daughter in the family.

Casey Fagoaga of Elko was maid of honor and Debra Scott Terbush of Logan, Utah, the bride's attendant. Both wore full-length, apricot-colored gowns accented with cap sleeves of lace. They wore nosegays of lilies and spider mums in their hair, and matching pendants and earrings, gifts from the bride and groom. They carried small versions of the bridal bouquet.

Richard Pruefer, Salt Lake City, was best man and Neal Rasmussen, Vacaville, Calif., usher. The men wore black tuxedos and boutonnières of white spider mums.

For the wedding, the bride's mother chose a floor-length, three-piece ensemble of apricot satin. The matching chiffon blouse was accented at the sleeves and neckline with pearls and rhinestones. The bride's sister, Dorothy Peters, wore a floor-length gown of apricot-colored chiffon. Both had cymbidium orchid corsages.

The bride's mother hosted the evening reception at the Stockmen's Motor Hotel. Bouquets of apricot-colored gladioli framed the receiving line and the cake table was set off with candelabra entwined with fern and flowers. In addition to the four-tiered wedding cake decorated with the bride's colors, a light buffet was served with entertainment and dancing by Gary and Sandy's Common Ground.

The couple honeymoon cruised in the Bahamas with ports of call at Nassau and Paradise Island. They are now at home in Salt Lake City.

The bride is a graduate of Elko High School, Northeastern Nevada Community College and Westminster College, where she is employed as admissions counselor. Dobson is supervisor of customer services for Delta Airlines. He is a native of Verona, N.J., and served in the U.S. Navy.

Out-of-town relatives of the bride at the wedding included Vickie Rasmussen, Vacaville, Calif.; Lorraine and Gene Fowler and Linda and Joe Fowler, Salem, Ore.; and Lola and Delbert Rasmussen, Lincoln, Calif.

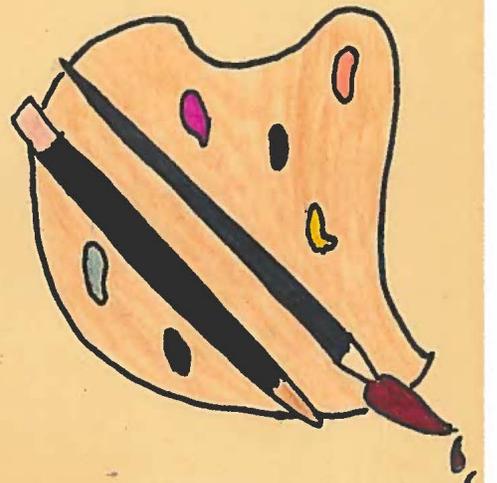

Mr. and Mrs. Ron Meyer of Elko announced the engagement of their daughter, Connie Ja None, to Sheldon Scott Pawling. Pawling, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Custer of Elko, is in the U.S. Navy. Miss Meyer is studying accounting at Northern Nevada Community College. The couple plans to be wed on August 18 at the Jordan River Temple in Salt Lake City.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond L. Rackley of Elko announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Kristen Lynn, to Todd Nielsen Griswold. Griswold is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Griswold and is employed by Freeport Gold Mining Co. Miss Rackley will graduate from high school in June and plans to attend Northern Nevada Community College. A Nov. 6 wedding is planned.

MUSIC & ART

NNCC recital series starts this Sunday

Northern Nevada Community College will start its music recital series, "Music for Autumn Afternoons," this Sunday, according to an announcement from the college.

There will be three recitals held at the college library during the months of October and November presenting a variety of entertainment for Elko area audiences.

The series will feature the following performers: Dr. Catherine Smith from the music faculty at University of Nevada Reno in a flute recital, accompanied by Andrea Lenz Maxey also of the UNR faculty; the Schubertiad Chamber ensemble from Carson Valley, with Megan Keller, soprano; Herbertine Morghen, piano; and Linda Larson-Hardy a graduate of Elko High School, piano; and the local group Musica Antiqua, an ensemble of local musicians under the directorship of Jim Shaw who specialize in Renaissance and Baroque chamber and dance music.

Ms. Smith will perform at 3 p.m. this Sunday with selections by J.S. Bach, Hummel, Crawford-Seeger, Borroff, and Roussel. Ms. Maxey will also perform an oboe solo by Britten in addition to accompanying Smith on the piano.

In addition to the recital on Sunday afternoon, Smith and Maxey will be giving a flute and oboe workshop Saturday evening for all interested persons at the high school band room between 7:30 & 8:30 p.m.

They will also be performing for Sunday services at St. Paul's Episcopal Church at 9 a.m. and at the Presbyterian Church at 10 a.m.

Schubertiad will perform on Saturday, Oct. 24 at 3 p.m. and their program will include several songs, a piano sonata, and piano duet all composed by Franz Schubert.

Musica Antiqua will perform on Nov. 29 at 3 p.m. and the program will include dance music by Brade and Adson, English madrigals, French chansons, and a variety of lesser known Christmas selections.

The programs have been arranged by Shaw and are sponsored jointly by the Associated Students and NNCC Community Services. There is no admission charge.

McKnight services set here Friday

Funeral services for William F. McKnight, Elko native who died yesterday at his residence here of an apparent heart attack at age 55, will be conducted Friday at 10 a.m. at Burns Funeral Chapel with the Rev. Michael Shay of St. Joseph's Catholic Church officiating. Private interment will follow in the Garden of Prayer, Burns Memorial Gardens.

McKnight was born Jan. 8, 1926, in Elko. He was reared here and attended local schools. He was a veteran of service with the Army in World War II and had worked on many ranches, including managerial positions, in Elko County. For the past 13 years, he had been a shift foreman at Carlin Gold Mine. He also raised appaloosa horses.

Survivors include his wife Thelma, sons, Glenn and Bill, daughters, Debra Bowers and Wendy Jo McKnight, father, Joe McKnight and sister, Elsie Merrick all of Elko.

A spokesman for the family said friends wishing to do so might contribute in his memory to the Mountain Trails Appaloosa Horse Club, P.O. Box 127, Elko.

Music classes

Jim Shaw, music instructor at Northern Nevada Community College, will teach music appreciation and college-community oratorio choir in evening sessions this semester at the college.

Music appreciation, offered on Monday evenings, is an introductory course providing a background in the basic elements of music and understanding of music as an art, Shaw explained. He said the course will emphasize local performances sponsored by the college and other local organizations.

The college-community oratorio choir will perform standard choral literature and will meet Wednesday evenings. The choir is open to all interested members of the community at no cost or for college credit at regular fees, Shaw reported.

Shaw has been a member of the community orchestra, director of the former Elko Oratorio Society, and choir director at St. Paul's Episcopal Church. He presently is serving on the Liturgical Commission for the Episcopal Church in Nevada as a music consultant.

Theatre performance slated Friday at NNCC

The Covenant Players of the International Repertory Theatre are giving a "special brown bag" appearance at noon Friday on the Northern Nevada Community College campus lawn between Lundberg and McMullen Halls, reported Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction.

The public is invited to this free performance, said Greenhaw, and continued that "the Covenant Players have a definite G rating and this event promises to be exciting for the entire family."

The Los Angeles based group, founded in 1963, will perform under the sponsorship of the NNCC Little Theatre Company. It is one of more than forty touring groups who travel continually throughout the United States, Canada, Europe, Australia and Asia, Greenhaw explained.

The group will perform a variety of both humorous and serious dramatic material, Greenhaw stated, and added that "the players use drama to challenge and stimulate people into a searching look at our complex society and the role and responsibility of the individual within it."

The Covenant Players, who travel over a million miles a year, said Greenhaw, have performed everywhere, from world's fairs to street corners. "Using the audience's imagination rather than elaborate props and scenery enables them to perform virtually anywhere there are people," Greenhaw claimed.

The performance will be in the student lounge if the weather is bad.

Tapestry weaving class to be offered at NNCC

An introduction to basic tapestry weaving will be one of Northern Nevada Community College's "Fall Alternate" classes. Registration for these classes will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and from 6:30 to 9 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 7, and from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, Oct. 8.

Audrey White, who will be teaching the tapestry class, said it will be on Monday nights from 7 p.m. to 10, and have seven sessions.

White said she doesn't want any more than 10 students because "so much handwork is involved." The class will be working on a derivative of a Salish loom, and, according to White, "Students may buy a loom kit, a stretcher frame, or get really easy instructions to make their own."

The goal for the class, said White, is to take each student through basic design and weaving techniques, and "hope that each student will remove a tapestry of hanging quality."

White said her interest in weaving began in 1976, when NNCC offered a program in Pioneer Arts and Crafts tied in with the Bicentennial. She said she took a class in making yarn, and once it was spun, she didn't know what to do with it. She decided to take up weaving, and her interest has turned into a passion.

"The fiber arts are kind of ignored," White claims, and continued to say that story-telling in cloth is a valuable archeological tool. She feels there is beginning to be more interest in the arts of spinning and weaving, however.

White just returned from a conference of the Handweavers Guild of America, in Seattle. While there, she attended a workshop on tapestry weaving that was taught by Jean-Pierre Larochette, from the San Francisco Tapestry Workshop.

Audrey White, shown working on her loom, will be teaching a class on tapestry weaving for NNCC's fall alternate program.

NNCC music recital series to start at 3 p.m. Sunday

The first program in the music recital series Music For Autumn Afternoons at Northern Nevada Community College will be held this Sunday at 3 p.m. at the college library.

There is no charge for the concert.

Dr. Catherine Smith, flutist, and Andrea Lenz Maxey, piano and oboe, will present a program of varied music at the college library under the joint sponsorship of the Associated Students and NNCC Community Services.

The program will include the following selections: Sonata by J.S. Bach; Sonata by Hummel; Diaphonic Suite by Crawford; Divertimento by Borroff; Jouers de flute by Roussel; Metamorphoses after Ovid by Britten.

Smith is associate professor of music at the University of Nevada Reno, where she teaches flute, chamber music ensembles, and music history and literature courses.

Maxey is staff accompanist for the UNR department of music, where she also teaches oboe.

Each has appeared as soloist with the Reno Chamber Orchestra, and is a member of the Reno Philharmonic.

In addition to the recital Sunday afternoon Smith and Maxey will be giving a flute and oboe workshop to all interested persons at the high school band room Saturday evening from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

They will also be performing for Sunday services at St. Paul's Episcopal church at 9 a.m. and the First Presbyterian Church at 10 a.m.

'A Cowhand's Song' to be shown tomorrow

A motion picture depicting the struggle of the 20th century family rancher, "A Cowhand's Song: Crisis on The Range," will be shown free of charge in the Northern Nevada Community College library at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow.

The documentary film discusses the controversy surrounding the rancher, who uses public rangeland for grazing cattle and sheep, and the many special interest groups, such as developers, ecologists and government agencies, who are just now beginning to utilize the range for their own purposes.

The 28-minute color film was produced over several years by Nancy Kelly and Gwendolyn Clancy while working on ranches in the Modoc County area of northern California and Washoe County in Nevada.

"It really is a crisis for these people," said Kelly in an interview earlier this month. "They're afraid they are going to lose their lands, their homes and their way of life."

Both women will be present to answer questions and said they hoped to get local rancher's thoughts and opinions concerning the piece.

They also said they hoped to have a representative from different agencies and/or organizations, perhaps the Bureau of Land Management and the Sierra Club among others, to provide additional points of view and information.

Hold's First Concert Sunday

Northern Nevada Community College, through its community service program, announces its 1982-83 music recital series. This is the second year of this program at NNCC which is designed to present regional professional musicians in recital to Elko audiences.

The first program on Sunday, Oct. 17, will be Dr. Catherine Smith, flute; Andrea Lenz, piano and oboe; and John Lenz, cello and horn. They are faculty members at UNR and will present a program of music by Telemann, Brahms, Poulenc, and Martinu.

The second program scheduled for Nov. 17 will feature a classical guitarist from the faculty of BYU in Provo in a program of Spanish guitar music.

During the spring semester the recital series will present Rosemary Mathews, soprano and instructor at Weber State College in a program of French and German art songs. This program is scheduled for Feb. 6, 1983.

Former Elkoan Heidi Strange, a graduate of San Francisco Conservatory, will present a piano recital on March 6, 1983, featuring French piano music.

The last recital will be presented in April of 1983 and will feature the Great Basin Brass Quintet from Reno under the direction of UNR instructor John Lenz.

All programs are free to the public and will be held at the NNCC library. The series has been co-ordinated by NNCC music instructor Jim Shaw and Dean of Instruction Charles Greenhaw.

NNCC sets schedule for 1982-83 recitals

The Northern Nevada Community College announced the schedule of the 1982-83 recital series, which is sponsored through the NNCC community service program.

The first recital will be at 3 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 17, in the NNCC library, and is free to the public, according to Jim Shaw, NNCC music instructor. Featured in the program will be University of Nevada-Reno faculty members, Dr. Catherine Smith, flute; Andrea Lenz, piano and oboe; and John Lenz, cello and horn. The performers will use the music of Telemann, Brahms, Poulenc, and Martinu.

The second program, set for November 11, will feature a classical guitarist from the faculty of Brigham Young University, performing a program of Spanish guitar music, Shaw continued.

ording to Shaw, will begin Feb. 6, with Rosemary Mathews, instructor at Weber State College, Utah, performing a program of French and German art songs.

Former Elkoan Heidi Strange, a graduate of San Francisco Conservatory, will present a piano recital featuring French music in March, Shaw claimed.

The final recital will be in April, and will feature the Great Basin Brass Quintet from Reno, directed by UNR instructor John Lenz.

This is the second year of the program, which Shaw said is designed to present regional professional musicians in recital for Elko audiences.

All the programs are free, according to Shaw, and will be held in the NNCC library. The series has been coordinated by Shaw and the dean of instruction, Charles Greenhaw.

NNCC's Mark Twain draws sellout crowd

By Dick Snyder

A total of 207 people watched Jack Hull's presentation of "An Evening With Mark Twain," according to Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction at Northern Nevada Community College.

Hull's performance was in a fund-raising event for the NNCC Foundation.

Greenhaw said some expenses from the evening remain to be paid, but he anticipates the foundation will realize approximately $1,500 from the performance, which was held Saturday evening at the Stockmen's show room.

Greenhaw and foundation chairman Bill Bilyeu said they were very appreciative that Hull could be coaxed into performing as Mark Twain. Bilyeu presented Hull with a special NNCC lapel pin.

Hull was introduced by Robert Vaughan, a foundation trustee and law partner of Hull.

Hull began performing as Mark Twain in 1965 at the request of the Northern Nevada Historical Society during Elko County's centennial year celebration. Since then he has performed between 20 and 25 times.

Most of those performances have been in Elko, but he has also performed in several locations around the state.

For each performance, Hull reviews the works of Mark Twain and picks out appropriate material for the group he is appearing for. He estimates he has spent "thousands of hours" preparing for the presentations as well as the performances themselves.

He has never received pay for his impersonation of the American humorist.

His performances, usually for conventions being held in Elko, are done "as a public service to help attract people to the convention and to Elko."

He has tried to retire as Mark Twain, citing the great amount of time required. But his popularity has kept him in great demand.

The Nevada Supreme Court has requested he appear before the Western States Judicial Conference, which will be held at Lake Tahoe.

Other performances have included the Nevada Bankers Association, Jaycees, Elko Elks Lodge, Lions, Nevada Insurance Agents, Nevada Medical Association, Nevada Bar Association, state and national press association, and the state convention of the Nevada Cattlemen's Association and Nevada Woolgrowers.

When he began performing, he rented his costume. He now owns one.

He has adopted a policy that he performs only in Elko. He said he has had to "reluctantly decline" many invitations — but he felt he couldn't decline the request from the Nevada Supreme Court to appear at Lake Tahoe.

He said he accepted the invitation from the NNCC Foundation because "I am a strong supporter of our community college and of education. I feel I owe the college this effort to try and make up for all the trouble I caused in school."

Mark Twain reminder

By Dick Snyder
"An Evening With Mark Twain" will be offered this evening at the Stockmen's Motor Hotel by the Northern Nevada Community College Foundation, reminds Charles Greenhaw, NNCC Dean of Instruction.

Local attorney Jack Hull will portray Mark Twain, and all dinner tickets for the performance have been sold, said Greenhaw.

Members of the college foundation will be at the cocktail hour and will be able to answer questions about the goals of the foundation.

Among the goals is raising private funds to construct a multi-purpose building on the campus. The building would house the student center and would also be available for community events.

Foundation members include representatives from the communities served by NNCC and come from every walk of life, according to foundation chairman Bill

Bilyeu.

He said the foundation is very pleased to have coaxed Hull's Mark Twain out of "semi-retirement" and into performing for tomorrow night's fund-raiser.

Hull started appearing as Mark Twain in 1965 at the request of the Northern Nevada Historical Society during Elko County's centennial year.

Since then he has portrayed the celebrated American humorist between 20 and 25 times. Most of those performances have been in Elko, but he has also performed at Lake Tahoe, Sparks, and Ely.

Hull said he accepted the invitation from the NNCC Foundation because "I am a strong supporter of our community college and of education.

"I feel I owe the college this effort to try and make up for all the trouble I caused in school."

Greenhaw said 175 tickets for the performance and dinner have been sold. The performance and dinner start at 7 p.m.

Performer Katie Ketcham poses in a 19th Century costume with a painting inspired by American artist Mary Cassatt. Ketcham will perform a one-woman musical Nov. 8 on the life of the artist at the NNCC library.

NNCC offers musical based on life of artist

A one-woman musical entitled "Impressions of Mary Cassatt" is scheduled to be performed at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 8, in the library at Northern Nevada Community College.

The program, which details the life of famed American artist Mary Cassatt, is composed and performed by Katie Ketcham. It has been made possible in part through a grant from the Nevada State Council on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts.

The art department at NNCC is also sponsoring the event, which is free to the public.

The program portrays the artist using song, dramatization, costumes, dance, slides and paintings.

Ketcham was introduced to the life of Mary Cassatt while attending Beverly Wilke's pastel class at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas.

"I wanted to tell people about this great American artist," Ketcham commented.

"Most musicals are written about someone exciting and interesting, and the more I read I found out Cassatt was quite a character. George Biddle (another American artist) said 'She is the most brave, vivid and magnetic personality I have yet known.'"

Cassatt was a dynamic woman who fought Victorian convention in the 19th century by traveling to Europe and joining the Impressionist painters, forerunners of modern art. At the age of 24, her paintings were accepted by the prestigious Salon gallery in Paris.

Ketcham has studied piano and composition at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Toronto, Canada. At the age of 15, she attended University of Victoria's summer music program on a scholarship and won many awards including the British Columbia Centennial Cultural Fund Award for being the most promising student at the music festival.

At 17, Ketcham was associate lecturer at Humber and Centennial Colleges in Toronto and pianist for the Young Canadian Opera Theatre.

After a series of one-woman concerts sponsored by the Community Concert Committee in Canada, Ketcham discovered her love for musical theatre when she performed the role of Maria Von Trapp in "The Sound of Music" at Yuba College in California.

She was lead singer and keyboard player in a variety band in California and Las Vegas before undertaking "Impressions of Mary Cassatt."

Paintings used in the musical are painted after Mary Cassatt's work by Wilke, who is also a professional artist specializing in portraits.

NNCC Foundation Boost from Mark Twain

Northern Nevada Community College Foundation trustees voted on Saturday to concentrate their fund-raising activities on building a multi-purpose building for the Elko campus. Their vote followed a presentation by Elko architect J.D. Long, who volunteered his services to design the building. Long said the building would contain meeting rooms and recreational facilities for NNCC students and for the community. The first phase of the building would contain a total of 7,423 square feet including a mezzanine. Long estimated the building's cost at $379,000.

A proposed second phase would add 5,358 square feet at a cost of $334,000. Landscaping would bring the total for both phases to $722,000. Long noted the figure does not include equipment and furniture for the building.

NNCC President Bill Berg explained the college is attracting more younger students who are entering NNCC after graduating from high school. The college is becoming "a home" for those students, and facilities need to be built to accommodate them, he said. The college has three building needs: additional classrooms, student housing, and the multi-purpose building which would contain a student center, Berg added.

Berg said the foundation would be the only likely source of funds for the building.

Berg noted the Elko campus is unique among the community colleges in Nevada. It serves the largest area of any of the colleges: Elko, White Pine, Eureka, Lander, and Humboldt counties.

Following the presentation, trustees voted unanimously to accept the building as the primary target for fund-raising.

The vote followed an assurance from Berg that the building would be available — as all NNCC facilities have been — to the community.

The foundation's funds have been raised through NNCC yard sales held with the cooperation of faculty, staff and students.

A performance by Jack Hull of "An Evening With Mark Twain" has aided the fund raising effort.

Soprano Susan Frank and baritone Howard Hoffman will perform on Sunday.

NNCC will present its fourth program in a series of six musical recitals Sunday, Jan. 31, 3 p.m. in the college library.

Featured in this recital will be soprano Susan Frank and bass-baritone Howard Hoffman of the Nevada Opera Company from Reno. Frank and Hoffmann will present selections from different operas, operettas, and Broadway musicals. Highlights of the program will include familiar numbers from "Porgy and Bess," "The Merry Widow," "Oklahoma," and arias by Mozart, Verdi, and Puccini.

Hoffman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hoffman of Elko, has been singing with the Nevada Opera Company since its beginning over 15 years ago. He has had numerous roles including the title role in Mozart's "Don Giovanni." He has also appeared with the Nevada Opera Ballet Company's performance of the Nutcracker Ballet for the past three years.

Miss Frank, originally from Lake Tahoe, is a product of the Nevada Opera Apprentice Program. She studied at UNR where she was involved in the University Opera Theatre. She received the degrees BA and M Music at UNR and is currently a member of the voice faculty. Miss Frank has also appeared with the Reno Chamber Orchestra directed by Roger Wagner, and the Sierra Collegium Musicum.

Local musician Joyce Shaw will accompany the soloists. Mrs. Shaw has been active in local music productions as soprano soloist and accompanist. She presently serves as organist at St. Paul's Episcopal Church and teaches voice privately. While attending UNR Mrs. Shaw worked with Hoffmann and Frank with the University Opera Theatre, both as vocalist and accompanist.

This recital series is a series held during the fall semester and is sponsored by the NNCC Associated Students, the NNCC Community Services Dept. and has been arranged by Music Program Coordinator Jim Shaw.

Violinist Donna Fairbanks, concert mistress of the Brigham Young University Symphony will present the second recital on Feb. 21 with a program featuring compositions by Vitali, Schubert, Saint-Saens & Khachiturian.

The third program to be announced will be held in the late spring and will be devoted to featuring Elko area composers and performers. This will be an opportunity for local musicians to be heard in a recital setting.

There is no admission charge for these recitals and an informal reception will follow immediately in the Student Lounge.

Wells Progress 1/29/82 NNCC Music Program Will Begin Sunday

Northern Nevada Community College has announced three music programs in its recital series for the spring semester. The first program will be at 3 p.m. Sunday at the college library, and will feature Howard Hoffman and Susan Frank of the Nevada Opera Company.

They will present selections from various operas, operettas and Broadway musicals.

Violinist Donna Fairbanks, concertmistress of the Brigham Young University symphony, will present the second recital on Feb. 21 with a program featuring compositions by Vitali, Schubert, Saint-Saens and Khachiturian.

The third program, with date to be announced, will be held in the late spring and will be devoted to featuring Elko area composers and performers.

"This will be an opportunity for local musicians to be heard in a recital setting," said music program coordinator Jim Shaw.

He explained the recital series is a continuation of the successful series held during the fall semester and is sponsored by the NNCC Associated Students, the college's community services department and has been arranged by Shaw.

NNCC offers recital on Sunday afternoon

Feb. 24, 1992

Northern Nevada Community College will present violinist Donna Fairbanks in recital at 3 p.m. Sunday in the college library.

This is the fifth program in the college's recital series this year, according to course coordinator Jim Shaw.

Mrs. Fairbanks will perform works by Vivaldi, Ysaye, Saint-Saens, and Khachaturian.

She is concertmistress of the Brigham Young University philharmonic and chamber orchestras. She received her bachelor of music from BYU, where she is on the faculty as a private violin instructor.

She has received several awards and has soloed with the Utah Symphony, Charleston Civic Symphony, and the Kansas City Youth Symphony.

Accompanying on the piano will be BYU faculty member Diane Cross, who received her master of music degree from Florida State University and has also studied in Austria. She is a specialist in contemporary music and performs extensively as a chamber artist.

There is no admission charge for Sunday's performance, added Shaw.

Music Series at NNCC

Rosemary Mathews, soprano, will open the spring semester music recital series at the NNCC library, Sunday, Feb. 6, 3 p.m.

Mrs. Mathews, who presently teaches at Weber State College, has an extensive background as a professional singer and teacher. She has been featured for over 10 years in leading roles with Reno's Nevada Opera Company.

Mrs. Mathews will be accompanied by Claudia Bigler of Brigham City, Utah, who will also perform a solo on the program. Sunday's program will include songs by Faure and Wolf and opera selections from "Ernani" by Verdi and "La Boheme" by Puccini.

Also included will be several children's songs by Ella Rose Halloran, songs from "My Fair Lady," "Fantastiks," and "Fiddler on the Roof."

To conclude the program tenor Bill Mathews will join his wife in 3 popular contemporary duets by song writers John Denver & Lionel Richie.

Mrs. Mathews is a graduate of UNR and has had major roles in productions of the Nevada Opera Company in Reno. She will be performing this April in their production of "La Boheme" at the Pioneer Auditorium in Reno.

In addition to her extensive performing background Mrs. Mathews has also taught extensively at several colleges including UNR and Weber State College in Utah.

Among her students are Reno opera singer Susan Rank who has performed in Elko several times and Elko resident Joyce Shaw, who has been active as soprano soloist and organist in Elko for the past 10 years.

Pianist, Claudia Bigler is a graduate of Brigham Young University where she was the 1972 winner of the concerto auditions. Mrs. Bigler pres-teaches privately in Brigham City, Utah, where she also directs a 100 voice children's choir. She will perform Fryderyk Chopin's "Valse Brillante in Ab" in addition to accompanying Mrs. Mathews.

Sunday's program is the first of three recitals sponsored by NNCC and funded by the Nevada Humanities Committee.

The second recital will feature former Elkoan Hiedi Strange in a program of French piano music. Miss Strange is a graduate of Elko High School and a former pupil of Laurena Moren's. She is a graduate of the San Francisco Conservatory of Music, and she lives in the Bay area where she teaches piano privately.

Completing the series April 10 will be the Great Basin Brass Quintet from Reno. Members of the Quintet include Dr. McGranahan of UNR, director of this year's Northeastern Nevada Honor Band, and John Lenz who was a featured soloist last October at NNCC.

This Sunday's program will be held at the college library and start at 3 p.m. Admission is free to all of these recitals.

For further information contact series co-ordinator Jim Shaw at 738-9350.

Miss Frank, Hoffman to perform at NNCC

Elko Free Press 1/8/83

Northern Nevada Community College will present its fourth program in a series of six musical recitals at 3 p.m. Sunday in the college library.

Featured in this recital will be soprano Susan Frank and bass-baritone Howard Hoffman of the Nevada Opera Co. from Reno.

Miss Frank and Hoffman will present selections from different operas, operettas, and Broadway musicals. Highlights of the program will include familiar numbers from "Porgy and Bess", "The Merry Widow", "Oklahoma", and arias by Mozart, Verdi, and Puccini.

Hoffman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hoffman of Elko, has been singing with the Nevada Opera Company since its beginning over 15 years ago.

He has had numerous roles including the title role in Mozart's "Don Giovanni". He has also appeared with the Nevada Opera Ballet Co. performance of the Nutcracker Ballet for the past three years.

Miss Frank, originally from Lake Tahoe, is a product of the Nevada Opera Apprentice Program. She studied at UNR where she was involved in the University Opera Theatre. She received the degrees BA and M Music at UNR and is currently a member of the voice faculty. Miss Frank has also appeared with the Reno Chamber Orchestra directed by Roger Wagner, and the Sierra Collegium Musicum.

Local musician Joyce Shaw will accompany the soloists. Mrs. Shaw has been active in local music productions as soprano soloist and accompanist. She presently serves as organist at St. Paul's Episcopal Church and teaches voice privately. While attending UNR Mrs. Shaw worked with Hoffman and Miss Frank with the University Opera Theatre, both as vocalist and accompanist.

There is no admission charge for the recital and an informal reception will follow immediately in the student lounge. This program is sponsored jointly by the NNCC Student Body, NNCC community services and arranged by music program coordinator Jim Shaw.

College announces spring music series

Elko Free Press 1/5/83

Northern Nevada Community College has announced three music programs in its recital series for the spring semester. The first program will be at 3 p.m. Sunday at the college library, and will feature Howard Hoffman and Susan Frank of the Nevada Opera Company.

They will present selections from various operas, operettas and Broadway musicals.

Violinist Donna Fairbanks, concertmistress of the Brigham Young University symphony, will present the second recital on Feb. 21 with a program featuring compositions by Vivaldi, Schubert, Saint-Saens and Khachaturian.

The third program, with date to be announced, will be held in the late spring and will be devoted to featuring Elko area composers and performers.

"This will be an opportunity for local musicians to be heard in a recital setting," said music program coordinator Jim Shaw.

He explained the recital series is a continuation of the successful series held during the fall semester and is sponsored by the NNCC Associated Students, the college's community services department and has been arranged by Shaw.

Musical Afternoon at NNCC

Elko Independent 2/17/82

Northern Nevada Community College will present violinist Donna Fairbanks in recital Sunday, Feb. 21, at 3 p.m. at the college library.

This is the fifth program in the colleges recital series held this year.

Mrs. Fairbanks will perform works by Vitali, Ysaye, Saint-

Saens, and Khachaturian.

Donna Fairbanks is presently concert mistress of the Brigham Young University Philharmonic and Chamber orchestras.

She received her Bachelor of Music from Brigham Young University where she is currently on the faculty as a private violin instructor.

She has been with the Utah Symphony, Charleston Civic Symphony and the Kansas City Youth Symphony.

Accompanying Donna Fairbanks on the piano will be BYU faculty member Diane Cross.

Ms. Cross received her

Master of Music degree from Florida State University and has also studied in Austria.

Ms. Cross is a specialist in contemporary music and performs extensively as a chamber artist.

There will be no admission charged for this program, and everyone is welcome to attend.

College is planning Shakespearean tour

The Northern Nevada Community College Winnemucca Center is in the process of organizing a trip to Ashland, Oregon for the Shakespearean festival.

We are tentatively planning to be in Ashland on June 15, for the Elizabethan Theater Outdoor Opening celebration.

The programs available June 15 and 16 include Julius Caesar, Comedy of Errors, Spokesong-Hold Me, and Romeo and Juliet.

The approximate cost per person would be $120.00. This includes one college credit; travel to and from Ashland; three nights at the Ashland Motel (double room); two tickets for the best seats at the performance of your choice; backstage tour and Festival Exhibit Center admission or Exhibit Center admission and commemorative coin; entertainment coupon book, and information package.

Meals are not included in this package.

Interested persons must contact the college center by March 15, to enable the staff to make reservations and travel arrangements. The college is located at 395 W. Minor St. and the phone number is 623-4824.

Art lecture set Monday

Ed Martinez, chairman of the art department at University of Nevada Reno, will speak on "The Art of the Self-Portrait" at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

The lecture with slides will be presented in the college library.

Martinez said the program "is a look at both the art and self-portrait images of some of the world's great, and not so great, artists."

The program is offered by the UNR speakers' bureau at no charge. The public is invited.

Painting classes at NNCC

Jackie Goodyear of Belpre, Kan., known as a "people painter" because of her portrait work, will speak to interested students concerning her Elko County Art Club sponsored workshop from 7 p.m. to 10, Friday, May 14, in Rooms 6 and 7 at Northern Nevada Community College, reports Janice Armstrong of the art club.

John 738-8234. Lamoille residents may call Marilyn Cordes, 753-6532, after 6 p.m. or Cathy Sarman, 753-6330.

Pre-registration may be accomplished by mailing fees to Mrs. Cordes at P.O. Box 1543, Elko.

"People painter" Jackie Goodyear will teach two Elko County Art Club sponsored courses at NNCC beginning Saturday.

Five days of painting instruction will follow Friday's initial discussion. Classes will meet from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. Saturday, May 15, through Wednesday, May 19.

Fees for the classes are as follows: Saturday through Monday portrait course, $40 for art club members and $70 for non-members. Tuesday and Wednesday landscape painting course, $35 for club members, $65 for non-members.

Lists of materials to be used in the classes are posted at Elko businesses selling art supplies, according to Mrs. Armstrong.

Persons needing more information may call any of the following art club members: Mary Harper, 738-6458; Dot Chrisman, 738-4435; or June

UNR offers art class in Elko this summer

Local art enthusiasts will have an opportunity to sketch rural Nevada during a University of Nevada Reno art class to be offered in June.

Students will be able to explore techniques using pencil, charcoal and pen and ink while sketching Northeastern Nevada's deserts, mountains, historic buildings and contemporary earth sculptures. The class also will observe the changing shadows in outdoor composition from early morning to late evening.

The week long course, Art 408/608, will operate out of Elko and will begin with a June 20 trip to Montello. The Montello trip will include a visit to the "Sun Tunnels in Lucin" sculpture. New York artist Nancy Holt directed the construction of the large work about perception and space.

On June 21, the summer solstice, students will be able to watch as the sun rises in the center of the sun tunnels.

One day of the class will be devoted to viewing a slide presentation from the Northeastern Nevada Museum on Tuscarora, Austin and Eureka.

The workshop, to run from June 20-25, will be taught by Sarah Campsey, art instructor at Northern Nevada Community College. Campsey has instructed a wide variety of classes including drawing, sculpture, folk art, the creative process and crafts. She has also directed the Pioneer Arts and Crafts Program at NNCC since 1975 and led art workshops in the United States and Canada. Her most recent exhibit was at the Western Nevada Gallery in Reno last December.

Students in the class will be responsible for their own meals and lodging. Those wishing to travel in college vehicles will be charged a $15 fee.

Those wishing to sign up for the course must register before June 9 with Paul Billings at the Elko County School District, 1092 Burns Road, Elko, Nevada 89801. Registration fee for the three credit class will be $84.

Saturday opera recital at college celebration

Soprano Susan Frank and tenor Jon Fay will present a joint recital Saturday, May 15, at 7:30 p.m. in the Northern Nevada Community College library.

The program, the final in a series of six, will be one of several Saturday events marking the college's 15th anniversary in the community.

Both performers are members of the Nevada Opera in Reno. The program in English will include songs by Brittan, Copeland and Herbert, as well as excerpts from "Tosca" and "La Boheme" by Puccini, "Die Fledermaus" by Strauss, and "Carmen" by Bizet.

Miss Frank, who has appeared in Elko before, has performed numerous roles with the Nevada opera and is a member of the voice faculty at University of Nevada Reno. Her most recent Elko performance was in January in a joint recital with Howard Hoffman, also sponsored by the college.

Fay is also a member of the UNR voice faculty and he teaches privately in the Reno area. He recently performed under the direction of American composer Lucas Foss with the Brooklyn Symphony and the Hinsdale, Ill., Opera Theatre.

Accompanist for the recital will be local musician Joyce Shaw. Mrs. Shaw has appeared previously in Elko as a vocalist and organist as well as assisting with several community musical organizations.

The music recital series has been coordinated by Jim Shaw, who also serves the college as a part-time music instructor.

Shaw points out there is no admission charge for the program and the public is encouraged to attend.

Artist Offers Classes At NNCC Next Week

Northeastern Nevada residents will have an opportunity to paint and learn with professional artist and teacher, Jackie Goodyear when she revisits Elko, Nevada May 14 through May 19.

Jackie will teach classes of limited enrollment at Northeastern Nevada Community College beginning at 7:00 p.m. May 14. During the following days she will touch portrait, landscape and/or other subjects chosen by her students from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Elko County Art Club will sponsor the workshops. Tuition fees will range from $35.00 and $40.00 for Elko Art Club members and $65.00 and $75.00 for non-members. Lists of materials to be used in the classes are posted at Lundberg's, Dave's Hallmark, Day Dreamer and Forie and June's. Registration information can be gained by calling the following in Elko: Mary Harper-738-6458, Dot Chrisman-738-4435 and June John-738-8234. Lamoille, Nevada members who can answer questions are: Marilyn Gordes (after 6:00 p.m.) 753-6532 and Cathy Sarman-753-6330.

Ms. Goodyear is a full time working artist who lives near Dalpre, Kansas. She has conducted workshops in Elko on 3 occasions prior to 1982. She specializes in portrait painting and in the midwestern United States is called a "people painter". She teaches with a natural enthusiasm which encourages the student to "see first" and then paint.

Students are treated to a no-nonsense approach to art even though they enjoy what they are doing. They are allowed to enjoy it.

Kevin Morley to Present Project On Pioneer Hotel Renovation Thursday

An "Evening with Kevin" will be sponsored by NNCC Art Department. On May 20 at 7:30 p.m. Kevin Morley will present his recently completed thesis project "Pioneer Hotel: Renovation and Addition" at the NNCC Library. Morley recently graduated with his B.A. in Architecture at the University of Idaho at Moscow.

Sarah Campsey, who has

Committee during the past year, commented, "Although this is not the plan to be followed by the Pioneer Hotel renovation in Elko, it's a very exciting study of a site specific project. The concept of the old relating to the new within the block of the Pioneer Hotel has been set within the context of the downtown area."

This scale model of the hotel.

A plaza with Morley's original sculpture "What Makes a Town" is also included. This historical clay piece, along with its hand drawn book tells the chronological history of Elko.

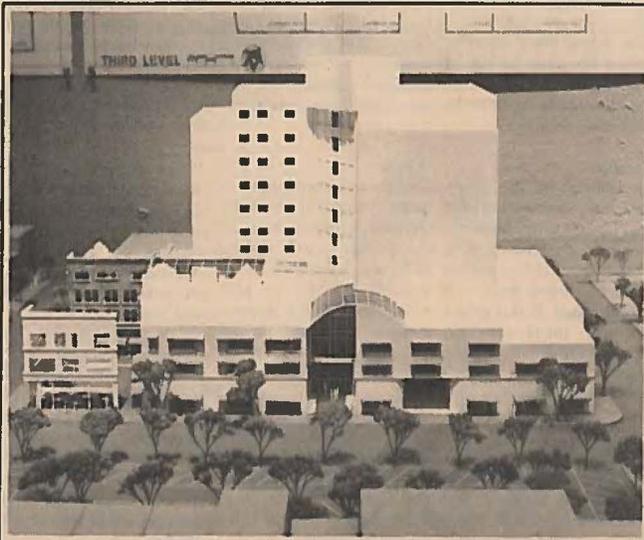

During the summer of 1981, Morley studied for six weeks overseas with a group of 11 architectural students and professors from the University of Idaho.

His independent study at the Student Art Center International in Florence, Italy, resulted in a project on Urban Space: A Theoretical solution to the Elko Railroad Relocation Corridor. It was one of two projects chosen that fall to represent the College of Art

The public is invited to attend. Questions concerning the University of Idaho and the Architectural Department will also be answered.

During Morley's five years at U of I, he was Social Chairman and President of Snow Hall, Resident Advisor for the Housing Office, Advertising Chairman for G.D.I. week and Independent Man of the Year. He graduated from Elko High School in 1977 and is the son of George and Mavis Morley.

Kevin Morley to present NNCC program Thursday

Kevin Morley will present his recently completed thesis project, "Pioneer Hotel: Renovation and Addition," at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, May 20, at the Northern Nevada Community College Library. The program is sponsored by NNCC Art Department.

Morley, who recently received his Bachelor of Arts degree in architecture from the University of Idaho at Moscow, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Morley of Elko.

"Although this is not the plan to be followed by Pioneer Hotel renovation in Elko, it's a very exciting study of a site specific project. The concept of the old relating to the new within the block of the Pioneer Hotel has been set within the context of the downtown area," commented Sarah Campsey of NNCC, who served on Morley's thesis committee during the past year.

The scale model of the 200,000-square foot project also includes a portion of the Plan-makers original plan for the area where railroad tracks are to be removed following completion of Project Lifesaver.

Morley's project proposes a multi-use facility that includes retail space, casino, coffee shop and restaurant, lounge with stage bar, conference rooms, office space, 160 hotel rooms, two parking structures and maintenance facilities.

A plaza with Morley's original sculpture, "What Makes a Town," is also included. "This historical clay piece, along with its hand-drawn book tells the chronological history of Elko," explains Ms. Campsey.

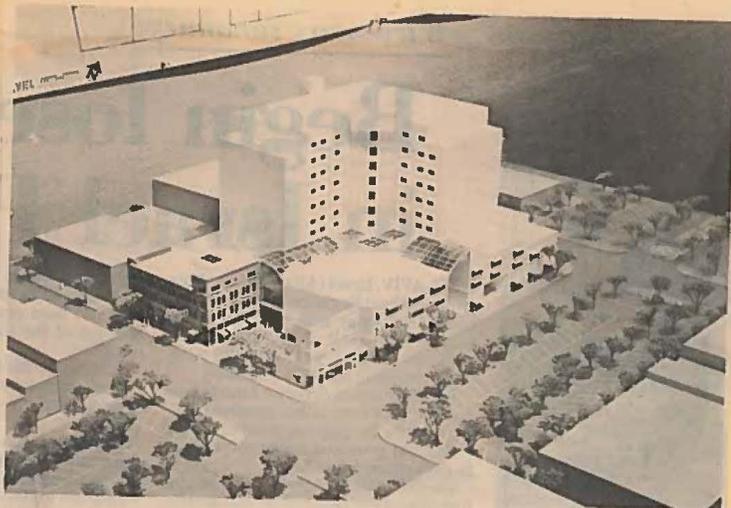

Last summer Morley studied for six weeks overseas with a group of 11 architectural students and professors from the University of Idaho. His independent study at the Student Art Center International in Florence, Italy, resulted in a project on urban space: A theoretical solution to the Elko Railroad Relocation Corridor. It was one of two projects selected to represent the College of Art and Architecture at the faculty banquet. This project will also be displayed Thursday night, as will slides of Morley's European study.

The public is invited to the Thursday program, and to ask questions about the University of Idaho and the Architectural Department.

During Morley's five years at the school he was social chairman and president of Snow Hall, resident advisor for the housing office, advertising chairman for special events, and Independent Man of the Year.

He is a 1977 graduate of Elko High School.

Elko County Art Club prepares spring show

Entrants in Elko County Art Club's annual Spring Festival of Art are asked to bring their paintings to the library of Northern Nevada Community College between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. on Thursday, May 27.

Each exhibitor is allowed to enter three paintings in the juried show, according to art club president Kathy Sarman. She invites all local artists to enter and points out the entry fee for those artist who do not belong to the art club is $3 per painting.

Show categories include oils, landscape; oils, other; watercolor; other media and best of show.

Entries must be ready for hanging when brought to the college, and each should have attached to the back the artist's name and address and the title of the painting. Each must be accompanied by an entry form available at the college May 27.

Paintings will be juried by Royal Orser, Elko High School principal and former art instructor, on Friday, May 28. Exhibitors with juried art will be contacted to retrieve their paintings before 5 p.m. Friday.

Judges for the show include Lowell Swendseid, Elko High School art instructor and Carole Ann Porter of the Daydreamer. Ribbons will be awarded June 1.

The show will be open to the public in the NNCC library June 2 through 11. Exhibitors are asked to pick up all paintings between 4 and 5 p.m. on June 11.

Sarman points out the Spring Festival of Art has always been one of the shows most popular with the public and she invites everyone to come by the college to see it.

Gift certificates from Lundberg's and the Daydreamer, both local art supply stores, will be awarded to category winners along with the ribbons.

Art club exhibit at NNCC

The Elko County Art Club opened an exhibit at the Northern Nevada Community College yesterday, and the display will remain at the college through July 8.

Art club spokesman Kathy Sarman said the work in the exhibit was done during the Jackie Goodyear workshop, which was held May 14-19. She said the workshop was sponsored by the Elko County Art Club and "was made possible, in part, through a grant from the Nevada State Council on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts."

Sarman said the local art club puts on two workshops a year and they are open to all artists, regardless of experience. This fall the club is planning a watercolor workshop.

Club activities planned for this summer include a July 10 paint-out at Mildred Byers' home in Lamoille and an old-fashioned picnic and paint-out in Lamoille Canyon on Aug. 8.

Local artists interested in attending the club's outings or workshop should contact Sarman at 753-6330 or Jerry Cooney at 738-4304.

Shakespearean festival draws NNCC group

By Rae Edwards
Winnemucca
Center Director

Seven Winnemucca residents, one Elko resident, and two Orovada residents have enriched their lives this summer. For three nights and four days husbands, children, jobs, pets and all other obligations were put "on hold" by these brave pioneers.

Ten willing warriors wedged between suitcases, blankets, cameras, jackets and other "but I need that" bags, chatted their way to Ashland, Ore., in a UNR van for the Shakespearean Festival Celebration '82.

After a full day's travel, a humid, 100-degree Ashland, welcomed the group. To some this meant a brief respite face down in bed with the air conditioner blasting icy waves directly across the entire body. Others preferred their icy waves wet and jumped into the motel pool for laps and laps of womblike comfort.

Rejuvenated and back in the van, the tremendous ten headed for Main Street and the Shakespearean festivities. Two full days and three nights of Shakespeare and shopping followed.

Paddington Station, Tommy's quiches, Second Hand Rose, the traditional Mark Antony Hotel, Tin Pan Alley, Lithia Park, Geppetto's Rare Earth and dozens more shops and restaurants beckoned.

The Feast of Will, the bagpipes, the dancing and singing, the Renaissance Players, the Tudor Fair and the backstage tour were there to be embraced by this group.

And the plays...the marvelous costumes, stage designs and the acting are beyond description.

Never to be forgotten is the special magic of opening night at the world famous Elizabethian Stage. The audience, engaged in soft conversation and lulled by a warm breeze, came alive 'as one' when the flag was hoisted and the play began.

"Comedy of Errors," with its superb slapstick and ingenious use of the English language, brought on gales of laughter. This marvelous work choreographed exact mishappenings caused by everyone being in the wrong time.

A modern "Julius Ceasar" inspired not only the intellect but the heart as well. The machine guns and hysterical crowds were no longer tucked neatly away in television boxes. The threats were real and the military machinery confined the players and audience as well. Brutal murder became part of the "now." There was no button to push, no knob to turn and no turning backs on this stark reality.

Young love, sometimes silly and unpredictable, is forever all-consuming. "Romeo and Juliet" marvelously demonstrated the joys and tragedies of such a love misguided by misunderstandings and ending in unnecessary death.

Each play carried its own message, its own statement concerning the essence of mankind. The powerful impact felt by the audience was a result of the combination of superb literature, unshackled talent and precise professionalism.

The 10 tenderfeet were blessed with a deeper understanding of human beings through the works of William Shakespeare and the entire festival entourage. Well fed, exhausted and content, this wonderful group headed home: Verna Anderson, Adelaide Callahan, Rae Edwards, Karen Elam, Rikda Eriksen, Ginger Gabiola, Bonnie Hilton, Peggy Miller, Alice Morley and Lorraine Putnam.

Next year, Northern Nevada Community College, Winnemucca Center will again offer the 'Ashland Experience.' 'Let us not lack your company, as William Shakespeare said in "Antony and Cleopatra."

Instructors' artworks on exhibit

Artworks created by several of Northern Nevada Community College's art and craft instructors have been placed on exhibit in McMullen Hall during this week's college registration, according to art department head Sarah Campsey.

Students interested in signing up for art, photography, or craft classes may wish to examine the work of course instructors in order to get better acquainted with the various media used in each class, she noted.

The display is located in the hallway and library in McMullen Hall, and will remain up for approximately three weeks, according to Campsey.

Instructors with works on exhibit include:

Gene Meeks Paul, painting; Lowell Swendseid, pottery; Valerie Parks, watercolor; Chris Priaux, Jeff Mullins, Tony Salvatierra, photography; Margo Oberhansli and Carla Bravo, tile painting; Father Bruce Brame, calligraphy; Carole Modlin, sketching and charcoal; Kay Thompson, needlepoint; Marsha Davis, quilting; Conrad Koppenhafer, leathercraft; and Sarah Campsey, drawing, sculpture, and visual foundations.

Registration at the college began this morning and will continue until 9 tonight. Students can register from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. tomorrow and Friday.

NNCC instructors displaying their work at the college include, from left, Valerie Parks, watercolor instructor; Chris Priaux, photography; and art department head Sarah Campsey. Artworks by several other instructors may also be viewed in McMullen Hall during registration this week.

NNCC tells schedule for music series

Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction at Northern Nevada Community College, has announced the schedule for the fine arts series in music titled "Music for Autumn Afternoons".

The three programs on the schedule are sponsored by the NNCC community services department and the associated student body, and are held in the NNCC library.

The schedule follows:

* Flute Recital - Sunday, Oct. 4, 3 p.m. featuring Dr. Catherine Smith, flutist, and Andrea Lenz Maxie, pianist.

* Schubertiad Chamber Group - Saturday, Oct. 24, 3 p.m. featuring a soprano soloist and a duo-piano team.

* Musica Antiqua - Sunday, Nov. 29, 3 p.m. featuring Renaissance and Baroque chamber and dance music.

The programs are arranged by Jim Shaw.

Recital at NNCC set for Sunday

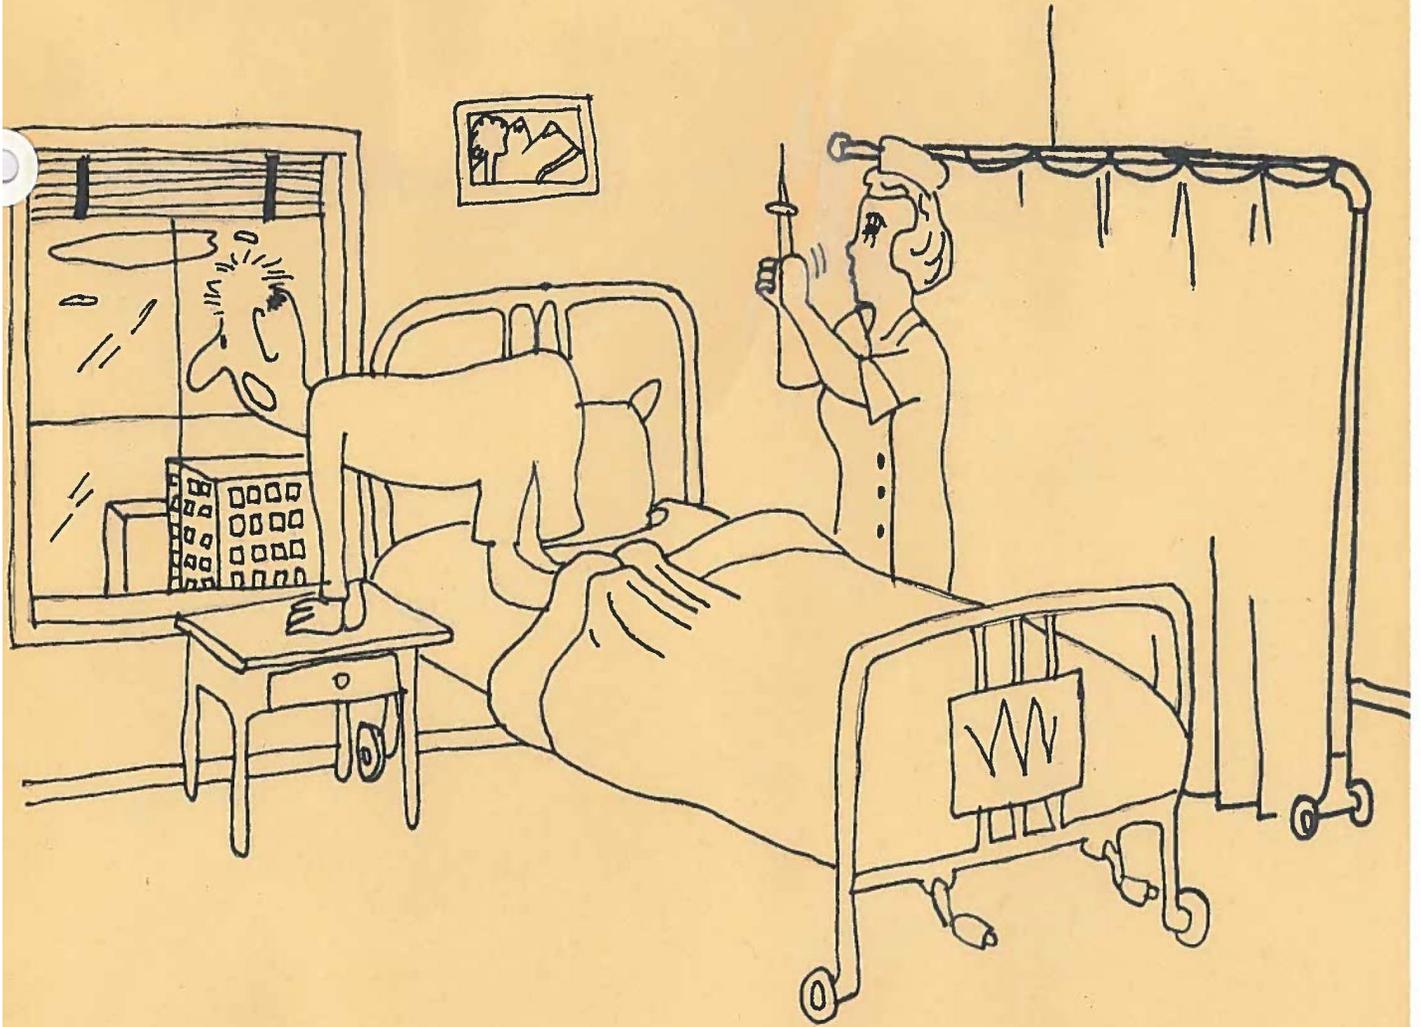

The Northern Nevada Community College will present the first in its series of music recitals at 3 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 17, at the college library, reports Jim Shaw, NNCC music instructor.

The program, free to the public, is sponsored through the NNCC community service program, and was coordinated by Shaw and Charles Greenhaw, dean of instruction.

University of Nevada-Reno faculty members will be featured in the program Sunday. Dr. Catherine Smith will play the flute; Andrea Lenz, the piano and oboe; and John Lenz, the cello and horn.

The music performed will be: Trio Sonata, by G.P. Telemann; Sonata 2 for Cello and Piano, by J. Brahms; Sonata for Flute and Piano, by F. Poulenc; and Trio for Flute, Horn, and Piano, by B. Martinu.

Nurses plan drawing for Christmas bazaar

The Registered Nursing Class of 1983 from the Northern Nevada Community College is planning a drawing to take place during the Nurses' Christmas Bazaar, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 4, at the Fairgrounds Exhibition Hall.

The bazaar, sponsored by the Nevada Nurses Association, will have booths with candy, baked goods, Christmas ornaments, and handcrafted items.

Three items have been donated for prizes, said Anne Rieger, who helped plan the drawing. A homemade quilt was donated by Hazel Arnold for first prize, and the Nevada Nurses Association donated a portable black and white television for second prize. Third prize is a homemade doll donated by Liz Squires, a registered nursing student.

Fox Foto Shop is displaying the quilt and the doll, and tickets, fifty cents each or three for $1, are being sold by nursing students. Tickets will also be available at the bazaar, Rieger said.

Money raised from ticket sales will be used for two trips for the nursing class. One trip, in March, is to visit Salt Lake City hospitals to "gain knowledge of specialized care facilities such as burn units and neonatal intensive care units," an NCC news release stated.

The second trip, planned for June, consists of two weeks of practical experience at the Nevada Mental Health Institute in Sparks to fulfill nursing program requirements.

Hospital honors David Emerson

By Kathy Jaynes

Dr. David Emerson, currently serving on the Elko General Hospital Board of Trustees, was honored at a luncheon recently in appreciation of his years of service as a board member.

Emerson plans to move out of the state and must therefore resign his position.

At the luncheon, he was presented with a commemorative wall plaque by Tony Primeaux, chairman of the hospital board, in recognition of the five years Emerson has served.

Stan Aiazzi was favored by the hospital board to finish Emerson's term which will expire in January of 1984 and will fill the position if appointed.

The Elko General Hospital Board of Trustees is made up of six persons, five of whom are elected by the voters of the county. The sixth is appointed from among Elko County Commissioners.

Each member serves for a period of four years, on a staggered basis so that there is continuity of leadership. Any one interested in serving as a hospital trustee or finding out more about the role and responsibilities of board members may contact Bill Welch, administrator, Elko General Hospital, 738-5151, 1297 College Avenue.

Annual nurses' bazaar scheduled

Handcrafted items, Christmas gifts, jewelry and baked goods will be offered for sale in the seventh annual Nurses Christmas Bazaar to be held Saturday, Dec. 4 at the exhibit building in the Elko County Fairgrounds.

Doors will open at 11 a.m. and the sale will conclude at 3 p.m., according to bazaar sponsor Mary Berg.

Nineteen groups have arranged to display items for sale, and a giant Christmas stocking filled with toys and games will be given away to the lucky child who fills out the winning entry blank at the bazaar.

Berg said the stocking is being offered through the sponsorship of several local merchants. Winners need not be present to win, she added.

Free blood pressure tests will be available at the nurses' bazaar.

Hot dogs, coffee, hot cider and cookies will be on sale throughout the day, and proceeds from the event will be used to help fund nursing students' trips to clinics in Salt Lake City and Sparks.

Groups planning to participate in the bazaar include Nevada Nurses' Association District No. 4, LPN students, RN students, Elko General Hospital Auxiliary, Searchers, Elko County Association for Retarded Citizens, Wool Growers, Elko Lions Club, Ruby Mountain Manor, Senior Citizens, Elko Chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons, Grandma's Attic, Pauline Asmus, Melinda Lattin, Beryl and Morgan Jenkins, Rita and Roxanne Micheli, Laurana Coleman, Karen Johnson, and Ken and Dorothy Noble.

NNCC nursing class increased to 15 students

The Nursing Advisory Committee of Northern Nevada Community College, Elko campus, has recommended that the Registered Nursing class be increased to 15 students beginning with the Fall, 1982 semester, according to Ruth Holland, coordinator of nursing education. In the past class size has been limited to 10 students.

Registered nursing at NNCC is a two-year associate degree program.

It is piggybacked on a one-year practical nursing certificate program. Class size will remain at 10 students for practical nursing.

Applications for either program are due by May 1 and should be forwarded to Ruth Holland, NNCC, 901 Elm Street, Elko, Nev. 89801.

Holland said that acceptance into the one-year certificate program does not automatically guarantee admission to two-year associate degree nursing.

Financial aid counseling is available at the Elko campus and by appointment at off-campus NNCC centers in Ely and Winnemucca. Some scholarships are available.

Students participate in workshop

The Nevada Students Association of Community Colleges held a leadership workshop at the S-S Ranch in Wadsworth, Oct. 7-10, said Pam Bottari, Northern Nevada Community College student body president.

Students attending the workshop from the Elko area were Brent Allen, Lisa Hanson, Manuel Tjoa, Marc Pupo, Steve Miller, Rachel Stevens, Ann Stevens, Marcus Pinkney, Sharon White, Ken Wiley, Steve Skrabo, and Pam Bottari. Advisor Sarah Campsey also attended, Bottari reported.

Bottari added that three of the new officers elected were from this area. Ken Wiley was voted president; Steve Skrabo, secretary; and Sarah Campsey, advisor for the northern end of the state.

Other new officers are Bobby Ellis, vice-president, and Diane Tangen, treasurer. Both students are from Truckee Meadows Community College.

All of the community colleges in Nevada were represented in the workshop, which Bottari said was attended by about 50 people.

Bottari said she "really enjoyed" the seminar given by Campsey, on creative problem solving. Other seminars covered communication skills, education and goals, objectives and priorities.

Local nurses host state convention

A fashion show contrasting the styles of yesterday with the styles of today was enjoyed by those attending the 50th annual convention of the Nevada Nurses Association held Oct. 8-10 in Elko, reported publicity chairman Roberta Gallegos.

The fashion show, she said, was coordinated by Mary Berg and included uniforms from 1906 through today. The association then presented its version of how the nurse of the future will look, complete with her "laser hypodermic".

The theme for the convention, which was held at the Stockmen's Motor Hotel, was "Golden Opportunities for Nursing Practice".

The convention was opened following a tour of Elko General Hospital, and the opening ceremonies included invocation by Marlu Gurr, flag ceremony by Boy Scouts from the Nevada Youth Training Center, and a welcoming address by Mayor George Corner.

Keynote address was given on Thursday by guest speaker Maria C. Phaneuf, M.A., R.N., F.A.A.N., F.A.P.N., professor emeritus at Wayne State University, who spoke on "The Golden Opportunity for Nursing: The Social Policy Statement."

Along with the business meetings, two forums were held entitled "Credentialing - For What" and, later, "For Nursing Practice - That's What."

A performance by the Arinak Dancers preceded the installation of officers and the awards presentation held Friday night.

Among Saturday's concluding events was an auction by Jake Reed, auctioneer. Local merchants donated items for the event and $800 was raised for the state convention fund. Mrs. Gallegos added.

She said the nurses have drawing held on Saturday. First prize, a solid gold necklace, was won by Joy Kanakas of Elko; second prize, authentic barite bookends, went to Jo Leyva of Elko; third prize, a gold jogging suit, went to Dr. William Berg of Elko; fourth prize, a stained glass picture, was won by Tippli Reid, Las Vegas.

Mrs. Gallegos said the convention was attended by approximately 90 members from throughout the state of Nevada and local arrangements were made by the convention committee: chairman Janet Ballantyne, registration chairman Peggy Miller, hospitality chairman Marilee Kuhl, ways and means chairman Sharon Meade, finance chairman Patti Crookham, and program chairman Ariene Lotspeich.

11/6/81 NNCC Jog-A-Thon Is Oct. 10

The bi-annual Northern Nevada Community College-sponsored Jog-a-thon will be held Saturday, Oct. 10, beginning at 10 a.m. in the city park area according to race director Bill Davies of the NNCC staff.

The race starts near the swimming pool in the park area, heads east to Festival Way, north to Cedar Street, west to 13th Street, north to Elm Street, west to Second Street, south to Court Street, east to 14th Street, north to College Avenue then east to the finish line near the Little League park.

The course covers a distance of three miles and prizes will be awarded in a variety of categories.

Awards go to:

Males and females in age categories 9 and under; 10-15; 16-19; 20-29; 30-39; 40-49; and 50 and over.

Special categories include: businessmen's trophy, three or more runners from the same firm with the lowest combined time; 200 pounds and over at the start of jogging; oldest runner; youngest runner, family award, three or more with lowest combined time; husband-wife with lowest combined time.

There will also be trophies given to the fastest male and fastest female runner in the race.

The entry fee is $4 per person or $7 per family and the entry deadline is Friday, Oct. 9. There will be a late entry fee of $6 per person.

Entry blanks are available at NNCC and the sports desk of the Free Press.

Entries should be mailed to Bill Davies, 901 Elm Street in Elko or taken to the office at NNCC.

Ag Olympics starts today at NNCC

Students will have a chance to test their agriculture knowledge and skills today at the Ag Olympics at Northern Nevada Community College.

Beginning at 4 p.m., 4-H Future Farmers of America youths will compete in livestock, plant, and agricultural mechanics areas, knowledge on their organizations, and skills in timed events. The skills event will include tire changing, hay stacking, and a construction skill, according to Louis Horton, agriculture instructor at NNCC and coordinator of the event.

At 7 tonight the public is invited to listen to three of Nevada's representatives who will be competing in national events at the Future Farmers of America National Convention November 12-14.

Speaking will be Lynn Smith, Nevada's national officer candidate; Shelly Garrett, state FFA sweetheart, who will compete in the American royal queen contest; and Kelly Horton, state public speaking winner, who will vie for the national title.

The event is hosted by the Aggie Club of NNCC and Smith's election committee.

Tom Poulsen wins NNCC Jog-a-thon

Tom Poulsen captured the bi-annual Northern Nevada Community College Jog-a-thon run Saturday in Elko, covering the three-mile course in a time of 16:23.

It was Poulsen's second consecutive win in the fall event of the two-race series conducted by the college. George Hernandez won last spring's race.

It was a day of records as seven category winners bested the previous marks for their divisions.

New records were set by: Patricia Hibbard in the girls' 10-15 group, 23:04, breaking the old mark of 25:00 set in 1979 by Dyann Rogers; Winsor McLean, boys' 16-19, 17:23, old mark 17:43 set in 1980 by Greg Molyneaux; Joanne Weible, women 20-29, 24:39, old mark 26:02 set in 1980 by Shirley Welch; Tony LaMorte, men's 40-49, 18:26, old mark 18:58 by LaMorte set in 1980; Roberta Morgan, women 50 and over, 25:42, old mark 26:43 set by Wilma Clark in 1981; Jeff Gardetto, 200 pounds and over, 20:08, old mark 20:57 by Gardetto in 1980; Bill and Shirley Welch, husband-wife, 43:36, old mark 45:57 set by them in 1980.

A total of 41 runners took part in the run, according to race officials, and category winners were:

Fastest male, Poulsen; fastest female, Hibbard; girls 9 and under, Christy Burner, 27:14; girls 10-15, Hibbard; boys 10-15, Jon Ames, 24:32; boys 16-19, McLean; men 20-29, Robert Bolton, 18:54; women 20-29, Weible; men 30-39, Poulsen; women 30-39, Eleanor Ray, 25:16; men 40-49, LaMorte; men 50 and over, John Lusar, 27:30; women 50 and over, Morgan; businessmen's trophy, Elko General Hospital team, 58:01; 200 pounds and over, Gardetto; family award, Stan Ray Family, 74:16; husband-wife, Bill and Shirley Welch; oldest runner, John Lusar; youngest runner, Mary LaMorte.

Quick Hibbard

Patty Hibbard brought home two first place trophies from the Northern Nevada Community College Jog-a-thon that was held on Oct. 10. She was the first woman to finish the 3-mile course, thereby capturing the trophy for her class and the fastest woman over-all. Patty is the 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Hibbard of East Ely. She began running competitively just this past year. Other local entrants were Louise Piccinini who placed second in her class and Barlow White who came in third in his class.

A so-called grudge match will be played at 2 p.m. Saturday between NNCC faculty and students. The game, which will be officiated by Elko County Sheriff Jim Miller and Elko attorney Bill Bilyeu, will be part of the college's 15th birthday celebration. Slow pitch softball tournament results

4-Sharons took first place in the fun slow pitch softball tournament held last weekend at the Cedar Street sports complex. The team went unbeaten in five games in the tournament, beating BLM in the championship game. The Bud Bunch finished third.

Other teams in the field were Elko Bottling, Spring Creek-Lamoille, Horseshoe Club, Albertson's, NNCC and Freeport Gold.

Following the tournament, a slow pitch association was formed to promote a recreational fun league.

Any person or team want to join the association should contact Jeff Steinmetz at 738-7469, Joe Hasset, 738-6423, or Gary D'Orazio, 738-8016. There will be no fees or dues assessed until costs are determined, but a spokesman said the association's objective is to keep the cost low to stress fun and recreation.

The association will play its games at the Cedar Street complex on Saturdays beginning at 5 p.m.

This week's games will match: 4-Sharons vs BLM; NNCC vs Bud Bunch; and Spring Creek-Lamoille vs Albertson's.

Slow pitch games are postponed to June 5

Due to the women's softball tournament tomorrow, this weekend's games in the Elko Slow Pitch Softball League have been postponed until Saturday, June 5 at 5 p.m. at the Cedar Street sports complex.

The lineup for June 5: Field A—4-Sharons vs Bud Bunch; Spring Creek-Lamoille vs Horseshoe Club; Field B—NNCC vs Albertson's; BLM vs Chucks.

Any team or individual wishing to join the league or play in the league should come to the field on June 5 or call Jeff Steinmetz, 738-7469, Joe Hasset, 738-6423 or Gary D'Orazio, 738-8016.

A league spokesman said

co-ed teams are being encouraged and said play will continue on Saturdays at 5 p.m. through August, when the second half will begin and continue through September. He said as additional teams join the league it will be split in A and B divisions depending upon the team's record and the ability to continue balanced competition in the league.

He said the league will be setting up city-wide tournaments with possible out of town competition from areas such as Reno, Boise, Salt Lake City and Twin Falls.

A Burley league has also inquired about setting up a tournament in Elko against local teams, the spokesman concluded.

NNCC Jog-a-thon scheduled June 5

The bi-annual Jog-a-thon, sponsored by Northern Nevada Community College, will be held Saturday, June 5, beginning at 10 a.m.

The event starts and finishes in the city park area, with runners heading east from the swimming pool to Festival Way, north to Cedar Street, west to 13th Street, north to Elm Street, west to 2nd Street, south to Court Street, east to 14th Street, north to College Avenue, then east to the finish line near the Little League Park.

There will be awards for the fastest male and female runner overall and the fastest male and female in the following age categories: 5 and under; 6-10; 11-15; 16-19; 20-29; 30-39; 40-49; 50 and over. In addition, there will be the businessman's trophy for three or more runners from the same business with the lowest combined time; 200 pounds and over at the start of jogging; oldest runner; youngest runner; family award, three or more, lowest combined time; husband-wife, lowest combined time.

This year there will be two special short races for younger runners. Boys and girls 5 and under may choose to run one time around the swimming pool block, rather than the entire three mile race; and boys and girls, 6-10, can run around the swimming pool block twice or run the full three mile course.

Ribbons and trophies will be presented and a variety of items will be given away to participants following the run. Refreshments will also be served.

The entry fee is $5 per person or $8 per family, three or more, with a late entry fee — after June 4 — of $6 per person and $9 per family.

Proceeds from the run go to the NNCC scholarship fund.

Entry blanks are available at NNCC and the Free Press sports desk.

Elko run to raise funds for college

Elko — The bi-annual N.N.C.C. Jog-A-Thon will be held June 5 and will start in the Elko City Park at 10 a.m.

This year, for the first time, two short races will be offered for the younger runners. Both boys and girls, age five and under, may elect to run one time around the swimming pool block rather than the three miles. Boys and girls six to ten may elect to run twice around the swimming pool block or run the regular three-mile course.

This is an excellent chance to get young people interested in running without having to cover a long distance.

Awards will be given for the fastest male and female runners and the fastest male and female in the following age categories: Girls and boys five and under, girls and boys 16-19, women and men 20-29, women and men 30-39, women and men 40-49 and women and men 50 and over.

In addition to the regular age groups, special categories will be presented.

Ribbons and trophies will be awarded as well as drawings for various items to participants. Refreshments will be served. Money earned from the Jog-A-Thon goes to the N.N.C.C. Scholarship Fund. Entry blanks may be picked up at N.N.C.C. or at the Elko Free Press sports desk.
